An agreement by an insolvent, made after the filing of a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against him and in contemplation of the filing of a voluntary petition, that his attorney should take certain goods in payment for his services, where there was no actual delivery or change of possession until after the adjudication upon the voluntary petition, does not constitute a transfer of the property, within the meaning of this section, and the goods, having been removed after such adjudication and while they were in custodia legis, must be restored to the trustee.<sup>28</sup> The payment of attorney's fees for services previously rendered and to be rendered does not constitute a preference, even as to the services to be rendered, if the amount is reasonable;<sup>29</sup> but a mortgage given after the commencement of proceedings, to secure payment for the services of the mort-

§ 985. Jurisdiction over exempt property.

Subdivision 11 of section 2 of the act expressly confers upon courts of bankruptcy jurisdiction to "determine all claims of bankrupts to their exemptions," and this jurisdiction is exclusive, as to questions concerning the right of the bankrupt to his exemptions.<sup>1</sup> Until the exemptions are claimed and specific property set off, the court has full power to consider and dispose of whatever is involved. It may deny the bankrupt his exemptions where he has waived or forfeited them, or for any reason they cannot be rightfully claimed.<sup>2</sup> Jurisdiction is, however, limited to setting aside the property claimed as exempt, and after hearing any question raised as to the right of exemption to either refuse or affirm the exemption, and have it turned over to the bankrupt, leaving it to the state courts to work out and enforce conflicting claims with regard to it. The distinction would seem to be that while the bankruptcy court has no jurisdiction over the property claimed as exempt once the right to it has been established, it may, preliminary to that, determine whether for any reason the right cannot be asserted.<sup>3</sup>

So the action of the trustee in allotting property as exempt may be excepted to, and the propriety of his action is open to final determination by the bankruptcy courts; but after the property is set apart as exempt neither the trustee nor the bankruptcy court has any jurisdiction over it.<sup>4</sup>

If creditors claim a right to exempt property under a waiver, or if, as to them, it is not exempt for other reasons from their debts, they must resort to a state court to enforce payment of their debts from such property.<sup>5</sup>

The extent of the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy courts, in determining claims of creditors against the exempt property, where there is a waiver, is discussed elsewhere.<sup>6</sup>

The bankruptcy court will not undertake to enforce debts or liens which are claimed to be good against the homestead or exemption,<sup>7</sup> though its jurisdiction has been held to extend to a case where it is sought to correct an error in the description of bankrupt's homestead, as a result of which it was sold in bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>8</sup>

Where the exemption claimed is in money in the hands of the trustee, the bankruptcy court will hold and protect the fund until proper proceedings can be instituted and the money sequestered by a court of competent jurisdiction, for the benefit of the parties in interest.<sup>9</sup>

The bankruptcy court is without jurisdiction to set apart a homestead exemption in lands situated in another state,<sup>10</sup> or to order a personal property exemption to any one but bankrupt.<sup>11</sup>

The informality of objecting to the claim of exemption prior to the appointment of a trustee, will not prevent the adjudication of the question where it appears that there are no assets and hence no reason for the appointment of the trustee.<sup>12</sup>

Property which is only partially exempt may be administered.<sup>13</sup>

§ 986. Title to exempt property.

The title to property of the bankrupt exempt by the law of his domicile at the date of the filing of the petition,<sup>14</sup> does not pass to the trustee,<sup>15</sup> regardless of whether the property is separable and segregated from other property, or is commingled and undivided or indivisible from such other property,<sup>16</sup> but remains in the bankrupt, who has the same rights as others before a state tribunal, where his exempt property has been wrongfully seized on execution.<sup>17</sup>

While the title to exempt property does not vest in the trustee and such property cannot be administered by him for the benefit of creditors, yet it can pass to the trustee as a part of the estate, to be segregated, identified, appraised and set apart to the bankrupt. The property is not automatically exempted, but must first be set aside to the bankrupt after a hearing.<sup>18</sup> The trustee is entitled to possession until he has ascertained that the property is exempt,<sup>19</sup> but beyond setting it aside, he has no connection with it.<sup>20</sup> The bankrupt may convey, mortgage, or make such disposition of it as he sees fit; he may maintain and defend suits with reference thereto,<sup>21</sup> dispose of or rent it,<sup>22</sup> and upon his death, it descends to his heirs.<sup>23</sup> After it has been designated and set apart by the trustee, it has passed out of the possession and control of the bankruptcy court, and neither it nor the trustee has any further interest in it,<sup>24</sup> and the court of bankruptcy will not, on the petition of a chattel mortgagee of such property, order the bankrupt to restore such property to the trustee to be sold by him for such mortgagee's benefit.<sup>25</sup> As the trustee has title to the assets of the bankrupt estate only in a representative capacity, he cannot transfer title to the bankrupt by setting aside to him property which the statute does not make exempt, as such an act would be void and he would be held accountable;<sup>26</sup> nor make an allowance from the general fund for articles sold under distress for rent, which would have been exempt.<sup>27</sup>

There is, however, a class of property which is closely akin to exempt property to which the trustee takes title for the benefit of creditors. Such is the reversionary interest in land allotted to bankrupt as a homestead after the termination of the exempt estate or interest.<sup>28</sup> So the trustee has a claim for the excess upon a piece of bankrupt's real estate which exceeds in value the exemption allowed by law, and to that extent the bankrupt's title to such real estate is qualified.<sup>29</sup>

§ 987. Right determined as of date of petition.

The right to the exemption must exist at the date of the institution of proceedings in the bankruptcy court.<sup>30</sup> Hence, no right to exemptions can be created by the marriage of the bankrupt subsequent to the filing of the petition, though prior to the qualification of the trustee.<sup>31</sup> Where a debtor receives his exemptions and shortly thereafter bankruptcy proceedings are instituted, he cannot claim further exemptions.<sup>32</sup>

Analogous provisions of Act of 1867. Section 14. . . . That there shall be excepted from the operation of the provisions of this section the necessary household and kitchen furniture, and such other articles and necessities of such bankrupt as the said assignee shall designate and set apart, having reference in the amount to the family, condition and circumstances of the bankrupt, but altogether not to exceed in value, in any case, the sum of five hundred dollars; and also the wearing apparel of such bankrupt,

As this act does not affect the allowance to bankrupts of the exemptions which are prescribed by the state laws, the exemption laws of all the states and territories are set forth at length under Title IV.

other section thereof when not clearly in conflict.<sup>34</sup> The laws of the state in which bankrupt has had his domicile for six months or the greater portion thereof immediately preceding the filing of his petition, fix the nature and extent of the exemptions as well as of the right to them<sup>35</sup> but the time and manner of claiming, awarding, selecting and setting apart such exemptions is governed by the bankruptcy law.<sup>36</sup>

It has been held, that the question whether the bankrupt was a resident of a state and hence entitled to exemptions under its laws must be determined as of the date when the exemption is claimed.<sup>37</sup>

The rule that the time within which exemptions are to be claimed and the manner of claiming the same are controlled by the bankruptcy act applies equally where the claim to exemption is made by bankrupt's wife.<sup>38</sup>

The bankruptcy law adopts the exemptions allowed by the state statutes, and the federal court, in allowing exemptions thereunder, is governed by the interpretation of the highest court of the state,<sup>39</sup> so far as such statutes have been construed, and beyond that will apply to them the general established rules of construction.<sup>40</sup>

The construction placed upon a statute by the highest court of the state becomes a part of the statute, and no court can add to exemptions by a mere change of its decisions, since the effect would be to impair the obligation of existing contracts.<sup>41</sup>

Where the decisions of the state court are in conflict and point to no definite rule respecting the construction of the state statute, the federal court may place its own construction upon the statute, but if there is a rule which is reasonably clear the federal court must follow it rather than to undertake to determine upon its own interpretation whether the state court may not change the rule in the future.<sup>42</sup>

§ 989. Statutes liberally construed.

The state exemption laws as well as the provisions of the bankruptcy act should be liberally construed in favor of the bankrupt.<sup>43</sup> It should not be forgotten, however, that courts have not power to legislate, and can no more add an exemption not fairly within the statute than they can take from the statute.<sup>44</sup>

§ 990. Constitutionality and effect of exemption laws.

Upon the enactment of the federal bankruptcy law, all state statutes on the subject so far as they were in conflict, except exemption laws, were superseded, or suspended.<sup>45</sup> With the power to pass a uniform bankruptcy law is linked authority to define what and how much of a debtor's property shall be exempt,<sup>46</sup> and in the exercise of this power congress may even pass exemption laws impairing the obligation of contracts.<sup>47</sup>

But laws exempting reasonable portions of the debtor's property relate to the remedy, and are, therefore, not liable to a constitutional objection.<sup>48</sup> So long, therefore, as the trustee takes in each state whatever would have been available to the creditors if the bankrupt law had not been passed, the system is uniform in the constitutional sense.<sup>49</sup>

In enacting a uniform bankruptcy law, congress may properly provide that the exemptions given by the several state statutes shall be allowed to the bankrupt, and this is true without respect to the validity or invalidity of the state law,<sup>50</sup> that question being left for the highest court of the state to determine,<sup>51</sup> though the bankruptcy court may look to the state constitution, and if the exemption statute is unconstitutional, it will refuse to allow the exemption.<sup>52</sup> When the state exemption laws are adopted as a part of a federal bankruptcy system, they must be taken as they are found upon the statute books of the states, as interpreted by the highest courts of such states;<sup>53</sup> but the incorporation of these statutes into the bankruptcy law will not make valid provisions in them which, under the state constitutions are invalid.<sup>54</sup> The adoption of the different statutes of exemptions is not in contravention of the constitutional requirement that the law must be "uniform," since that provision contemplates only uniformity of administration,<sup>55</sup> and upon this ground of supposed lack of uniformity the act of 1867 was frequently unsuccessfully attacked.<sup>56</sup> This word "uniform" is only a limitation upon the power of congress in enacting bankruptcy legislation,<sup>57</sup> and means uniformity among the states, and, so far as the distribution of the assets are concerned, the law is uniform.<sup>58</sup>

§ 991. Bankrupt should claim exemptions.

§ 992. — In general.

The bankrupt should file in triplicate, with the schedule of his property, a claim for such exemptions as he may be entitled to, one copy to be for the clerk, one for the referee, and one for the trustee;<sup>59</sup> and if he does not, there appears no reason why the title thereto would not vest in the trustee.<sup>60</sup>

Though the only suggestion that the bankrupt must specify the articles he wishes to claim as exempt is found in the caption of the official form of schedule B (5), and though the law expressly makes it the duty of the trustee to select and set apart the exemptions,<sup>61</sup> it would nevertheless seem to follow that a claim to exemptions must be specific and not general, and that the same must be itemized, especially where the state law so requires.<sup>62</sup> An objection to an order of sale does not amount to a claim for specific property.<sup>63</sup>

rupt does not, however, lose his right to an exemption by making a claim under the wrong section of the state statutes,<sup>65</sup> or by making a claim in the alternative.<sup>66</sup>

The claim of an exemption need not be made prior to the adjudication<sup>67</sup> and several courts have even held that the bankrupt may assert his exemption at any time before the sale of the property by the trustee.<sup>68</sup> An extension of time allowed to the bankrupt within which to file his schedules, operates as an extension of time within which to claim his exemptions.<sup>69</sup>

The bankrupt may select exempt property in conformance to the state statute,<sup>70</sup> and it is then the duty of the court to see that it is secured to him,<sup>71</sup> but a severance of exempted articles or property from the rest of his estate is not to be made by the debtor.<sup>72</sup>

The exemptions are personal to the debtor, not for the benefit of creditors, and can only be demanded and selected by him.<sup>73</sup>

§ 993. — Amendment of schedules.

The fact that bankrupt fails to make claim in his schedules will not necessarily bar him from making a subsequent claim therefor in an amended schedule, provided that rights have not intervened or injury will not be worked by the allowance,<sup>74</sup>

and that the amendment is for his benefit and not solely for the benefit of creditors.<sup>75</sup> Where it appears that the claim for exemptions was fraudulently omitted from the schedules they cannot be amended for the purpose of claiming them.<sup>76</sup> The application for amendment must be made within a reasonable time after discovering the facts which will justify the amendment,<sup>77</sup> and before the discharge,<sup>78</sup> or before the property has been disposed of by sale or otherwise.<sup>79</sup>

§ 994. Setting apart and appraisement.

Goods claimed as exempt should be set aside by the receiver where property is directed to be sold before the appointment of a trustee.<sup>80</sup>

After the bankrupt in his schedule has selected his exemptions, the trustee, if appointed, must set them aside and in this he has no discretion, the law being mandatory.<sup>81</sup> It is solely his duty, and any agreement on his part or the creditor's that they shall be allotted in any other manner than that prescribed by the bankruptcy law, or through other agencies than that of the trustee of the bankrupt, is a nullity.<sup>82</sup> Where appraisers set apart or value the exemptions pursuant to an agreement to that effect, exceptions to such allotments may be filed by bankrupt or any creditor within 20 days after the same has been made and filed with the clerk or referee, when such allotment will be set aside. Where, however, the assets are in excess of the exemptions, the property must be appraised by three appraisers

when their inventory may aid the trustee in making his allotment, but he is in no wise concluded by it nor has he any right to adopt it as his own,<sup>83</sup> even where another method is prescribed by the state law.<sup>84</sup>

The bankrupt law allows to debtors the exemptions provided by the state statutes, but the manner in which they are to be claimed, set apart and awarded is regulated by the bankruptcy law.<sup>85</sup> Where exempt property is not readily divisible from the mass of the estate without the necessary inquiry to determine the fact of segregation and the specific property which is really exempt, the court may regulate the time and manner in which the exemption shall be claimed and set apart to the ultimate use and benefit of the bankrupt.<sup>86</sup>

The court cannot refuse to set aside the bankrupt's exemption because under the state law it cannot be claimed against a certain class of creditors one of whom opposes the allowance in the bankruptcy court,<sup>87</sup> though it has recently been held that property held by the trustee in bankruptcy, which in case of an execution levy, could not be selected as exempt, is not subject to such selection in bankruptcy proceedings, and that any act of the trustee in allowing the selection of such property is void.<sup>88</sup>

With the single exception of setting aside the exemptions, the trustee bears no relation thereto, and he must promptly deliver possession thereof to the bankrupt.<sup>89</sup> He cannot impose conditions upon his allowance nor demand indemnity from the bankrupt before surrendering the exemptions;<sup>90</sup> nor divest himself of any part of the estate except for full consideration when the exemptions are not properly claimed, nor will the action of a state court adjudging property to be exempt, confer any authority on the trustee to transfer the title to such property.<sup>91</sup>

As to what constitutes the setting aside of the exemption, it seems clear that some affirmative act to that end is required of the trustee. A mere report by him that the bankrupt has claimed his exemptions will not amount to a setting aside,<sup>92</sup> but there must be a specification of the items with an appraisal of the property set apart.<sup>93</sup>

While it is the duty of the trustee to set apart the bankrupt's exemption, his action is not final, but the court of bankruptcy is expressly empowered to determine all claims to exemptions.<sup>94</sup> It has been held that where exemptions had been set apart or denied by a state court and bankruptcy proceedings were shortly thereafter instituted that the order of the state court cannot be reviewed or set aside by the bankruptcy court,<sup>95</sup> but this seems questionable.

Within 20 days after receiving notice of his appointment, the trustee must make report to the court of the articles set off to the bankrupt with the estimated value of each article, unless they do not come into his possession and his right to them is contested, in which case the time should be computed from the final decision thereon;<sup>96</sup> and exceptions to the determinations of the trustee may be taken within 20 days after the filing of the report by any creditor.<sup>97</sup>

Where the twentieth day falls on Sunday, the time is extended to include the following Monday.<sup>98</sup> The bankrupt himself may petition the court in relation to his claim to exemptions at any time while the property is still unadministered.<sup>99</sup>

A creditor, desiring to object to the trustee's report setting apart the bankrupt's exemptions, should file all of his objections within the time fixed by law, and cannot come in after the ### § 995. Property exempt in general.

The word "exemptions" as used in the bankruptcy act is not limited to real estate and chattels. It includes all classes of property and would cover a trust-income,<sup>5</sup> and property of any kind which is covered by the local statutes,<sup>6</sup> though it would not cover allowances which are clearly a part of a state insolvency law, the operation of which is suspended by the bankruptcy act.<sup>7</sup>

§ 996. Exemptions granted by federal laws.

The bankrupt is entitled to exemptions granted by federal as well as state laws.<sup>8</sup>

A party cannot be a resident of one state within the meaning of the federal homestead law, and a resident of another state within the meaning of the exemption laws of that state.<sup>9</sup>

the law he is the head of a family or is a person having care or support of a dependent female. This, however, is a question that is generally well settled by the state courts construing the various exemption statutes, and reference should be had to them.<sup>10</sup>

The head of the family is, ordinarily, one who controls, supervises, and manages a house, and has living with him and is supporting, some person whom it is either his moral or legal duty to support, and is not necessarily the father,<sup>11</sup> but mere contribution to the support of a sister who did not reside with him does not entitle the bankrupt to exemptions.<sup>12</sup> A husband living apart from his wife by mutual consent is not entitled to an exemption as the head of a family.<sup>13</sup> A married woman living with her husband, who is a wage-earner, is not the head of a family and, under the laws of some states, is therefore not entitled to

Owing to peculiar provisions of a state law, an unmarried man who had a household under his supervision, with

In Ohio, a divorced woman who has the care of her own minor children, is entitled to an exemption in real estate in lieu of a homestead.<sup>15</sup> In Georgia, an unmarried female having the care and support of an aged and infirm female is entitled to a homestead exemption though not the head of a family.<sup>16</sup>

§ 998. Burial lots.

A statute exempting lots used for burial purposes does not authorize a debtor to hold any number of lots for speculative purposes, but under such statute only such lots will be held exempt which are intended for the personal use of the debtor.<sup>17</sup>

§ 999. Growing crops.

An essential feature of the exemption of property is that it shall be permanently exempt in the hands of the debtor, and a statute which merely postpones a creditor's right to levy on a growing crop until after its maturity does not make such crop exempt or prevent its passing to the trustee.<sup>18</sup>

In the absence of an express provision of law the general rule is that growing crops do not constitute a part of the homestead, but are a part of the assets of the estate;<sup>19</sup> this, however, is a matter governed entirely by the state law.<sup>20</sup> In Minnesota, the proceeds derived from a sale of crops raised on the homestead are not exempt.<sup>21</sup>

therefore if the latter makes provision for an exempt homestead, it will be allowed by the bankruptcy courts, otherwise not,<sup>22</sup> but in order to obtain the same the debtor must comply with the provisions of the state law under which he makes claim.<sup>23</sup>

The age, infirmities and necessities of the bankrupt should not be considered in determining his right of a homestead exemption.<sup>24</sup> The chief essential to the debtor's right to a homestead is, as a rule, actual selection of the property and its occupancy as such,<sup>25</sup> at the time he makes claim,<sup>26</sup> a mere present intention to make it his homestead being usually held insufficient,<sup>27</sup> as will any selection or occupancy that is not bona fide.<sup>28</sup>

The right to a homestead cannot exist in property in which the debtor has not a present legal right of possession or occupancy. So where his interest is only that of a remainderman or reversioner, no right of homestead cannot exist in his favor,<sup>29</sup> though the premises are occupied jointly by himself and wife who is the tenant for life.<sup>30</sup>

It has been held, however, that, in a state where a husband entitled to curtesy becomes vested with a life estate in his wife's property, he is entitled to a homestead exemption out of the estate he holds in the property occupied by him and his family as a homestead, without regard to the value of the fee where his interest is less.<sup>31</sup> It has been held further that after the death of the father and mother, the homestead character of property continues with the children.<sup>32</sup>

Personal property may be set aside as homestead,<sup>33</sup> but in the absence of a statutory provision to that effect, there can be no homestead exemption in unimproved property;<sup>34</sup> nor where one reserves a room in a building in which he stored some articles, while he boarded at a restaurant and lodged elsewhere;<sup>35</sup> nor where the premises are permanently rented and not occupied by the owner.<sup>36</sup>

Where it appears that the bankrupt used the property as much for homestead as for business purposes, and not incidentally only as a homestead, it should be considered as his homestead.<sup>37</sup> The homestead right attaches to property, when occupied as a home, held under a contract for the purchase or lease thereof.<sup>38</sup>

The purchase of a homestead with non-exempt funds on the eve of bankruptcy is not a fraud upon creditors and will not work a forfeiture of the right to the homestead exemption.<sup>39</sup> Nor is the homestead right affected by the fact that an incumbrance thereon was paid off within four months prior to bankruptcy with non-exempt funds,<sup>40</sup> nor by the fact that it was purchased with the proceeds of another homestead shortly before bankruptcy, where such transaction was in good faith.<sup>41</sup> It is held, that the bankrupt may perfect his homestead exemption even after the trustee in bankruptcy qualifies, provided in his schedules he claims a designated piece of realty as a homestead, and proceeds, under the state law, without delay.<sup>42</sup>

In some states the extent of the homestead is determined by the fact whether the property claimed as such is situated in a city, town or village. This question does not necessarily depend on the fact of incorporation. The land may be within the corporate limits of a town without losing its character as a rural homestead, or it may be located in a town or village, and thus have the character of an urban homestead, although the town or village is not incorporated.<sup>43</sup>

Where the property claimed by the bankrupt as a homestead appears to be worth more than the homestead exemption, the same may be appraised and assigned as a homestead on payment of the excess over the exemption;<sup>44</sup> or, if the bankrupt makes no application to retain it and pay such excess and it is indivisible, the referee may order a sale,<sup>45</sup> and the validity of such sale does not depend on the filing of the proceedings with the clerk of the bankruptcy court; and the bankrupt, not having objected to such order of sale, cannot thereafter attack its validity nor object to the deduction of the value of other assets from his share of the proceeds, which, though not exempt, he received without objection from the trustee.<sup>46</sup>

§ 1002. — Abandonment.

Homestead rights may be lost by abandonment, but mere physical absence without the intent to abandon will not generally destroy the right,<sup>47</sup> nor the use of part of the premises for another purpose, or the renting of part.<sup>48</sup> A temporary removal, even for a long time, or the renting of the property will not suffice to work an abandonment, if the animus revertendi remains,<sup>49</sup> and this is true, although bankrupt, by his attorney's direction, closed and locked his business homestead on filing his petition, intending, however, to resume business, the building

In Texas, the owner of a lot in a town or city occupied by him as a homestead may abandon a part thereof by devoting it to a purpose inconsistent with its use as a part of a homestead.<sup>52</sup>

§ 1003. — In property mortgaged or transferred.

Questions frequently arise as to the right of the bankrupt to have a homestead exemption where he has transferred or mortgaged the property out of which he would be entitled. Under the act of 1867 the rule was that where a conveyance fraudulent as to creditors was set aside by a bankrupt court, at the instance of the assignee, the parties were restored to the status occupied prior to such conveyance, and a homestead exemption was allowed,<sup>53</sup> and a similar doctrine under the present law was announced under the laws of Tennessee, where a bankrupt husband fraudulently conveyed property to his wife,<sup>54</sup> though, if the wife joined in the fraudulent conveyance, it would not be so.<sup>55</sup>

The fact that the homestead is mortgaged to certain creditors does not make it an asset to be administered in bankruptcy,<sup>56</sup> and, it has been held that a bankrupt who mortgaged the only real estate he possessed, might nevertheless claim a homestead exemption out of it,<sup>57</sup> though he would not be entitled thereto out of lands subject to purchase money mortgage,<sup>58</sup> although without such mortgage, a discharge may be pleaded in bar in an action for the purchase money.<sup>59</sup> So, the cestui que trust under

§ 1004. — Wife's right.

Where a husband abandoned his wife, and she obtained a divorce, she has a right to have the premises set apart to her as a homestead, especially when she holds and has held the title in her own right, and continuous actual occupancy is not necessary;<sup>61</sup> and it has been held that she is entitled to a homestead out of lands fraudulently conveyed to her by her husband, a bankrupt, although the conveyance was made to hinder creditors.<sup>62</sup> In Virginia a married woman who holds the title to the property, although living with her husband, is entitled to claim the exemption, as against her own creditors, where she had been trading as a feme sole. She is the head of a family, either alone or jointly with her husband, for homestead purposes.<sup>63</sup> The bankrupt's wife having a separate estate cannot affect his right to a homestead, unless he occupies her property instead of his own.<sup>64</sup>

§ 1005. — Re-allotment.

Where the homestead set apart in a state court some years prior to the bankruptcy has enhanced in value beyond the amounts prescribed by the statute, bankrupt should only be allowed the statutory value,<sup>65</sup> although it was held under the act of 1867 that where there was no irregularity a re-assessment would not be ordered for mere excess of value.<sup>66</sup> The latter view, however, would probably only hold good in case of recent allotments.<sup>67</sup>

§ 1006. Indian allotments.

The various treaties with the Indian tribes setting apart portions of the public domain for their use, as a rule contain restrictions either prohibitive or only after a long period of years, upon the alienation of lands allotted in severalty or otherwise. The bankruptcy law recognizes all exemptions whether state or federal, and also vests the trustee with title only of such property which, prior to the filing of the petition, bankrupt could by any means have transferred, or which might have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against him. Accordingly, since neither of these provisions applies to allotments to Indians, such lands as here indicated would not form a part of the assets of an Indian adjudicated bankrupt.<sup>68</sup>

§ 1007. Insurance policies.

Insurance policies exempt under the local laws must be regarded as exempt under the bankruptcy act, and do not pass to the trustee.<sup>69</sup> Where the state law provides that the proceeds of certain insurance policies shall inure to the wife it is not necessary that a claim thereto be made personally by the wife to prevent the trustee obtaining title to the policy.<sup>70</sup>

§ 1010. — Individual exemptions out of firm property.

Upon this question the authorities are irreconcilable. The most logical conclusion, however, and that which is supported by the weight of authority, is that the individual members of a firm are not entitled to have any portion of the firm property set apart as exempt, though the other members consent, unless there should remain a surplus of such property after the payment of all firm debts;<sup>72</sup> this conclusion being based upon the theory that the partnership assets are a trust fund for the payment of firm creditors, the interest of the partners being an interest in the surplus only.

The authorities taking the opposite view generally agree, however, that to entitle the individual partner to an allowance out of firm assets he must show that he has no personal property exemption independent of the firm property,<sup>73</sup> and the other partners must consent thereto and the claim must be seasonably and properly asserted, the signing of the petition by all the partners being prima facie evidence of such consent.<sup>74</sup>

Where partners purchased lots, taking the title in the firm name, and erected buildings thereon with the understanding that each should own in severalty the lot on which he built, it was held that the interest of each was sufficient to entitle him to a homestead.<sup>75</sup> And where one partner buys out the other members of his firm, he has been held to be entitled to have his exemption set apart, since the firm has been dissolved and he is in the same position as if no firm had ever existed,<sup>76</sup> but where the partners while insolvent agree to dissolve exemptions should not be allowed.<sup>77</sup>

A former partner who has retired from the firm will not be allowed a personal property exemption out of the assets of the firm.<sup>78</sup>

All money due or to become due to any person as pension is exempt from attachment, levy or seizure, and is to inure wholly to his benefit,<sup>87</sup> and will be set apart to him in bankruptcy proceedings, provided it is in his hands at the time of filing the petition as it was received, and not loaned, invested or changed in its nature so as to become intermingled with other property interests, thus rendering the pension funds incapable of identification.<sup>88</sup> While such money need not be turned over to the trustee, it should be scheduled by the bankrupt as money on hand with the statement of the exemption.<sup>89</sup>

§ 1012. Personal property.

Since the exemption laws are peculiar to the various states and in their interpretation the federal courts consider themselves controlled by the decisions of the highest state courts, recourse must necessarily be had to such decisions interpreting the state statutes as to what personal property is exempt.

§ 1013. Waiver of exemptions.

Prior to the decision of the supreme court in Lockwood v. Exchange Bank,<sup>1</sup> there was much diversity of opinion with reference to the power of the court of bankruptcy in cases where there was a waiver of the exemptions either generally as to all creditors or specially as to a particular creditor. Most courts took the position that since the title to exempt property does not pass to or vest in the trustee, the federal court has absolutely no control or jurisdiction over the same other than to set it apart leaving the person holding such waiver to resort to the state court to enforce this right, if any he has.<sup>2</sup> This is the view adopted by the supreme court and has been followed universally.<sup>3</sup> The objection that if the property has once been set apart as exempt, before the party holding such waiver can enforce his claim, the bankrupt will have received his discharge and the same may be pleaded in bar to an action thereon, is overcome by the holding that the discharge may be postponed a reasonable time to enable a creditor holding a waiver of exemptions to assert his rights in a state court.<sup>4</sup> In deciding whether a discharge should be withheld the district court cannot finally pass on the validity of the waiver of exemptions, but should merely decide whether a prima facie waiver exists.<sup>5</sup> The petition of a creditor holding a waiver to be allowed to prosecute his claim in the state courts will be disallowed where the bankrupt's exemptions have not yet been set apart.<sup>6</sup>

The right to have property set apart as exempt is a personal privilege, which a bankrupt may claim or waive,<sup>7</sup> and which cannot be assigned.<sup>8</sup> An assignment of the right to exemptions is a waiver thereof,<sup>9</sup> as is a failure to file exceptions to an order of the referee denying the right to exemptions.<sup>10</sup> In Georgia, the bankrupt has a choice between constitutional and statutory exemption, but he cannot have both. The selection of the one exemption is a waiver of his right to the other.<sup>11</sup>

A waiver of the right to the homestead in the property scheduled by the bankrupt does not defeat the right of his or her spouse to have the homestead set apart to her or him.<sup>12</sup>

A judgment creditor of the bankrupt who holds a waiver by him of his exemptions, may levy upon and sell the exempt property at any time before his final discharge.<sup>13</sup> The waiver of the homestead exemption in a mortgage is, however, in favor of the mortgage creditor alone, and does not inure to the benefit of others. If in other respects the mortgage is valid, the exemption as against the mortgage creditor is restricted to the equity of redemption, and the rights of other creditors are subordinate to both the mortgage lien and the payment of the bankrupt's exemption allowance.<sup>14</sup> While a creditor holding a note or an obligation containing a waiver of exemption does not have a specific lien on the exempt property it does create an incumbrance upon it.<sup>15</sup> Thus, in passing upon a note under the act of 1867, containing a waiver of exemption, Chief Justice Waite said<sup>16</sup> that the owner of a homestead has the absolute control over it and may deal with it in such manner as he sees fit, and has the right to sell or incumber it as suits his convenience, and adds: "If he sells or incumbers before he selects, his power of selection as against such sale or incumbrance is gone. No particular form of incumbrance is specified; that is left to the discretion of the legislature. Now, a waiver of the right to sell is, in effect, an incumbrance on the property which may be selected." Hence, while there is no lien on the property designated, it comes into the bankruptcy court incumbered by a waiver of the right of the bankrupt to claim the property as exempt.

Accordingly, it is held that where a bankrupt claims his exemption in property surrendered and debts are proved as to which the benefit of the exemption has been waived, it is the duty of the trustee to sell the property claimed as a homestead, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to pay the debts proved as to which the benefit of the exemption has been waived, since the claim of such creditor must be paid out of the fund as to which he can alone resort. The residue of the exempt property, if any, or the proceeds of the sale thereof, should then be allowed the bankrupt under his claim.<sup>17</sup>

§ 1015. Denial of right of exemption.

§ 1016. — Assignment for creditors.

Upon the filing of a petition in bankruptcy within four months of a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, the latter is void and the trustee in bankruptcy takes the property as though such assignment had never been made and may, by proper proceedings, recover the same if not voluntarily surrendered to him. While the making of such an assignment is not actually fraudulent but only fraudulent in law, and, since the exemption laws are given for the protection of the family and not the benefit of the individual and are to be liberally construed,<sup>20</sup> the assignor in such assignment is entitled to his exemptions out of the assigned property in case of subsequent bankruptcy proceedings,<sup>21</sup> or out of the proceeds if the same has been sold.<sup>22</sup>

§ 1017. — Concealment and fraudulent transfer of property.

The authorities are not in harmony upon the right of a bankrupt to exemptions where he has failed to account for all his assets, or has fraudulently transferred or concealed his property, many courts holding that exemptions should be allowed since a remedy is afforded by which they may be recovered,<sup>23</sup>

The concealment must be established by clear and unequivocal evidence,<sup>26</sup> but the evidence need not make out a case of fraudulent concealment in every detail as indicated and defined by the statute.<sup>27</sup>

§ 1018. — Engaging in illegal business.

A debtor engaged in the illegal sale of liquor is not entitled to exemptions in some states.<sup>31</sup>

§ 1019. — Failure to give security.

The bankrupt has been held not entitled to exemptions in property for which he agreed but failed to give security, since no title passed.<sup>32</sup>

§ 1020. — Fraud.

While exemptions cannot ordinarily be claimed in property obtained by fraud,<sup>33</sup> it is only where the fraud inheres in the very transaction itself by its intended effect preventing the collection of the debt that the fraudulent debtor can claim no right to exemption. The mere fact that the debtor was dealing under an assumed name will not work a forfeiture of his right to exemptions.<sup>34</sup> In some states, no exemption can be claimed in property obtained shortly before bankruptcy by means of a false or erroneous report to a mercantile agency,<sup>35</sup> while in others it is held that the making of false statements in writing to his creditors to obtain credit will not deprive the bankrupt of his right to his homestead exemption.<sup>36</sup>

The trustee, as well as the creditors, may except to the allowance of the exemption on the ground of fraud.<sup>37</sup>

The bankruptcy court is, however, bound by the state laws as construed by the highest courts of the state, and it seems to be generally held that the bankrupt is entitled to exemptions in property though the same was purchased with non-exempt property in contemplation of bankruptcy.<sup>39</sup>

§ 1022. — Purchase money borrowed from wife.

That the goods claimed as exempt were paid for out of moneys borrowed from the wife, is no bar to the exemption.<sup>40</sup>

§ 1023. — Purchase of property with embezzled funds.

The good faith required by the Georgia statute to entitle a debtor to a homestead exemption is merely the making of a full and fair disclosure of his personal property, and his exemptions will not be denied him by the bankruptcy court on the ground that the property was purchased with the money of the county of which he was treasurer.<sup>41</sup>

§ 1024. — Purchase price not paid.

By statute in many states it is specifically provided that property or the proceeds thereof when sold, cannot be set apart as exempt where the purchase price has not been paid.<sup>42</sup> Even

In Arkansas there is no exemption against a judgment or other process for the purchase price while the property remains in the vendee's possession, the possession of which the trustee holds (Fellheimer v. Durham, 3 N. B. N. R. 30).

In Washington: In re Phillips, 209 Fed. 490, 31 A. B. R. 597. A bankrupt's claim for exemptions out of a stock of merchandise, some of which had been paid for in full, and all of which had been paid for in part, was allowed, notwithstanding the provision of the statute in the absence of a statute to hold to the contrary would be unconscionable and operate as a great hardship.

Some courts, however, hold that the fact that the bankrupt obtained property with an intention not to pay for the same cannot defeat his right to exemptions therein, on the theory that any right to rescind the purchase is personal to the vendor and cannot be asserted by other creditors or the trustee.<sup>43</sup>

So, it is held, that the objection that the purchase price has not been paid cannot be urged in the bankruptcy court, but must be urged in the state court.<sup>44</sup>

§ 1025. — As against claims for wages.

In some states the right of exemption can be asserted against a claim for salary or wages.<sup>45</sup>

Compensation earned by a trustee is not salary or wages within the meaning of such statute.<sup>46</sup>

§ 1026. Deductions.

§ 1027. — In general.

The amount of the proceeds from sales used by the bankrupt since the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings may be deducted from his allotment,<sup>47</sup> and, under the laws of some states, property shown to have been in the bankrupt's possession at the time of the filing of the petition and not disclosed in his inventory nor surrendered to the trustee may be deducted from his exemptions.<sup>48</sup> In such case an established discrepancy of a large amount, together with proven concealment of some of his assets establish a prima facie case for the trustee entitling him, that no property should be exempt against a claim for the purchase price. (In re Petrini, 1 N. B. N. 264.)

In Virginia it was held that where the goods surrendered by a bankrupt were honestly acquired in the regular course of business, he is entitled to a homestead exemption in same, although they were paid for out of the proceeds of goods not paid for. in the absence of explanation by the bankrupt, to charge the bankrupt's exemptions.<sup>49</sup>

§ 1028. — Costs and expenses of proceedings.

Property set aside to a bankrupt under his claim to exemption forms no part of the bankrupt estate and the expenses and commissions of the referee or trustee, or counsel fees to the attorneys of the bankrupt or the trustee cannot be allowed from the proceeds thereof,<sup>50</sup> when exempt property is sold. It is held, however, that the exemptions allowed by the law do not excuse the payment from them of the fees of the bankruptcy court, so as to permit the suit to proceed on an affidavit of inability to advance the costs, as required.<sup>51</sup>

The bankrupt's right to his exemption out of the proceeds of exempt property cannot be subjected to the costs and expenses of the sale<sup>52</sup> even though the property is of a perishable nature.<sup>53</sup> Rent for the time the trustee is compelled to occupy premises after adjudication, has been held a proper charge against the estate which must be paid before bankrupt's exemption can be set apart.<sup>54</sup>

§ 1029. Liens on exempt property.

§ 1030. — How created.

Homestead waiver notes held by creditors of a bankrupt do not of themselves constitute liens on the property surrendered by him,<sup>55</sup> though they are in the nature of an incumbrance. A state law giving the vendor of property otherwise exempt, the right to subject it to the payment of his debt due for the purchase money, gives no lien thereon.<sup>56</sup>

§ 1031. — Acquisition within four months.

Liens acquired against exempt property by means of legal proceedings within four months of the filing of the petition are rendered void under section 67f of the act.<sup>57</sup> Any other interpretation of the act would defeat its purpose which is to discharge the bankrupt from its liabilities and start him afresh with property set apart to him as exempt.<sup>58</sup>

Section 67f, however, applies only to liens obtained by legal proceedings within four months and does not defeat rights in exempt property acquired by contract or by waiver of the exemption. These may be enforced or foreclosed by judgments obtained even after the petition in bankruptcy was filed.<sup>59</sup>

A lien acquired before the bankrupt files his homestead declaration but within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy will not be enforced.<sup>60</sup>

§ 1032. — Acquisition after bankruptcy.

A judgment obtained after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy but before the granting of the discharge may become a lien upon property which was exempt at the time of the filing of the petition but which was not exempt at the time of the creation of the debt, the homestead exemption having in the interim been enlarged by statute.<sup>61</sup>

Execution sales of the homestead of the bankrupt, upon judgments docketed after bankruptcy based upon claims for material sold to the bankrupt for the repair of the homestead, will be stayed where it appears that under the state law no lien attaches against the homestead until the filing of an acknowledgment or the docketing of a judgment.<sup>62</sup>

§ 1033. — On exempt and non-exempt property.

A mortgage constituting an unlawful preference, where it includes both exempt and non-exempt property, is only voidable as to the non-exempt property.<sup>63</sup> If property has value in excess of the amount of the statutory exemption, the lien will hold upon the excess.<sup>64</sup>

Where it is conceded that part and possibly all of certain attached property is exempt, the property may be held under an attachment until it has been determined in the bankruptcy proceedings what part, if any, of the attached property is non-exempt and passes to the trustee,<sup>65</sup> and where a mortgage is partly on exempt property and the entire property is sold, the trustee should hold the amount of the exemption to await the outcome of a suit in a state court to determine the right to exemption as between the bankrupt and the mortgagee.<sup>66</sup>

§ 1034. — Lien not waived by proof of claim.

A creditor may assert whatever peculiar right he may have against the homestead exemption notwithstanding he has proven his claim as unsecured,<sup>67</sup> and the fact that a creditor, after the adjudication in bankruptcy, abandoned attachment proceedings instituted by him within four months prior thereto and filed his claim as a general creditor does not constitute a waiver of his right to attach, or estop him from subsequently attaching, property which has been set aside by the bankruptcy court as exempt.<sup>68</sup>

§ 1035. — Remedies of lien-holders.

Setting aside the property as exempt does not affect the rights of one holding a lien thereon, nor does it prevent a creditor whose claim is not avoided by the discharge, from proceeding against the property in the hands of the bankrupt.<sup>69</sup> The trustee, in allotting exemptions, is not obliged to designate articles free from liens,<sup>70</sup> while such action, when taken, in no wise impairs the right of lien holders whose liens were valid against the property before it was set apart.<sup>71</sup> They need not come into the bankruptcy court for relief, but may proceed without regard to the bankruptcy proceedings, and in case they hold waivers of exemptions, the discharge may be withheld a reasonable time to enable them to proceed in the state court.<sup>72</sup> A creditor may enforce a lien superior to the exemption under the state law if such lien be fastened on the exempt property prior to the final discharge in bankruptcy, but if a debtor succeeds in obtaining his discharge and pleads it prior to the fastening of a specific lien on his exempt property, the effect is to release the debtor from the payment of the debt and the creditor's right of action is destroyed.<sup>73</sup>

The court of bankruptcy has no power to partition property, on a portion of which there is valid mortgage executed by the bankrupt and his wife, so as to set off a homestead free from liens, or otherwise impair the security, or discharge any part of the property until the debt is paid or to substitute other security for the mortgage.<sup>74</sup>

A creditor with an enforceable lien or claim against exempt property can collect only the deficiency from the general assets,<sup>75</sup> and a creditor having a mortgage on the bankrupt's homestead may be required to exhaust that remedy before he can enforce his other remedies against the bankrupt's estate.<sup>76</sup>

Where the homestead premises have been mortgaged and exceed in value the homestead exemption, the bankrupt is entitled to have the property not exempt first subjected to the mortgage debt,<sup>77</sup> or, if all the property is required to be sold, he is entitled out of the proceeds over and above the mortgage, the amount of his exemption, free from the claims of other creditors.<sup>78</sup>

In Pennsylvania, an execution attachment will not lie to reach personal chattels in the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy, which are claimed by the bankrupt as his exemption.<sup>79</sup>

§ 1036. Sales of exempt property.

The supreme court, in Lockwood v. Exchange Bank,<sup>80</sup> expressly holds that a court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction over exempt property except to set it apart, from which it would seem to follow that the court is without jurisdiction to order a sale of the bankrupt's exempt property,<sup>81</sup> and, since consent cannot confer jurisdiction not authorized by law, it would seem that the consent of the bankrupt or his creditors is immaterial.<sup>82</sup> It follows that the court will not, upon the petition of a creditor claiming a lien upon exempt property, order the bankrupt to restore the same after it has been delivered to him by the trustee, in order that it may be sold for the benefit of creditors.<sup>83</sup> The trustee in bankruptcy has no equity in the homestead exemption that can be made the subject of a sale by him, nor can the homestead be sold by the bankruptcy court subject only to the life estate of the bankrupt.<sup>84</sup>

It is held in numerous cases, however, that it is not improper to permit the bankrupt to claim the proceeds of the sale of exempt property if such property has been sold by order of the court before the time for filing schedules has expired,<sup>85</sup> unless the exemption has been waived,<sup>86</sup> and, it is held that if he fails to select his exemptions, before the estate is sold, he loses his right thereto.<sup>87</sup>

A creditor is not prevented from pursuing his remedy in the state courts, and a sale by order of a state court, or under the terms of a mortgage or pledge, is not invalid. A mortgagee may enforce his lien in a state court against property that has been set aside as exempt in the bankruptcy court,<sup>88</sup> and a vendor's lien against land may be enforced by sale.<sup>89</sup>

In some states it is held that exemptions claimed out of personal property, must be claimed in specie and not out of the proceeds of the sale,<sup>90</sup> but it is held that such rule will not prevent the bankrupt from claiming his exemption out of the proceeds of perishable property under order of the court.<sup>91</sup> Where, after an exemption is set apart from a stock of goods which has been inventoried and a part of the stock is sold, the bankrupt is not entitled to the whole of his exemption out of the proceeds of the sale, but merely that portion of the proceeds which the amount of his exemption bears to the inventory value.<sup>92</sup> A creditor acquiescing in a sale is estopped to deny the right of the bankrupt to have exemptions allowed out of the proceeds.<sup>93</sup> It frequently happens that the bankrupt is entitled to a homestead exemption of a specified amount and the property

Where the goods are sold and the proceeds are in the hands of an officer of the court, the court may determine conflicting claims to the fund,<sup>2</sup> but the distribution of the money will be regulated by the state laws.<sup>3</sup> Where exempt property is sold by consent of the bankrupt, it is held that the costs and expenses of the bankruptcy proceedings may be paid out of the proceeds of the sale, in preference to the claim of one holding an equitable lien upon the property.<sup>4</sup> The bankrupt as well as the assignee of his exemption have the right to contest any claim on the

A sale of the homestead for an amount less than the amount to which the bankrupt is entitled in lieu of the homestead will not be effective.<sup>7</sup>

§ 1037. Fraudulent transfers of exempt property.

Exempt property cannot be the subject of a fraudulent transfer.<sup>8</sup> A debtor may convey existing exemptions as well as exempt property to be acquired in the future.<sup>9</sup>

§ 1038. Taxes on exempt property.

By section 64 of the law the trustee is required to pay from the general assets "all taxes legally due and owing by the bankrupt," even though they are assessed against property which is set off to the bankrupt as exempt, or are a lien upon and enforceable against such property. This is true, although the effect of such payment is to exhaust the fund which would otherwise be distributed among the general creditors.<sup>10</sup> While such an interpretation of the law may work an injustice to the creditors the doctrine is doubtless founded upon that liberality of construction of exemption laws which is necessary for the protection of the family in the vicissitudes of financial distress.

§ 1039. Jurisdiction over applications to stay proceedings.

§ 1040. — In general.

Application for injunction to stay proceedings in a state court should be made to the court of bankruptcy,<sup>1</sup> which may hear and decide the question, though it may refer such application, or any specified issue arising thereon, to the referee to ascertain and report the facts.<sup>2</sup> The jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court to determine, for the purpose of such application, whether the claim on which the proceedings in the state court are founded is one from which a discharge would be a release, is exclusive and its determination conclusive until revised,<sup>3</sup> and its power to enjoin proceedings in a state court on a dischargeable debt is plenary but its exercise is discretionary. An injunction will usually issue (1) if the bankrupt is threatened with arrest or needless annoyance, (2) if the suit is not yet in judgment, and (3) even after judgment if (a) the rights of general creditors, not parties to such proceedings, will be jeopardized, or (b) the judgment is based on an act of bankruptcy or a fraud on creditors or the law; but in the absence of (a) and (b) it should never issue after execution sale provided the state court has or can be given jurisdiction of all the interested parties.<sup>4</sup> Thus it will restrain a third person from selling or encumbering property of the bankrupt;<sup>5</sup> or restrain action against the trustee, if the continuance of the action will embarrass the administration of the estate.<sup>6</sup> The jurisdiction to issue an injunction in certain cases exists notwithstanding the fact that a discharge has been granted.<sup>7</sup> The court of bankruptcy has no authority to withdraw from the state court suits pending therein between the bankrupt and other parties and compel their trial in the district court.<sup>8</sup>

An application by the bankrupt for relief from a fine for civil contempt imposed by a state court subsequent to the adjudication should be made to the state court.<sup>9</sup>

§ 1041. — Jurisdiction of referees.

Wherever the court has jurisdiction the referee also has jurisdiction, except where the case is referred to him for a special purpose, or it is a question arising out of applications of a bankrupt for composition or discharge even though it be a case where the premises affected are in another county of the same federal judicial district. While this is true, applications for an injunction to stay proceedings of a court or officer must be heard and decided by the judge unless he refers the application or any specified issue arising thereon to the referee to ascertain and report the facts, in which case the referee also has like power with the court to stay suits in the state courts.<sup>10</sup>

It is held that when it is sought to stay a suit pending in a state court, it is the duty of the referee, when the matter is before him and he has jurisdiction, to inquire into the nature of the cause of action and determine whether the plaintiff in the state court is proceeding upon a claim which he asserts bona fide is not dischargeable; but, if the referee comes to the conclusion that such claim is not merely colorable, but is bona fide, he has no jurisdiction of the merits of the suit, but must remand the parties to the state court, and permit that court to pass upon the merits of the contention as to whether it is barred by the discharge in bankruptcy.<sup>11</sup>

§ 1042. Stay compulsory—Voluntary and involuntary proceedings.

It should be observed that the first three subdivisions of section 11 of the act deal with suits pending when the petition is filed, that subdivision "a" makes the stay of all suits founded on dischargeable claims and pending when the petition is filed compulsory until an adjudication is made or the petition is dismissed; and leaves the further stay only to the court to determine, and also that though the phrase is "petition against him," voluntary proceedings are included.<sup>12</sup>

A creditor may, however, bring an action against the bankrupt upon a provable claim after his adjudication, no application for a discharge having been made. As said in a recent case, "If a suit antedate the adjudication, section 63a(5) allows it to be prosecuted to judgment; and reasons may readily exist to make even a post-dated suit desirable, e. g., to avoid the possible bar of the statute of limitations, or to liquidate the claim, or to fix a secondary liability on another person."<sup>13</sup>

§ 1043. Bankruptcy proceedings are in rem.

The estate is regarded as in custodia legis from the filing of the petition, and the bankruptcy court will not thereafter permit any interference with its possession even though it be by an officer of a state court acting under its process.<sup>14</sup> The assertion of any right against or to participate in the res so in custodia legis must be sought in the court in whose custody it is. An attempt to assert such right elsewhere would be a contempt. All persons interested in the res are regarded as parties to the bankruptcy proceedings, including not only the bankrupt and trustee but all the creditors, including lienors. Hence the district court has full jurisdiction over the liens and mortgages upon the bankrupt's property and may inquire into their validity and extent and grant the same relief as could the state courts but for the bankruptcy, without regard to the consent of the lienor.<sup>15</sup> Property in its possession cannot be interfered with by a sheriff under a writ of replevin issued out of a state court, and such proceeding will be stayed;<sup>16</sup> nor can a suit be maintained in a state court by one claiming to be owner to determine title and enjoin the officers of the bankruptcy court from proceeding;<sup>17</sup> nor to restrain a trustee from paying out to creditors a fund in his hands, pending the determination of a suit to establish a lien on such fund; but application must be made to the court of bankruptcy;<sup>18</sup> nor to prevent a trustee from collecting a note payable to the bankrupt;<sup>19</sup> nor will a state court interfere by injunction with a party applying for the benefit of the bankruptcy law;<sup>20</sup> nor by an injunction restraining the collection of taxes, prevent a federal court proceeding to judgment in an action of which it has jurisdiction, nor from enforcing its judgment by mandamus to compel the levy and collecting of taxes to pay it.<sup>21</sup>

In order to preserve the property and protect the rights of all the creditors, a court of bankruptcy in which the bankruptcy proceedings are pending has the unquestionable jurisdiction and power to enjoin any disposition thereof which would be in violation of the spirit, intent and purpose of the act<sup>22</sup> and may fine and imprison any of said creditors for attempting to interfere without leave through proceedings in the state court.<sup>23</sup>

§ 1044. State courts not to administer bankrupt's estate.

The jurisdiction of a state court does not extend to the administration of a bankrupt's estate,<sup>24</sup> so that an attempt on its part to collect and distribute the assets of an insolvent is in contravention of the bankruptcy law, although the law under which the state court proceeds does not provide for or purport to discharge the debtor from his liabilities.<sup>25</sup> When the right of the state court is to be questioned, it can only be done by the intervention of the trustee.<sup>26</sup>

In order that the state court may have proper notice of the bankruptcy proceedings, the bankrupt, who is defendant in such court, should file there a proper pleading setting up such proceedings.<sup>27</sup> After it is shown that the defendant has been adjudged a bankrupt, the court is bound to take judicial notice that all his property is vested in the trustee, and in the case of proceeds of mortgaged property in its possession, not brought there by final process to enforce the mortgage lien, such proceeds must be paid to such trustee and the mortgagee remitted to the bankruptcy court to assert his lien.<sup>28</sup>

§ 1045. Nature and effect of stay.

A restraining order, under section 11, granted ex parte, with permission therein to move to vacate at any time, is in the nature of an order to show cause, and the party restrained thereby becomes a party to the proceeding in bankruptcy, even before adjudication, for the purpose of moving to vacate the order;<sup>29</sup> but not to make a motion to declare a preference in his favor in the proceeds of property attached by him in the state court, if he has not filed his claim in the bankruptcy court.<sup>30</sup> Such an order is in its nature temporary only, and should ordinarily be vacated as a matter of course on application of the creditor, after the bankrupt has been discharged.<sup>31</sup>

A stay of a suit pending in a state court is not a dismissal of the suit. It does not defeat the cause of action but merely suspends the proceedings in the state court so long as the injunction remains in force. If, therefore, in the further proceedings in the bankruptcy court, the petition in bankruptcy is dismissed, or if the injunction is dissolved, or if, in the end, the bankruptcy court should determine that the basis of the suit in the state court is a claim against which the discharge in bankruptcy is not a release, then the case pending in the state court may proceed as if it had not been interrupted. If, however, a bankruptcy court holds that the claim is discharged, then the bankrupt may go into the state court and plead his discharge as against the recovery.<sup>32</sup>

§ 1046. Adjudication not per se a stay or injunction.

The bankruptcy court may grant a stay of suits pending against a bankrupt, but in the absence of a restraining order, the ### § 1047. Class of suits stayed.

§ 1048. — In general.

Any suit interfering with the control of the court of bankruptcy over the bankrupt or his property, or with the due and complete administration of his estate, pursuant to the provisions of the bankrupt law will be stayed.<sup>34</sup>

The granting of a stay after adjudication is always discretionary, but this will not be exercised unless the suit to be stayed is founded upon a claim from which a discharge would be a release.<sup>35</sup>

Section 11a makes a distinction between suits upon claims from which a discharge would be a release and those from which it would not. The logic of this provision is plain. To prosecute to judgment a suit pending against a person at the time

Rule that where the question as to whether a discharge would operate as a release, a stay may be granted in the discretion of the court, applied to action in which it was alleged that the bankrupt intending to get property from plaintiffs with which to pay certain relatives, and intending to go into bankruptcy, when he ought to have known he was insolvent, offered to purchase goods and pay for them, but which did not allege that plaintiff made any inquiries as to defendant's financial condition, or that the latter made any misrepresentations. In re Nuttall, 201 Fed. 557, 29 A. the petition is filed is useless, if it is based upon a claim from which a discharge would be a release, unless necessary to settle disputed questions, establish the plaintiff's right, or, under the direction of the court of bankruptcy, liquidate a provable claim,<sup>36</sup> as under any circumstance each creditor would share equally with the others in the distribution of the estate and his rights would be fully preserved by proving his claim against the estate. If, however, the bankrupt is not discharged, the suit may then be prosecuted to judgment.

The power to stay suits in the state court is given only for the benefit of the bankrupt estate and if the estate has no interest in the suit or action, no stay should be granted.<sup>37</sup>

The character of the action in the state court is to be determined by the pleadings.<sup>38</sup> A stay is not, however, confined to technical debts or fixed liabilities,<sup>39</sup> consequently on a motion for a stay for the purpose of determining if a debt is dischargeable a claim sounding in tort on which a verdict assessing the damages has been rendered, but which is not yet in judgment, will be considered so far liquidated as to come within "judgments in actions."<sup>40</sup>

The bankruptcy court is without jurisdiction to stay a proceeding in rem where the state court has acquired jurisdiction of the res prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition,<sup>41</sup> and where an action is commenced long prior to bankruptcy proceedings, the bankruptcy court has not jurisdiction to enjoin such action or to order the property turned over to the trustee in bankruptcy.<sup>42</sup>

The court of bankruptcy cannot enjoin the bankrupt's co-licensee in a liquor license from applying for a renewal, nor require him to join in transferring it to a prospective purchaser, though such license, as far as bankrupt's interest is concerned, passes to the trustee;<sup>43</sup> nor can it enjoin attaching creditors, and a state court receiver appointed at their instance, because they do not become amenable to its jurisdiction by the filing of a petition against the debtor, though they are therein charged with having received an unlawful preference, unless they are made parties and served with process or voluntarily appear;<sup>44</sup> nor, where a creditor undertaking to reach assets, held in an alleged fiduciary capacity, by trustee process in a state court, enters into a stipulation to discontinue such suit which if carried out will avoid the necessity of any injunction, since such questions relate to the discharge and not to the assets or the trustee's right thereto, which is what the court seeks to protect;<sup>45</sup> nor proceedings on appeal taken by the bankrupt before bankruptcy.<sup>46</sup>

A suit by a creditor seeking to enforce his rights under a note containing a waiver of exemptions will not be stayed.<sup>47</sup>

Upon a petition for an injunction to restrain the enforcement of an execution from a state court, the court of bankruptcy is not bound by the finding of the state court that the debt is one not released by the discharge.<sup>48</sup>

§ 1049. — Alimony.

As has been said, the claim on which the judgment is founded must be one which is released by a discharge, to authorize the court of bankruptcy to stay further proceedings. Since Congress has by its amendment of February 5, 1903, specifically excepted alimony from the effects of a discharge, the court of bankruptcy will not stay proceedings to enforce payment of the same.

§ 1049½. — Suits to administer assignments.

A suit in a state court for the administration of an estate under a general assignment for the benefit of creditors should be stayed by the court of bankruptcy when an adjudication has been made within four months of such assignment, notwithstanding the state court had prior to the filing of the petition secured possession of the corpus of the estate;<sup>49</sup> and service of a copy of the injunction issued by the court of bankruptcy against the assignee is unnecessary, in order to put him in contempt for a violation thereof.<sup>50</sup> A protest by creditors, made in a state court, against further proceedings under a general assignment executed by the debtor before their petition in bankruptcy, does not have the effect of a writ of injunction from the federal court.<sup>51</sup>

§ 1050. — Attachment suits.

An attachment issued by a state court more than four months before the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy will not be dismissed;<sup>52</sup> but, if issued within that period, it will be dissolved, though judgment has been entered, sale made and proceeds paid to attaching creditor.<sup>53</sup> A suit commenced by attachment within four months of bankruptcy in which the bankrupt gave a bond for the release of the attachment will be stayed prior to adjudication,<sup>54</sup> though after adjudication the suit may be prosecuted to a special judgment for the purpose of fulfilling the conditions of an attachment bond, and so perfecting the creditor's right against the surety on the bond.<sup>55</sup> If a levy be made upon the bankrupt's property upon an attachment granted within four months of the filing of the petition, the sheriff is not required to assume the responsibility of releasing

Though the state law provides that exemptions cannot be claimed against a judgment in tort, a suit in the state court alleged to be for damages for fraud and embezzlement while acting as a fiduciary may be stayed until a determination by the bankruptcy court of the right to a discharge, where the defendant claims the debt to be founded upon contract only in which case his exempt property would not be subject to levy in satisfaction of any judgment obtained by the plaintiff.<sup>67</sup> are closed; but, if the cause of action pending in the state court is not dischargeable in bankruptcy or for some other reason the pending suit does not violate the spirit, intent and purpose of the act, it should not be enjoined. Therefore, since subject to certain stated exceptions prior liens upon the bankrupt's assets are not divested by bankruptcy proceedings, only the residue going to the trustee, a judgment creditor's bill seeking to subject specific assets to the payment of the judgment, filed more than four months before the bankruptcy proceedings, should not be stayed, but the trustee may intervene for the protection of the estate.<sup>69</sup> However, it is held that a creditor's bill brought against the bankrupt in a district other than that in which the bankruptcy proceedings are pending will be dismissed upon the fact of the pendency of such proceedings being brought to the court's attention.<sup>70</sup>

§ 1056. — Ejectment.

Where a receiver or trustee appointed by the bankruptcy court has taken possession of a building containing bankrupt's stock in trade or property, he cannot be ousted by proceedings in ejectment brought by the landlord in the state court, but such proceeding will be enjoined especially where it appears that the enforcement of judgment therein would seriously interfere with the administration of the estate and cause loss to creditors. In such case the landlord must seek his remedy in the bankruptcy court which, in the exercise of its equitable powers, while giving the fullest recognition to the landlord's legal right, will regulate the time and manner of its exercise so as to cause no unnecessary loss to others<sup>71</sup> and will direct the receiver to surrender the premises at the expiration of such time as may be reasonably necessary for the execution of his trust (unless it is the purpose to assume the lease as an asset), awarding the landlord suitable compensation for such occupation.<sup>72</sup>

§ 1057. — Proceedings on judgments.

A court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction over a judgment creditor of the bankrupt for the purpose of enjoining him from proceeding in a state court for the enforcement of his judgment against property of the debtor, where the judgment was rendered null or inoperative by the adjudication of the debtor as a bankrupt within four months after its rendition, because all creditors are parties to the proceedings in bankruptcy, and also because the court has power to restrain any person from illegally possessing himself of assets of the estate.<sup>73</sup> The jurisdiction of the court in such case is not affected by the fact that the debt upon which it is based is not a provable claim and will not be affected by the discharge of the bankrupt.<sup>74</sup> Where the proceedings are against the bankrupt and another, it will enjoin them as to the bankrupt but not as to the other judgment debtor;<sup>75</sup> or will enjoin an action to revive a judgment so that it will operate as a lien on real estate;<sup>76</sup> or an action to enforce a lien when the trustee has appeared therein and the stay of execution is asked that parties may apply to the federal court.<sup>77</sup> The bankruptcy court will also restrain a threatened levy by a sheriff to satisfy a judgment against the trustee.<sup>78</sup>

Where a state court has acquired jurisdiction by levy of an execution on a judgment prior to the filing of the petition, a court of bankruptcy will not enjoin the sale of property under the execution upon petition of the bankrupt.<sup>79</sup> Neither will it enjoin the enforcement of judgment and execution against the surety on a bail bond taken in a state court suit pending at the date of the adjudication in bankruptcy.<sup>80</sup>

If the judgment was recovered more than four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the creditor may be permitted to enforce his judgment by execution against real property of the bankrupt or an interest therein on which it is a legal lien.<sup>81</sup> In case the suit is stayed the trustee will be subrogated to the rights of such plaintiffs and may continue it for the benefit of all the creditors.<sup>82</sup>

Proceedings upon a judgment against the bankrupt for personal injuries inflicted by a dog owned by his tenant will be stayed, since the judgment is a dischargeable debt.<sup>83</sup>

After the bankrupt's discharge, execution on a judgment upon a debt within the operation of the discharge, will be perpetually stayed,<sup>84</sup> and the enforcement of a judgment against the non-exempt portion of the bankrupt's salary becoming due after his adjudication will be enjoined until the question is determined whether he shall receive a discharge, in which case, however, an order will be made directing the bankrupt's employer to withhold such non-exempt portion of the salary until that question is determined.<sup>85</sup>

§ 1058. — Proceedings to enforce liens.

A court of bankruptcy has power to stay proceedings in the state court seeking to take away from its trustee either the property itself or to impose a lien upon it,<sup>89</sup> and may stay proceedings to enforce valid liens against the bankrupt's property until the trustee can look into the matter and decide if any benefit can be secured from the encumbered property for the estate; and may stay such proceedings permanently as far as any personal judgment against the bankrupt is concerned.<sup>90</sup>

A suit brought to enforce a lien, the creation of which is charged to have been an act of bankruptcy, may be stayed where the property is still in the possession of the bankrupt<sup>91</sup> and lien holders may be enjoined from prosecuting the foreclosure of their liens in a suit brought in a state court before the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, but within four months thereof, though it is not claimed that the liens are fraudulent or preferential, or invalid for any other reason.<sup>92</sup>

A bankruptcy court, notwithstanding bankrupt has received his discharge, will enjoin an officer of a state court and all others from selling bankrupt's property under a decree procured by fraud, and direct its sale by the trustee in bankruptcy free of all liens, transferring to the proceeds of the sale all valid liens on the property.<sup>93</sup>

Creditors holding an assignment of wages may be enjoined from collecting wages due at the time of the filing of the petition, or becoming due thereafter.<sup>94</sup>

The bankruptcy court will so regulate the time and manner of enforcement of valid liens, as not to cause unnecessary loss to others.<sup>95</sup> Since the stay is purely discretionary with the bankruptcy court, unless it appears that a larger sum would be realized from a sale by the trustee in bankruptcy than under authority of the state court, and the general creditors would be the beneficiaries of this increased price, the proceedings in the state court to foreclose a mortgage or enforce a valid lien should not ordinarily be stayed,<sup>96</sup> but the trustee should be permitted to intervene or otherwise keep himself informed so as to protect the interest of the estate should a surplus be unexpectedly realized.<sup>97</sup> The same is true where the trustee claims that the amounts claimed by the mortgagees are subject to credits and set-offs;<sup>98</sup> nor will proceedings be stayed where the holder of a chattel mortgage took possession of the mortgaged property long prior to the filing of the petition and brought suit to foreclose such mortgage in a state court, that being the only court in which he could bring it;<sup>99</sup> but they will be stayed if such suit is commenced after the filing of the petition and the validity of the mortgage lien or some part of it is involved in the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>1</sup> A suit to foreclose a valid lien commenced more than four months prior to bankruptcy,<sup>2</sup> or commenced within four months to enforce a lien created before that period,<sup>3</sup> will not be stayed, and the filing of a petition by the defendant in a state court proceeding to foreclose a lien on realty created more than four months before the filing of the petition, does not

§ 1059. — Mechanics' liens.

It is abundantly established by the courts of last resort, federal and state, that when the jurisdiction of a state court to enforce the liens of a mechanic or materialman has attached, that jurisdiction will not be divested by proceedings in bankruptcy instituted subsequently thereto.<sup>10</sup> After the adjudication in bankruptcy, proceedings may be taken to enforce the liens<sup>11</sup> thus obtained, though the better practice is to first obtain leave of the bankruptcy court to enforce the same.

§ 1061. — Receivership proceedings.

Where the main purpose of a suit in a state court is to foreclose a mortgage, and there is also an incidental prayer for relief appropriate to insolvency proceedings, a receiver's possession thereunder will not be affected by a subsequent adjudication in bankruptcy of the mortgagor.<sup>13</sup> But where the main purpose of the petition is to obtain relief appropriate only in insolvency proceedings, the fact that a mortgage may be foreclosed as an incident therein will not save the case from the nullifying effect of bankruptcy upon pending state insolvency proceedings.<sup>14</sup>

A sale by a receiver appointed by the state court more than a year prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy will not be stayed.<sup>15</sup>

A stay should not be granted in an interlocutory proceeding for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of realty claimed by the plaintiff, in which the order was framed to avoid conflict between the state and federal courts as to the final disposition of the realty and the rents and profits which might accrue therefrom in the receiver's hands, further than to enjoin the granting of any money judgment against the defendant;<sup>16</sup> nor where a receiver had, more than four months before the bankruptcy proceedings, secured a judgment setting aside certain transfers by bankrupt as fraudulent, but he should be allowed to administer the property recovered for the benefit of the creditor he represents;<sup>17</sup> nor will a receiver appointed by a state court or attaching creditors be restrained, merely on a prayer in a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, from disposing of the property in his hands.<sup>18</sup>

A stockholder's suit against the bankrupt, its director and a subsidiary company will not be enjoined where the receivers appointed therein have turned over all the assets of the corporation to the trustee in bankruptcy and there is a legitimate scope for the judgment of the state court.<sup>22</sup>

A claim for unliquidated damages founded in tort, unaccompanied with contractual liability is not provable and therefore not discharged and an action for damages for death by wrongful act will not be stayed.<sup>27</sup>

§ 1069. Period during which stay may be had.

Courts of bankruptcy will only interfere by summary order to avoid a conflict of jurisdiction between the officers of state courts and those of the court of bankruptcy when such conflict clearly appears to exist,<sup>28</sup> and their jurisdiction extends to the enjoining of state court bankruptcy proceedings, though the latter were commenced prior to the filing of the petition in the bankrupt court.<sup>29</sup> They will not restrain proceedings against a bankrupt in a state court unless bankruptcy proceedings are pending;<sup>30</sup> but as soon as they are commenced, the court of bankruptcy acquires sole jurisdiction and may enjoin further proceedings in other courts.<sup>31</sup>

The stay must be until after an "adjudication,"<sup>32</sup> which means the date of the entry of a decree that the defendant in a bankruptcy proceeding is a bankrupt, or, if such decree is appealed from, then the date when such a decree is finally confirmed.<sup>33</sup>

As a foundation for enforcing the order by proceedings in contempt, a copy should be served upon the parties against whom it runs. It has been held, however, that a stay directed to the debtor and "all other persons" if served upon the persons to be restrained, need not contain their names.<sup>34</sup> Injunctions in bankruptcy, at least when issued in the primary stage of the proceedings, may be allowed and issued without notice,<sup>35</sup> but the bankruptcy court has no jurisdiction to issue an ex parte injunction, without notice or service of process, attempting to restrain a creditor from suing in a state outside of its jurisdiction.<sup>36</sup>

An injunction will not be granted where the grounds are alleged in the petition on information and belief merely, and the petition is not accompanied by affidavits sustaining the allegations.<sup>37</sup> If the papers disclose that the moving creditor lives at a distance, the application may be made by his attorney in his behalf. It should be apparent from the application papers, in which court the bankruptcy proceedings are pending.<sup>38</sup>

§ 1072. — Where made.

The application for stay may be made either to the state court direct or to the court of bankruptcy. If the purpose is to enjoin the action of some person not a party to the proceeding, he should be named in the petition and brought in by subpoena. Thus a bankrupt who is defendant in a state court should file in that court proper pleadings setting up the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings and ask for a stay; as otherwise the court is without proper notice upon which to act; and it is also the necessary procedure because the creditors, who are plaintiffs in the suit to be stayed, being parties to such action are within the state court's jurisdiction, and will be bound accordingly, while they are not subject to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, and otherwise have not had proper notice of the petition, nor in any way been brought within its actual jurisdiction.<sup>39</sup>

§ 1073. Form of restraining order.

When issued on a creditor's petition, the restraining order should conform to the language of the statute.<sup>40</sup>

§ 1074. Ground of stay must be pleaded.

The mere filing of a petition in bankruptcy does not divest the jurisdiction of a state court over an action;<sup>41</sup> but to affect such jurisdiction over pending actions, the adjudication or discharge must be pleaded,<sup>42</sup> which may be done at any time after the institution of bankruptcy proceedings, but, if the bankrupt does neither, a judgment rendered against him is lawful and valid.<sup>43</sup> A plaintiff will be estopped from proceeding further with his suit without an order authorizing it where the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings has been suggested and not denied,<sup>44</sup> or where an affidavit of defense, setting up the adjudication, is filed and the time has not arrived for discharge.<sup>45</sup> If a discharge would be a bar to a suit restrained, the creditor's remedy is to oppose the discharge in the manner provided by the act.<sup>46</sup>

§ 1075. Review of stay.

The power of the bankruptcy court to stay pending suits after adjudication being purely discretionary, the appellate court will not interfere with its action in the matter on petition for review unless such discretion has been abused.<sup>47</sup> An order staying an action of replevin brought in a state court against a trustee in bankruptcy by a third party, is not a final decision or appealable, but may be brought before the appellate court for review by petition invoking the supervisory power of that court.<sup>48</sup>

§ 1076. Dissolution of stay.

The general rule is that if the discharge is granted, it may be pleaded in the state court, but if refused, the injunction will be dissolved. If the judgment creditor seeks to have it dismissed, it must be by motion to dissolve and not by petition to dismiss;<sup>49</sup> and, if it restrained a suit pending adjudication, it is dissolved by a discharge in bankruptcy.<sup>50</sup> The fact that the bankrupt had given bond in an action to release an attachment prior to his bankruptcy, and the effect of his discharge on the liabilities of the sureties under the state statute, are matters which cannot be taken into consideration by the court on a motion to vacate the stay, but both parties should be remitted to their rights in the court where the action is pending.<sup>51</sup>

A stay may be vacated so as to permit the creditors to move the state court to punish the bankrupt for contempt committed prior to his adjudication.<sup>52</sup>

§ 1077. Permission to sue.

The bankruptcy court may restrain a secured creditor from enforcing his claim in any other court or it may authorize him to litigate his claim in a state court;<sup>53</sup> and this will be done as the justice of the case seems to require.<sup>54</sup> It may be permitted for the purpose of ascertaining the amount due, which amount shall be proved in the bankruptcy proceedings, but execution will be stayed;<sup>55</sup> or to liquidate a claim in composition cases;<sup>56</sup> or to prevent the running of the statute of limitations against it, or to make service, or that testimony may not be lost, in the case of a debt from which a discharge would not be a release;<sup>57</sup> or it may permit a sale under execution, where an injunction has

Where the bankrupt has given a bond conditioned for the payment of any judgment that might be recovered, the court in which the action is pending should be left free to take whatever steps it thinks equitable in the premises in accordance with its own practice.<sup>62</sup>

§ 1078. Revival of right to sue after bankruptcy.

Where an application for a discharge is pending no suit can be brought against the bankrupt until the application is disposed of, but after a discharge has been refused a creditor may institute and prosecute any action against the bankrupt as to after-acquired property which he might have instituted and prosecuted but for the adjudication in bankruptcy.<sup>63</sup>

Since the stay of a suit does not operate as a dismissal but merely suspends the proceedings, if the time within which a discharge may be granted expires without action, it has been held that the right of action revives, since bankruptcy proceedings are not terminated without a discharge.<sup>64</sup>

Suits begun against a bankrupt before the latter's bankruptcy may be defended or stayed, in the discretion of the court of bankruptcy, according as the interests of the bankrupt's creditors shall require;<sup>66</sup> and, if it is decided to defend them, the trustee is entitled to be made a party, and the bankrupt will be enjoined from interfering.<sup>67</sup> The trustee cannot be compelled to defend a pending suit against his own wishes and those of a majority of the creditors, where the chances of success are slight and the advantage, if any, to be gained is small,<sup>68</sup> and if he be appointed during the pendency of an action, the other defendants cannot make him a party defendant. If they have a claim for contribution against the bankrupt, their remedy is by intervention in the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>69</sup>

§ 1081. — Necessary parties.

A bankrupt before bankruptcy, or his trustee thereafter, is a necessary party to suits concerning the bankrupt's property, as a suit in equity or an action at law,<sup>70</sup> though it is held that the trustee is not entitled to intervene in a suit begun by attachment to recover possession of the property of the bankrupt.<sup>71</sup> He is a proper though not a necessary party to a suit by the vendor of a chattel electing to rescind the sale for fraud, and to recover the property, where the property has been seized prior to the institution of the bankruptcy proceeding under a writ of sequestration.<sup>72</sup> rights. If he questions the jurisdiction of the state court, he can plead thereto in proper form. If the case be one that is removable under the provisions of the judiciary act, he can make the requisite showing. If he does not dispute the validity of any lien asserted by the plaintiff, he can set up his title and rights as trustee, subject to the admitted lien, and the state court will protect his rights in the premises. If he wishes to contest the validity or extent of the adverse claim asserted by the plaintiff in the state court, he can do so by answer or cross-bill.<sup>73</sup> It has been held that upon an application to intervene by a trustee, the statutes of the state and the rules and practice of its courts, govern as to whether or not the intervention will be permitted, the same as when any other party invokes such court's jurisdiction.<sup>74</sup>

§ 1083. — Effect of trustee's appearance.

The trustee will take up the case in the same situation which existed at the time of his intervention.<sup>75</sup> If he appears and pleads in an action he waives want of notice before the bringing of the suit<sup>76</sup> and, should he be substituted for the bankrupt, he is bound by the judgment and the bankruptcy court will not interfere to prevent its execution, nor will he be allowed to attack such judgment any more than any other party.<sup>77</sup>

§ 1084. — What trustee may plead.

A trustee may plead any defense which the bankrupt may plead, unless it is purely personal to the bankrupt, as is a plea of discharge,<sup>78</sup> which must be pleaded affirmatively in a proceeding by scire facias to revive a judgment as well as in an original suit.<sup>79</sup> Where, with the consent of the referee, a scire facias is issued after the adjudication and before the appointment of a trustee upon a mortgage given by the bankrupt, he will not be allowed to have such judgment opened, the testimony showing the claim to be valid and his bankruptcy not relieving the defendant of the duty of filing an affidavit of defense; but the court will permit the trustee, after his appointment, to set up any meritorious defense and open the judgment for that purpose, except when it appears that the claim is valid and permission had been given to enforce it, in which latter case, however, the trustee should be permitted to intervene to be heard on any question arising upon subsequent proceedings.<sup>80</sup>

§ 1085. — Costs.

The trustee will incur no liability for costs accrued before his intervention, nor will he become personally liable for any costs whatever, so long as he acts in good faith.<sup>81</sup>

Where a non-resident trustee seeks to intervene in an admiralty suit pending in another district, the court in its discretion may determine whether he should give security for costs.<sup>82</sup>

§ 1086. — Removal of cause.

A trustee in bankruptcy cannot remove a cause, commenced in a state court against the bankrupt, to a federal court unless the necessary jurisdictional facts appear.<sup>83</sup>

§ 1087. Judgments after bankruptcy.

A judgment in an action against the bankrupt begun after the adjudication in bankruptcy does not bind the trustee not a party, even though the action was commenced before his appointment.<sup>84</sup>

§ 1088. Intervention of trustee as plaintiff in creditors' suit.

The trustee is not entitled to be substituted as plaintiff in a creditor's bill commenced by a creditor holding valid security, who has filed his claim unless such creditor has surrendered or waived his security.<sup>85</sup> Nor is he entitled to be substituted as plaintiff in a creditor's suit commenced more than four months prior to the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>86</sup>

Whether the action was commenced more than four months prior to bankruptcy, must be determined as of the date of the service of the summons. If the action is to set aside an alleged fraudulent transfer of a partnership the service of summons upon one partner more than four months prior to the bankruptcy of the partnership will prevent its trustee from being substituted against the objection of the creditor.<sup>87</sup>

§ 1089. Intervention of receiver.

The receiver in bankruptcy is not bound to intervene in a suit against the bankrupt,<sup>88</sup> and an agreement by him providing for the appearance of the bankrupt in a proceeding in the state court is not an agreement that he himself should also appear.<sup>89</sup>

Where the receiver intervenes, in a cause, commenced in a state court against the bankrupt he cannot have the same removed to a federal court, unless the jurisdictional facts appear.<sup>90</sup>

§ 1090. Trustee to prosecute suits.

Section 11c of the act provides that a trustee may, with the approval of the court, be permitted to prosecute as trustee any suit commenced by the bankrupt prior to the adjudication, with like force and effect as though it had been commenced by him,<sup>91</sup> so that the bankrupt cannot maintain a suit in his own name in relation to property not exempt, after the appointment of a trustee.<sup>92</sup>

"Section 16. . . . If, at the time of the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, an action is pending in the name of the debtor for the recovery of a debt or other thing which might or ought to pass to the assignee by the assignment, the assignee shall, if he requires it, be admitted to prosecute the action in his own name, in like manner and with the like effect as if it had been originally commenced by him."

This provision applies only to suits in which the estate of the bankrupt has an interest, or which may be prosecuted by the trustee for the benefit of all the creditors, and not one that is personal to the bankrupt.<sup>93</sup>

An action by a bankrupt in a state court does not abate upon the adjudication in bankruptcy or the appointment of a trustee, and in the absence of an application by the trustee for substitution it may be prosecuted by the bankrupt.<sup>94</sup> The trustee may be made a party by supplemental bill to a suit in equity as the bankruptcy of the plaintiff merely makes such suit defective;<sup>95</sup> and it is not necessary to allege his representative character;<sup>96</sup> or be substituted on motion as appellant in a case before the U. S. supreme court on appeal where the appellant becomes bankrupt after appeal.<sup>97</sup> The trustee will not be substituted as plaintiff in a suit which has already proceeded to judgment against the bankrupt, where it appears that the only object of the motion for such substitution is to relieve the plaintiff of the judgment against him for costs.<sup>98</sup>

The trustee is not bound to intervene in a suit commenced by the bankrupt.<sup>99</sup>

Upon the question as to the effect of the trustee's refusal to prosecute a suit in which he is entitled to enter his appearance, the decisions are conflicting, it being held on the one hand that such suit must be dismissed,<sup>1</sup> and on the other that it might be prosecuted in the name of the bankrupt;<sup>2</sup> or more properly by creditors.<sup>3</sup> There seems to be no good reason why the bankrupt should not be permitted to prosecute such suit where the trustee declines to do so.

While the approval of the court appointing the trustee is essential to the right of the trustee to prosecute a suit commenced by the bankrupt,<sup>4</sup> yet, such approval having been given, a court in another district has jurisdiction to permit the trustee to intervene in a suit pending in such court.<sup>5</sup> The trustee cannot, by intervening in a suit pending in a state, oust that court of jurisdiction.<sup>6</sup>

The trustee, when substituted as plaintiff in a suit commenced by the bankrupt, prior to his adjudication occupies no different position than the bankrupt would have occupied, and the trustee's rights as to the sale of the subject matter of the suit are those which the bankrupt would have possessed but for his adjudication.<sup>7</sup>

Where the trustee brings suit he may be required under state laws to give security for costs,<sup>8</sup> but where he is not authorized to intervene in an action commenced by the bankrupt and does nothing to create an estoppel to assert that he has taken no part in the prosecution thereof, he cannot be held liable for costs although he acquiesced in the continuance of the action.<sup>9</sup>

Section 23a deals with the jurisdiction of the United States circuit courts, and provides that "such courts shall have jurisdiction of all controversies at law and in equity, as distinguished from proceedings in bankruptcy," (thus clearly recognizing the essential difference between proceedings in bankruptcy, on the one hand, and suits at law or in equity on the other), "between trustees as such and adverse claimants, concerning the property acquired or claimed by the trustees," restricting that jurisdiction, however, by the further words, "in the same manner and to the same extent only as though bankruptcy proceedings had not been instituted and such controversies had been between the bankrupts and such adverse claimants.”<sup>1</sup> This clause must be construed in connection with section 291 of the Judicial Code of 1911 which abolishes the circuit court and provides that “Wherever, in any law not embraced within this act, any reference is made to, or any power or duty is conferred or imposed upon, the circuit court, such reference shall, upon the taking effect of this act, be deemed and held to refer to, and to confer such power and impose such duty upon, the district courts.” As a result, the district courts now exercise, in addition to the jurisdiction conferred in bankruptcy proceedings proper, jurisdiction in all matters, including that conferred by section 23a, formerly exercised by the circuit courts.

Section 23a, while relating to the circuit courts only, and not to the district courts of the United States, indicates the intention of congress that the ascertainment, as between the trustee in bankruptcy and a stranger to the bankruptcy proceedings, of the question whether certain property claimed by the trustee does or does not form part of the estate to be administered in bankruptcy, shall not be brought within the jurisdiction of the circuit court (now the district court) solely because the rights of the bankrupt and of his creditors have been transferred to the trustee in bankruptcy. While the evident purpose of the act of 1898 was that the circuit court should be prohibited from entertaining jurisdiction of suits between the trustee and an adverse claimant to property which the creditors claimed belonged to the estate of the bankrupt, unless the bankrupt himself could have resorted to the circuit court for the assertion of such claim against the adverse claimant,<sup>2</sup> the act of February 5,

1—Analogous provision of Act of 1867. “Section 2. . . . That the several circuit courts of the United States, within and for the districts where the proceedings in bankruptcy shall be pending . . . shall also have concurrent jurisdiction with the district courts of the same district of all suits at law or in equity which may or shall be brought by the assignee in bankruptcy against any person claiming an adverse interest, or by such person against such assignee, touching any property or rights of property of said bankrupt transferable to or vested in such assignee.”

For provisions with reference to proceedings in law and equity, see G. O. XXXVII. The jurisdiction of circuit courts of the United States is set forth in U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 629-657, as amended by the Act of August 13, 1888 (1 Supp. U. S. Rev. Stat. 611), and the acts specified in note 1 thereto.

1903, amending subdivision "b" of this section, expressly excepts actions to recover property, the transfer of which is voidable as a preference, or where such transfer was with the intent and purpose to hinder, delay or defraud his creditors. In view of the fact that the supreme court in the case of Bardes v. Bank held that subdivision "b" applied to the circuit as well as the district courts, it seems that the circuit courts also had jurisdiction over suits of this class by the trustee.

Where the amount in controversy exceeds $3,000 and there is diverse citizenship the district courts have jurisdiction irrespective of the bankruptcy law.<sup>3</sup> The mere fact that the plaintiff is a trustee in bankruptcy does not, however, confer jurisdiction under section 23a.<sup>4</sup> Nor is the citizenship of the trustee material to the jurisdiction of a suit by him to recover assets in the hands of adverse claimants,<sup>5</sup> though in a controversy not within section 23 jurisdiction may be based on diversity of citizenship between the trustee and the defendant.<sup>6</sup>

A claimant could not be constrained to go into the district court to litigate his claim against the trustee, by the refusal of the circuit court to act, where such court had jurisdiction by reason of the amount involved and the citizenship of the parties.<sup>7</sup>

§ 1094. — Comparison of Acts of 1898 and 1867.

Under the act of 1898, four things were necessary to give the circuit court jurisdiction: (1) it must be a controversy at law or in equity, as distinguished from proceedings in bankruptcy; (2) between a trustee in bankruptcy as such and adverse claimants; (3) concerning property acquired or claimed by such trustee; and (4) such as the bankrupt himself might have brought in such circuit court if the bankruptcy proceedings had not intervened. By the amendatory act of 1903, this jurisdiction was doubtless extended to include the recovery of property under sections 60b and 67e. No general rule can be given for determining what is a controversy at law or in equity as distinguished from proceedings in bankruptcy, but considerable assistance may be had by consulting the cases,<sup>8</sup> in which the United States supreme court has considered the question. They held that adverse claimants were those who claimed some property, or right of property, as a fund, or lien upon a fund, or a right to proceeds of a judgment, which it was also claimed had belonged to the bankrupt and been transferred to his assignee in bankruptcy. Under the act of 1867 the circuit courts had concurrent jurisdiction with the district courts of all suits at law or in equity between the assignee in bankruptcy and persons claiming an adverse interest touching any property or rights of property of said bankrupt transferable to or vested in such assignee. This practically coincides with the first three requisites under the present law and hence the decisions under the act of 1867 may be consulted to ascertain what are "suits at law or in equity" and "persons claiming an adverse interest touching property or rights of property of bankrupt transferable to assignee" as they will aid in determining what is "a controversy at law or in equity, as distinguished from proceedings in bankruptcy" and an "adverse claimant"; but, owing to the restriction imposed by the present act as to such controversies being such as the bankrupt might himself have been a party to if there had been no bankruptcy proceedings, few of those cases would now be within the jurisdiction of the district court by virtue of section 23a.<sup>9</sup>

No. 10318) holding that it had no jurisdiction of a suit by a state against

Section 23a did not confer jurisdiction upon the circuit court in all controversies in which trustees as such were involved, but only in controversies between the trustee and adverse claimants, involving, generally speaking, the ascertainment, as between the trustee in bankruptcy and a stranger to the bankruptcy proceedings, of the question whether certain property claimed by the trustee formed a part of the estate in bankruptcy.<sup>10</sup> It has no application where the controversy is not one with an adverse claimant as to right or title of the trustee to any property claimed by the trustee to have passed to him as part of the estate, but involves transactions between the defendant and the trustee himself, subsequent to the adjudication.<sup>11</sup>

Thus in a suit by the trustee in trover to recover the value of property belonging to the estate that has been converted by the defendant to his own use after the adjudication in bankruptcy, jurisdiction of the circuit court could not have been maintained under either clause of section 23, but, as in any other case in which the requisite amount was involved, might have been based upon diversity of citizenship between the trustee personally and the defendant.<sup>12</sup>

So, the circuit court had no jurisdiction under section 23a over a suit which involved merely the right of the trustee to recover for an alleged breach of contract for the purchase of property from the trustee.<sup>13</sup>

§ 1095. Jurisdiction under section 23b.

§ 1096. — In general.

Section 23b of the act provides that "suits by the trustee shall only be brought or prosecuted in the courts where the bankrupt, whose estate is being administered by such trustee, might have brought or prosecuted them if proceedings in bankruptcy had not been instituted, unless by consent of the proposed defendant,<sup>14</sup> except suits for the recovery of property under section

60, subdivision b; and section 67, subdivision e; and section 70, subdivision e.”<sup>15</sup>

The original act of 1898 limited the jurisdiction of the federal courts to those cases which the bankrupt might have brought in the absence of a bankruptcy law, unless by consent of the proposed defendant. This necessarily excluded that large class of cases for the recovery of property in the hands of a third person or stranger to the bankruptcy proceedings under a conveyance either voidable as a preference or null and void as given with intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors. The court of bankruptcy had no power by summary order to direct the surrender of such property to the trustee in bankruptcy nor to restrain its disposition, but resort must have been to the forum having jurisdiction over the person or property of the proposed defendant.<sup>16</sup> To meet the difficulty incident to such restricted jurisdiction, congress, by the act of February 5, 1903, specifically gave the federal courts jurisdiction over actions (1) to recover property transferred to a creditor who had reasonable cause to believe that a preference was thereby intended, as defined by the law, (2) to recover property conveyed, transferred, assigned or incumbered within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, with the intent and purpose on the bankrupt's part to hinder, delay and defraud his creditors; and by the act of June 25, 1910, gave the federal courts jurisdiction over actions (3) to recover property transferred by the bankrupt, in fraud of creditors, prior to the four-month period.<sup>17</sup>

Suits of the character indicated could, under the amendments, be brought in either the circuit or district courts, since, under the decision of the supreme court, subdivision "b" of this section applied equally to both courts, but by an amendment to sections "60b," "67e," and "70e" it is provided that for the purpose of the recovery of such property "any court of bankruptcy as hereinbefore defined, and any state court which would have had jurisdiction if bankruptcy had not intervened, shall have concurrent jurisdiction." Accordingly the court of bankruptcy is now given jurisdiction over actions for the recovery of such property, irrespective of the amount involved, which is concurrent with the state courts, while the circuit court, during its existence, had a like jurisdiction where the amount exceeded $2,000.

While the bankruptcy court has jurisdiction over a suit by the trustee to recover the value of property obtained by the bankrupt through fraud and transferred to the defendant with knowledge of the facts,<sup>18</sup> it has no jurisdiction of a suit to recover damages suffered by reason of the conspiracy between the bankrupt and defendant,<sup>19</sup> nor of a suit by the trustee to recover property in the hands of a third person, alleged to belong to the bankrupt, where there is no allegation of fraud, but merely a wrongful refusal to surrender.<sup>20</sup> The fact that a complaint contains an allegation of conversion does not, however, oust the court of jurisdiction.<sup>21</sup> Trust property belonging to the bankrupt, but never in his possession or transferred by him cannot be reached by a suit in bankruptcy court.<sup>22</sup>

The referee is not a court of bankruptcy within the meaning of section 23b, and while he has jurisdiction to set aside a fraudulent transfer where the res is in the possession of the court, he has no such jurisdiction where the property is not in the possession of the court.<sup>23</sup>

Section 23b relates only to suits by trustees and has no restrictive effect on the right of receivers (or trustees for that matter) to maintain or defend their possession of the goods seized as those of the bankrupt.<sup>24</sup> It should be observed that the amendments extending jurisdiction to the federal courts, apply only to suits by the trustee, and not by an adverse claimant, as to whom the jurisdiction remains the same as prior to the amendment. Adverse claimants may, in a proper case, sue or be sued in the federal courts when the bankrupt might have sued there on the same cause of action; that is, in case of diversity of citizenship and requisite amount involved. But when the adverse claimants come voluntarily into the court of bankruptcy and claim property in the possession of the trustee, wherever situated, or assert a lien thereon and seek to have it established and enforced or protected, the bankruptcy court has jurisdiction under subdivision 7 of section 2 of the act.<sup>25</sup>

§ 1097. — Different constructions.

This subdivision as it appeared in the act of 1898 was the source of much difference of opinion, but the amendments of 1903 and 1910, largely remove the difficulty. Three constructions were put upon the limitations imposed by this subdivision as it appeared before the amendments. The first confined its operation to the circuit courts;<sup>26</sup> the second gave to the state courts exclusive jurisdiction, except with the defendant's consent, of all suits concerning the bankrupt's estate brought by the trustee against any person other than the bankrupt;<sup>27</sup> and the third gave the state courts exclusive jurisdiction, except with the defendant's consent, of suits concerning the bankrupt's estate, if they were such as bankrupt himself could have brought had he not been a bankrupt, but reserved to the district court, at least concurrent jurisdiction, of those suits by the trustee § 1098. — Supreme court decision—Bardes v. Bank.

Notwithstanding the amendment which entirely changed the jurisdiction, the decision of the supreme court of the United States in the leading case of Bardes v. Hawarden Bank, is interesting as a treatment of the jurisdiction of the court, although the amendment of 1903 is designed to meet the obstacles presented by that decision. In that case the court stated that subdivision "b" applied to the district courts and to the circuit courts of the United States, as well as to the state courts, this appearing not only by the words of the title of the section, but also by the use, in this clause, of the general words, "the courts," as contrasted with the specific words, "the United States circuit courts," in the first and third clauses. It positively directs that "suits by the trustee shall only be brought or prosecuted in the courts where the bankrupt, whose estate is being administered by such trustee, might have brought or prosecuted them if proceedings in bankruptcy had not been instituted, unless by consent of the proposed defendant." Had there been no bankruptcy proceedings, the bankrupt might have brought suit in any state court of competent jurisdiction; or, if there was a sufficient jurisdictional amount, and the requisite diversity of citizenship existed, or the case arose under the constitution, laws or treaties of the United States, he could have brought suit in the circuit court of the United States.<sup>29</sup> He could not have sued in a district court of the United States,<sup>30</sup> because such a court had no jurisdiction of suits at law or in equity between private parties, except where, by special provision of an act of congress, a district court had the powers of a circuit court, or was given jurisdiction of a particular class of civil suits. Congress appeared by this subdivision to have clearly manifested its intention that controversies, not strictly or properly part of the proceedings in bankruptcy, but independent suits brought by the trustee in bankruptcy to assert a title to money or property as assets of the bankrupt against strangers to those proceedings, should not come within the jurisdiction of the district courts of the United States, "unless by consent of the proposed defendant."<sup>31</sup> In other words the question of the forum in these cases was to be determined as if there were no bankruptcy.

Since congress has no constitutional power to impose upon the state courts the duty of administering any part of the bankrupt act, and since the preformance of such duty by such state courts is purely discretionary and they might at any time wholly renounce it or impose onerous conditions,<sup>32</sup> the question is suggested whether the foregoing decision of the supreme court<sup>33</sup> did not leave all actions by the trustees against adverse parties where the cause of action arose under the bankrupt act at the discretion of the state courts; and is not that fact a strong argument in favor of the construction contended for by those who held this subdivision applied if the cause of action existed in the bankrupt—that is, independently of the bankrupt law—but not if the cause of action was created in the trustee by the law, and are not both constructions equally consonant with the language of the subdivision? This view is strongly supported by a recent well considered opinion of a state supreme court which holds that bills by the trustee to reach property transferred in fraud of the bankruptcy act should not be brought in a state court.<sup>34</sup>

§ 1099. — Decisions prior to Bardes v. Bank favoring jurisdiction.

Prior to the decision of the United States supreme court in Bardes v. Bank, the circuit courts of appeals in four circuits in passing upon various phases of the question, sustained in general the jurisdiction of courts of bankruptcy over controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings,<sup>35</sup> in addition to which there are a number of similar decisions by other federal courts.<sup>36</sup> A careful examination of the decisions, however, shows much purely obiter discussion of this subdivision. In those cases of general assignments and legal proceedings rendered void by the bankruptcy proceedings, the persons claiming under them did not claim adversely, but by right of the bankrupt's title and their right ceased. The appointment of the receiver is specifically provided for,<sup>37</sup> and the enjoining of the others was a necessary incident to the execution of other powers of the court. In none is there a plenary suit by the trustee.

It was held, however, that actions by trustees in bankruptcy to set aside fraudulent conveyances as void at common law, or as preferences, or because in fraud of the bankruptcy law, could be brought in the district courts as courts of bankruptcy,<sup>38</sup> because, as said in one, this subdivision did not impair the jurisdiction conferred by section 2, of the law, but related to the venue; and, in another, only when the cause of action existed originally in the bankrupt. For the last reason, an action by the trustee to subject to creditors an income held in trust for the bankrupt was cognizable in the bankruptcy court;<sup>39</sup> so also an action to quiet title,<sup>40</sup> or to determine the rights of the joint holders of a liquor license;<sup>41</sup> or an action to enforce the liability of stockholders for the unpaid subscription to stock upon call by trustee;<sup>42</sup> or by consent to set aside a bill of sale made within four months.<sup>43</sup>

§ 1100. — Early decisions against jurisdiction.

In a number of cases the opposite view was taken, and the district court sitting in bankruptcy was held not to have jurisdiction to determine by summary proceeding a controversy between the trustee as such and an adverse claimant concerning property claimed by the trustee, or by a trustee against a creditor of the bankrupt to recover money alleged to have been paid as a preference or in fraud of other creditors,<sup>44</sup> or the like, nor did it make any difference whether the cause of action existed in the bankrupt prior to the bankruptcy, or had arisen since.<sup>45</sup>

§ 1101. — Consent of defendant.

Section 23b, as amended, makes the consent of a defendant a condition precedent to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court in all actions by the trustee, except those for the recovery of property under sections 60b, 67e and 70e.

Prior to the amendment of 1910, the court of bankruptcy had no jurisdiction of controversies between the trustee and adverse claimants arising under section 70e, "unless by the consent of the defendant." For it was only such controversies arising under sections 60b and 67e that were, by the amendment, excepted from such consent.<sup>46</sup>

Under the amendment of 1910, the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court is enlarged to entertain suits under section 70e without the consent of the defendant.<sup>47</sup>

A petition to redeem the property of a bankrupt from a lien is in the nature of an application to the bankruptcy court for its permission to pay off an uncontroverted lien, and cannot be entertained without the consent of the claimant.<sup>48</sup>

The bankruptcy court may acquire by consent of all parties in interest, jurisdiction to determine a controversy between the trustee and an adverse claimant concerning an indebtedness of a third party.<sup>49</sup>

A person will be deemed to have consented who, when proceedings are instituted against him by the trustee, appears and maintains the bona fides of the transfer,<sup>50</sup> or answers on the merits and proceeds to a hearing without objection.<sup>51</sup> In such cases he will not be permitted to raise the question of jurisdiction for the first time on exceptions to a decision of the referee adverse to him,<sup>52</sup> or on appeal.<sup>53</sup> The consent will also be implied where he submits his claim to such court in response to a petition for an order requiring the property in his possession to be turned over to the custody of the court,<sup>54</sup> or, if he enters his appearance and obtains an order assenting to the sale of property,<sup>55</sup> or, where a petition is filed to declare a chattel mortgage null and void and the case is submitted on the merits without objection.<sup>56</sup>

The consent necessary to give the court jurisdiction is to the tribunal and not to the mode of procedure and if that be unlawful, the appearance of the defendant and his contesting the proceedings do not confer jurisdiction, notwithstanding the fact that he answers to a rule to show cause.<sup>57</sup>

If the record fails to show a cause within the general jurisdiction of the court, such defect, as distinguished from a mere ground of objection to the local jurisdiction or venue of the suit under section 23b, cannot be waived by the defendants, and their consent to the jurisdiction will be unavailing to confer jurisdiction.<sup>58</sup> A general appearance by a defendant to a rule to show cause does not constitute consent,<sup>59</sup> nor does the filing by a general assignee of accounts for allowance and settlement, where objection is made to the jurisdiction before the final order on the merits,<sup>60</sup> nor an appearance in response to an order to turn over property alleged to belong to the estate, if during such

§ 1104. State courts.

§ 1105. — Jurisdiction under acts of 1867 and 1898 compared.

Under sections 1 and 2 of the act of 1867, two distinct classes of jurisdiction were conferred on the district and circuit courts of the United States; by the first, jurisdiction as a court of bankruptcy over the proceedings in bankruptcy, initiated by the petition, and ending in the distribution of the assets amongst the creditors, and a discharge or refusal of a discharge of the bankrupt, and by the second, jurisdiction as an ordinary court, of suits at law or in equity, brought by or against the assignee in reference to alleged property of the bankrupt, or to claims alleged to be due from or to him. The jurisdiction of these courts over suits to recover assets of the bankrupt from a stranger to the proceedings in bankruptcy, brought by the assignee in a district other than that in which the decree in bankruptcy had been made, was upheld under a special clause in section 2 which gave those two courts concurrent jurisdiction of all suits at law or in equity, brought by the assignee against any person claiming an adverse interest, or by such person against the assignee, touching any property or rights of property of the bankrupt transferable to or vested in such assignee.<sup>68</sup>

The supreme court in the case of Bardes v. Hawarden Bank points out that Mr. Justice Clifford in an earlier case had called attention to the fact that the jurisdiction conferred by the act of 1867 was the regular jurisdiction between party and party as described in the judiciary act and the third article of the constitution.<sup>69</sup> That court repeatedly held under that act the right of an assignee to assert a title in property transferred by the bankrupt before bankruptcy and claimed by a third person adversely could only be enforced by a plenary suit, at law or in equity, under such second section, notwithstanding the broad terms used in the first;<sup>70</sup> and that the jurisdiction of the United States courts over all matters of bankruptcy as distinguished from suits at law or in equity was exclusive and as to such suits they had concurrent jurisdiction with the state courts. The similarity of section 2 of the act of 1898 to section 1 of the act of 1867 and the omission of any provision like that in section 2 of the act of 1867 was then noted and the court reached the conclusion that, under the act of 1898, there was no such concurrent jurisdiction as there was under the former act between the United States and state courts of suits between the trustee and adverse claimants of property alleged to belong to the bankrupt. This decision necessarily overruled the decisions under the act of 1898<sup>71</sup> holding the contrary, and made inapplicable a number of decisions under the former act.<sup>72</sup>

This decision of the supreme court determined that the district court as a court of bankruptcy had no jurisdiction of any suits, at law or in equity, independent of the proceedings in bankruptcy as such; but that all such suits should be brought in the proper court, which is ordinarily a state court, unless the jurisdictional requirements exist outside of the bankrupt law for suing in a federal court; or it may inquire in a summary way as to an adverse claim made by a stranger, to the property, and if the claim be without foundation, order the property turned over to the trustee.<sup>73</sup> Property in the actual possession of a state court, draws to it the right to decide upon conflicting claims to its ultimate possession and control.<sup>74</sup>

be borne in mind that the state courts now have jurisdiction of many cases that, under the act of 1867, were tried in the United States district courts.<sup>87</sup>

The federal district court has no jurisdiction to enjoin the prosecution by the trustee of a suit against an adverse claimant commenced in the state court. In such case the state court having first acquired jurisdiction, its authority will prevail.<sup>88</sup>

§ 1107. — When state courts do not have jurisdiction.

Immediately upon the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, if the bankrupt's estate is in process of settlement by the state courts, further proceedings should be stayed,<sup>89</sup> as, in proceedings in bankruptcy as distinguished from controversies "arising in bankruptcy proceedings," the courts of bankruptcy have exclusive jurisdiction,<sup>90</sup> and obtain complete control over the property in the possession of the bankrupt and scheduled as owned by him from the filing of the petition, while it is brought in custodia legis from the date of adjudication. It is not, therefore, subject to interference by any other court until such jurisdiction is divested,<sup>91</sup> even though a state court may have obtained possession of the property under a voluntary general assignment, or otherwise, and be administering it thereunder, as its jurisdiction to proceed will at once cease.<sup>92</sup> Accordingly when the bankruptcy jurisdiction becomes vested, a state court has no authority to issue a writ of replevin against property in the trustee's possession.<sup>93</sup>

§ 1108. — Rule governing state courts.

While it is true that Congress cannot require state courts to administer the bankrupt law or enforce rights and duties created by any other federal law,<sup>94</sup> it is equally true that the state courts must obey the bankrupt law, as any other constitutional law, and hence, while not administering federal laws except by comity, if it appears that by virtue of the bankrupt law the state court has no jurisdiction of an action pending therein, it will so decide upon proper plea.<sup>95</sup> But in the suits brought by or against a trustee in bankruptcy, a state court is not acting under the bankruptcy law, but merely recognizes it as the source of its title.<sup>96</sup>

§ 1109. — Acts of state courts which bind federal courts.

Acts done by state courts in the proper exercise of their jurisdiction and not in conflict with the decrees or jurisdiction of federal courts, are valid and bind such federal courts.<sup>97</sup> Whenever a trustee in bankruptcy voluntarily submits himself to the jurisdiction of a state court, he cannot, after judgment, object to the power of such court, and a federal court cannot assume jurisdiction.<sup>98</sup> In general, decisions of state courts are not binding on the bankruptcy court, although provisions in the

§ 1112. — In general.

The sole right to maintain an action for the benefit of creditors lies in the trustee.<sup>2</sup> The trustee may, as a general rule, maintain all actions, both at law and in equity, for the recovery and preservation of the assets, both real and personal, of the bankrupt's estate that the bankrupt himself, but for the bankruptcy, could have maintained,<sup>3</sup> enter his appearance and defend any pending suit against the bankrupt, by order of the court;<sup>4</sup> or, with the approval of the court, prosecute any suit commenced by the bankrupt prior to the adjudication, with like force and effect as though commenced by him.<sup>5</sup> He may institute suits for the purpose of reducing choses in action to money or recover property from third persons, or to set aside transfers of property to third persons alleged to be fraudulent as to creditors, including payments in money or property to preferred creditors, or foreclose a mortgage,<sup>6</sup> and in such case it is not necessary for him first to obtain the consent of creditors or an order of the bankruptcy court to justify him in maintaining such suit.<sup>7</sup>

Upon the petition of a creditor, the trustee may be required to institute litigation for the recovery of property upon the filing of a bond conditioned upon the payment of costs therein.<sup>8</sup>

It is not the duty of the trustee to litigate every question that may be called to his notice by the creditors, however frivolous or apparently lacking in support it may be, and on the other hand he should not, by requiring indemnity in every instance against the costs and expenses of suit, cast the risk of controversy upon the particular creditor who may request that it be undertaken.<sup>9</sup> While it is his duty to sue whenever such course is necessary to collect or reduce to money the assets of the estate, there should at least be probable cause for believing that a right of action exists.<sup>10</sup> He is not justified in rushing the estate into doubtful or unproductive litigation. It is not his privilege to use the estate to settle questions of law which may arise. If success is doubtful in the case of a claim alleged to be due the estate and the saving in dividends in the event of success will not pay the expense of litigation, it is his duty to abandon the claim, unless the creditors or a substantial majority of them, desire the litigation to proceed.<sup>11</sup>

It is sufficient to show that he will probably succeed, certainty not being required, when he applies for instructions relative to a suit the creditors wish him to bring, but, if an offer of settlement has been made, it must appear that the suit will probably realize more.<sup>12</sup>

Wherever it is for the best interest of the estate, the trustee will be authorized to institute suit; thus he may have a partner enjoined in an action for an accounting by one partner against another, which was pending at the time the firm was adjudged bankrupt,<sup>13</sup> or have reinstated, on motion, a case which has been compromised and dismissed by the bankrupt's counsel before the trustee's appointment, but after the adjudication, although the bankrupt had assigned the subject matter of the action to his counsel for his fees;<sup>14</sup> or may enforce a judgment which was recovered in a suit instituted in the name of the husband and wife on the wife's choses in action, to which suit the trustee was made party plaintiff with the bankrupt's wife, and distribute the proceeds among the creditors;<sup>15</sup> or, upon petition in a state court, have a judgment which was obtained within four months of the bankruptcy, set aside.<sup>16</sup> Where under the state law the income from a trust fund is liable to the claims of the creditors of the beneficiary, the trustee may sue to enforce such liability.<sup>17</sup>

Where the bankrupt owns property in common, his trustee does not become a tenant in common but is merely a trustee for the tenant in common and cannot maintain a suit for partition in the state court.<sup>18</sup>

The trustee may prosecute suits to recover assets in a district other than that in which the decree of bankruptcy is entered.<sup>19</sup> The jurisdiction of the federal courts depends upon the citizenship of the bankrupt, and not upon the citizenship of the trustee, and in suits by the trustee the requisite diversity of citizenship, as well as the requisite amount or value of the matter in controversy, must appear on the face of the record.<sup>20</sup>

§ 1113. — Trustee represents creditors as well as bankrupt.

Section 70e expressly provides that the trustee "may avoid any transfer by the bankrupt of his property which any creditor might have avoided." Whatever his relation to the bankrupt's property in other respects may be, for the purpose of attacking transfers of property by the bankrupt, the trustee stands in the shoes of judgment as well as general creditors besides succeeding to all the rights of the bankrupt, and may therefore maintain or defend proceedings in regard to the bankrupt's property, which the latter himself could not.<sup>21</sup> He stands for and repre-

The trustee may prosecute in a state court, a suit instituted therein by a creditor prior to bankruptcy. #### § 1115. — As to fraudulent conveyances.

As all conveyances, or transfers, made by a debtor subsequent to the passage of the act, and within four months prior to the filing of the petition, with the intent and purpose to hinder, delay or defraud his creditors are null and void, except as to purchases in good faith, and for a present fair consideration, the property so affected becomes a part of the assets of the estate and the trustee may proceed to enforce his rights thereto, either in the court of bankruptcy or a state court.<sup>24</sup> He is not, however, limited to recovering property transferred within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, but, if he discovers any that has been transferred by bankrupt at any time within the state statute of limitation in fraud of creditors,<sup>25</sup> whose claims existed at the time of such transfer, he may have them set aside, and, until they are so set aside, he has no title to such property.<sup>26</sup> The trustee has the same rights, with respect to setting aside fraudulent conveyances by the bankrupt, as the bankrupt's creditors, or any of them, had by the common law or the statutory law of the particular state;<sup>27</sup> and it is not as a penalty, but has its operation in the vesting of the title in the trustee after the transfer is declared void.<sup>28</sup> The trustee's right to have a transfer made more than four months prior to bankruptcy set aside does not depend upon any creditor's having obtained a judgment and issued execution thereon, nor is his right affected by the fact that there are creditors who might have maintained the action, such creditors having filed their claims in the bankruptcy proceedings and having been made parties to the action by the trustee.<sup>29</sup>

The trustee waives his right to have a transfer set aside by obtaining an order requiring the bankrupt to turn over the proceeds thereof, with full knowledge of the facts,<sup>30</sup> and cannot have a conveyance set aside as fraudulent against creditors, if it appears that there are no provable debts,<sup>31</sup> or if the creditors are barred by the statute of the right to participate in a distribution of the bankrupt's estate, by reason of their failure to file their claims in time,<sup>32</sup> or if the property fraudulently conveyed is not needed to pay claims of creditors.<sup>33</sup> The discharge in bankruptcy, however, in no way affects the trustee's right of action, the discharge being personal to the bankrupt.<sup>34</sup>

Where under the state law only judgment creditors could maintain an action to declare a creditor's chattel mortgage invalid for want of re-filing, the trustee may institute proceedings to have such mortgage so declared for the benefit of the estate.<sup>35</sup>

Where an insolvent fraudulently assigned a lease, the trustee can enforce the resulting trust in the creditors' favor in the hands of subsequent transferees with notice;<sup>36</sup> or may sue a debtor who pays money under his creditor's order to a third person, intending thereby to enable his creditor to prefer such third person, as such debtor will be deemed still to hold such money;<sup>37</sup> or for damages for injury or detention of goods by a party to whom the bankrupt transferred them contrary to the law.<sup>38</sup>

If the creditor benefited by such fraud agrees to restore to the trustee the money value of such property or to purchase any rights of action which may exist against him in favor of the trustee, suit to recover the property fraudulently conveyed should not be brought, if, in the court's judgment, it is likely to net the estate less than the amount offered in settlement.<sup>39</sup>

An objection that the trustee has no right to attack the validity of a chattel mortgage because it does not appear that he represented any but simple creditors cannot be raised for the first time upon appeal.<sup>40</sup>

Creditors may sue to set aside fraudulent conveyances no trustee having been appointed.<sup>41</sup>

Where an action has been commenced by a creditor, the trustee upon his appointment, may intervene and become subrogated to the rights of the creditor, notwithstanding the fact that in such action personal judgment may be obtained against the bankrupt.<sup>42</sup>

§ 1116. — As to preferences.

Any preference given by a bankrupt within four months before the filing of the petition and before the adjudication, where the person benefited had reasonable cause to believe a preference would be effected, is voidable at the discretion of the trustee;<sup>43</sup> as is also any payment to counsel except to the extent of a reasonable amount.<sup>44</sup>

The distinction between a creditor who is innocently preferred and one who received his preference with reasonable cause to believe a preference would be effected, is drawn in section 60b.<sup>45</sup> In the latter case<sup>46</sup> if the preference was given within the four months' period, the creditor has no option as to retaining or surrendering it, but it is discretionary with the trustee whether he will avoid it,<sup>47</sup> and he is the proper person to bring suit.<sup>48</sup> The nature and situation of the property which is the subject of the preference will determine the course to be pursued. If the bankrupt has procured or suffered a judgment to be entered and nothing more has been done, further proceedings may be stayed;<sup>49</sup> if an execution has been issued and levied, the same course may be pursued. If the money has been collected and is still in the sheriff's hands, the trustee may apply to the court in which the execution issued for an order directing the sheriff to turn it over to him, and if he refuses, sue him for money had and received, or proceed against him by attachment for contempt.<sup>50</sup>

The allowance of a claim or the failure of the trustee to contest the allowance in no way affects his right to sue for and recover an unlawful preference from the claimant,<sup>51</sup> nor does the registration of the title to the land conveyed by the bankrupt affect the right of action of the trustee.<sup>52</sup> A creditor without

§ 1120. — Rights as to collateral.

The trustee can recover possession of property in the possession of any one as collateral subject to any valid lien such person might have on the proceeds of such property.<sup>62</sup>

§ 1121. — Action for conspiracy.

The trustee, being vested with the rights of a judgment creditor, may bring an action of trespass on the case based on a conspiracy to fraudulently conceal and transfer property of the bankrupt,<sup>63</sup> but he cannot maintain such action where it is not alleged that the defendants received any part of the property.<sup>64</sup> However, a bill averring a conspiracy to defraud the creditors of the bankrupt by a shipment of goods is not demurrable because not identifying the particular defendant who received the goods.<sup>65</sup>

§ 1122. — Liability of corporate officers.

A right of action given by statute to the creditors of a corporation against any officers thereof sanctioning the creation of an excessive indebtedness has been held not to pass to the trustee.<sup>66</sup> Proceedings to determine the amount due the bankrupt from its officers and to compel the later to turn over to the trustee the amount so ascertained are not controversies as distinguished from proceedings in bankruptcy.<sup>67</sup>

§ 1123. — Assignment of trustee's right of action.

§ 1124. — Form of suit.

Whether a suit to set aside a fraudulent or preferential conveyance should be for goods or their value is optional, subject to the direction of the court, though, in a proper case it should be for the value instead of for the goods, especially if the transferee were a party to the fraud. The action may be for an accounting,<sup>68</sup> or in assumpsit.<sup>69</sup> The trustee may sue in trover for a conversion of goods occurring either before or after bankruptcy, and in a declaration may join a count upon the bankrupt's title, and a count upon the trustee's title.<sup>70</sup>

§ 1125. — Stockholders' liability.

The extent of the stockholders' statutory liability and the character of that liability depend upon and are determined by the charter of the corporation or the statute of the state which created it.<sup>71</sup> The capital stock of the corporation, especially its unpaid subscriptions, is a trust fund for the benefit of the general creditors of the corporation.<sup>72</sup> In determining the rights of a trustee against stockholders of a bankrupt corporation, a distinction should be observed between the liability of the stockholder to the corporation on his subscription and the statutory liability of stockholders to creditors of the corporation. The former passes to the trustee as an asset while the latter does not.<sup>73</sup> While the unpaid subscriptions constitute a trust fund for the benefit of the creditors yet such unpaid balances are not the primary or regular fund for the payment of corporate debts,<sup>74</sup> and the trustee of a bankrupt corporation can only sue the stockholders for such amounts as have been determined by a preliminary investigation and assessment to be necessary to pay the debts and expenses, and cannot enforce payment of the stockholders' liability upon unpaid subscriptions for capital stock, unless an assessment has been made by the bankruptcy court, or under its direction, ratably distributing the liability of the bankrupt estate among the subscribers to the stock.<sup>75</sup>

It has been held that while ordinarily a corporate creditors' suit to enforce payment of unpaid subscriptions cannot be brought until after judgment at law has been obtained against the corporation and execution returned unsatisfied, yet this remedy against the corporation need not be first exhausted where it has been adjudged bankrupt and a dissolution has in this way been brought about, but the trustee may proceed directly against the stockholders.<sup>76</sup>

The court of bankruptcy may levy an assessment upon the stockholders of a bankrupt corporation as fully as the stockholders or directors could have done.<sup>77</sup>

When the assets of a bankrupt corporation are insufficient to pay its debts, the trustee, under the direction of the court of bankruptcy, has authority to call upon its stockholders to pay enough of the unpaid balance of their stock subscriptions as will meet the deficiency of the other assets. The fact that its directors have incurred a statutory liability by contracting excessive debts or by paying dividends when the corporation was insolvent, or by which it became insolvent, will not prevent such call, as the original liability remains, the statutory liability being added thereto, and the creditor is not obliged to exhaust that remedy, nor has the corporation, or its trustee any right to pursue it. It is not an asset of the corporation, but security for the creditors, who may follow it or not, at their pleasure, with all other securities, till they are paid in full.<sup>78</sup> The trustee can ask for an assessment upon corporate stock as shall be needed to pay debts and expenses, provided the stock shall be found to be in fact partly unpaid for, no matter what the original terms of issue were,<sup>79</sup> and may sue for the recovery of unpaid stock subscriptions though the same are payable in specifics fraudulently overvalued.<sup>80</sup>

Upon petition of the trustee for an assessment by the bankruptcy court, the indebtedness of the corporation may be proved by presentation of the proofs of claim.<sup>81</sup> In a plenary suit against a stockholder, he cannot question the validity of the assessment,<sup>82</sup> or the findings of the court in bankruptcy as to the amount paid for the stock, as to the indebtedness of the corporation, or as to the amount of the assessments, but he may set up any individual defense he may have to the action.<sup>83</sup>

While the order of the bankruptcy court directing the trustee to institute a suit for the recovery of stock subscriptions is a sufficient call or assessment to authorize the bringing of an action by him,<sup>84</sup> and a finding by the referee of the amount due by the stockholders is not a necessary preliminary to such action,<sup>85</sup> yet the enforcement of an assessment against the stockholders is plenary in its nature, and, except with the consent of the stockholders, cannot be made in the bankruptcy court.<sup>86</sup>

There are various methods by which stockholders may seek to avoid their liability to corporate creditors; as, first, by a cancellation or withdrawal from the contract; second, by a release from their obligation to pay the full par value of the stock; third, by a transfer of the stock. In each of these cases, however, a court of equity does its utmost to protect the corporate creditors, and a rigid scrutiny will be made in the interest of creditors into every transaction of such a nature.<sup>87</sup> A stockholder cannot, after a company has become insolvent, avoid his liability on the ground that it was falsely represented to him that no assessment could be made on his stock.<sup>88</sup>

The trustee may recover against a transferee of stock,<sup>89</sup> although record of the transfer was not made but waived,<sup>90</sup> the same as if an assessment had been ordered by the corporation before bankruptcy, and an order of the court requiring payment of such sum by a certain date is conclusive of the trustee's right to sue;<sup>91</sup> but he cannot recover from one who refused to accept. He may sue for the balance due on a stock subscription from one who has assigned shares not fully paid up, and concerning some of which the transfer has not been noted on the bank's books, where a by-law makes invalid a transfer of stock by one indebted to the bank;<sup>92</sup> or for the balance due upon stock-notes, as in the case of a mutual fire insurance company where the stockholders pay part cash and give their notes for the balance of the stock, and a portion remains unpaid on the company's bankruptcy and there are losses unsettled.<sup>93</sup> The action may be maintained against an officer who has resold his stock to the bankrupt, even though at the time of such resale there were no creditors.<sup>94</sup>

Evidence of misrepresentations made to a stockholder, when he subscribed for stock, by an agent of the corporation, is admissible in an action by the trustee to collect an assessment made on unpaid subscriptions.<sup>95</sup> parties had in contemplation a loan, it makes no difference however disguised, the contract will be usurious if it be so in other respects, and a note void for usury in its inception cannot be enforced by an innocent purchaser for value. The rate of interest to govern will be that of the state in which the contract is made, though it has been held that parties may contract for interest according to the law of the place of performance.<sup>96</sup> Accordingly, the trustee in bankruptcy has the same right with reference to the recovery of usurious interest and the like, as is given by the state law to any other person.<sup>97</sup> In the case of a national bank the rate of interest is fixed by federal law,<sup>98</sup> and if an excessive rate is charged it is subject to the penalty provided by the federal law, which is exclusive of any state penalty,<sup>99</sup> and twice the amount of the interest may be recovered in an action in the nature of an action of debt, provided such action be commenced within two years of the time when such usurious transaction occurred.<sup>1</sup> Creditors who are given the right by statute to attack the validity of a mortgage given by their debtor to another creditor on the ground of usury are under no equity which requires them to pay the debt of such other creditor as a condition precedent to the existence of such right. An action by the trustee to recover a sum of money as a preference is an action at law upon an implied contract, and cannot be entertained by a court having no jurisdiction over such actions.<sup>5</sup>

In Alabama, it is held that a suit to set aside a transfer as being a voidable preference cannot be maintained in the chancery court, even though the statute gives such court jurisdiction to set aside fraudulent conveyances.<sup>6</sup>

§ 1136. Defenses.*§ 1137. — Former adjudication.

An order of the referee allowing a creditor to retain an alleged preference and claim for the balance is an adjudication that the creditor has not received a preference and unless appealed from is binding in an action by the trustee to recover the alleged preference.<sup>18</sup>

An order in a summary proceeding which does not find the party proceeded against liable to pay over<sup>19</sup> or an order in summary proceedings directing the release of property by the receiver<sup>20</sup> or an order passing the receiver's account in which he credits himself with the transfers of property to a third person,<sup>21</sup> is not conclusive in a suit to recover the property.

It is held, however, that a decision of the bankruptcy court upon an issue of its jurisdiction, that the possession of certain property was in an adverse claimant at the time of bankruptcy, is a final adjudication and operates as an estoppel against the trustee in a suit against the claimant in a state court.<sup>22</sup>

§ 1138. — Collateral attack on adjudication.

The adjudication cannot be attacked in a suit to set aside a preference upon the ground that one of the petitioners was not in fact a creditor of the bankrupt,<sup>23</sup> nor on any grounds except jurisdictional defects affirmatively appearing on the face of the record.<sup>24</sup>

25—Section 11d, Act of 1898; Sheldon v. Parker, 66 Neb. 610, 11 A. B. R. 152.

Effect of limitation.—It was held, under the Act of 1867, that this limitation applied only to cases brought in regard to property held adversely to the bankrupt and assignee, or cases where suit was brought to recover a debt due bankrupt; within the meaning of the act when the final account is approved, all the funds distributed and the trustee discharged, and the fact that property fraudulently conveyed by the bankrupt had not been administered does not operate to extend the period of limitations.<sup>26</sup>

Courts of bankruptcy may close estates whenever they have been fully administered, though they may be re-opened whenever it appears that they were closed before being fully administered; in which event it would seem that, although the two years had commenced to run, the fact that an estate was re-opened would cause the two-year period to run from the time it was last closed. Under the act of 1867 the limitation began to run when the estate vested in the assignee as such;<sup>27</sup> but under the present act it does not begin to run until the estate has been closed. The limitation here is a statutory limitation as to suits by or against a trustee in bankruptcy in his capacity as such; but, even if the action be commenced within two years after the estate has been closed, there is another limitation growing out of the nature of the action or the character of the other parties to the suit, established by the lex fori, which must also be considered. An action may be barred by the one and not by the other. This is contrary to the decision of the supreme court of Georgia which holds, that the limitation prescribed by section 11d applies to the exclusion of limitations prescribed by the states and though a cause of action in favor of or against the trustee in bankruptcy be barred by the state statute an action thereon may nevertheless be maintained at any time within two years after the closing of the estate.<sup>28</sup>

The two years' limitation can not be pleaded in an action by and, in other cases, that the limitation was a bar to recovery by the assignee although he had no notice of the existence of the property sought to be recovered. (Freelander v. Holloman, 9 N. B. the purchaser at a trustee's sale to recover possession;<sup>29</sup> nor where the defendant files a bill of review four years after a judgment declaring a mortgage on the bankrupt's real estate void in a suit in equity brought by the trustee, for a bill of review is not a suit within the meaning of the limitation of the act.<sup>30</sup>

It has been held that the statute of limitations begins to run against the trustee's right to set aside a conveyance as fraudulent from the time he has knowledge, actual or constructive, of the facts surrounding the transfer.<sup>31</sup> of them,<sup>35</sup> though in case the trustee neglects or refuses to act, the creditor may prosecute the suit, the trustee being made a party thereto.<sup>36</sup> The trustee's right of action cannot be assigned.<sup>37</sup>

Where the bankrupt has, by a preferential transfer, assigned a fire insurance policy to a creditor, and the creditor has surrendered the policy to the trustee without a re-assignment, the latter holds the beneficial interest in the policy and can in an action commenced by him on the policy, by amendment substitute the holder of the legal title as plaintiff suing for his use.<sup>38</sup>

A receiver in bankruptcy is neither a necessary or proper party to an action to set aside a preferential transfer.<sup>39</sup>

§ 1144. Parties defendant.

Both the bankrupt and the party through whom the property was transferred to defendant should be made parties to a suit to recover property of the estate.<sup>40</sup> A fraudulent grantee or transferee, who has conveyed or transferred all the property to another fraudulent grantee or transferee, is a proper but not a necessary party.<sup>41</sup> A person in whose favor a judgment has been rendered is a necessary party to a suit by the trustee to deprive him of the proceeds of the judgment, and such suit must be instituted in a jurisdiction in which such person can be sued.<sup>42</sup>

The words "such person" in section 60b refer either to the person receiving the preference or the person benefited thereby, and accordingly, the trustee may proceed against the surety on a note, the payee of which has received a preferential payment.<sup>43</sup>

If the person receiving the preference is without the jurisdiction of the court, and the person benefited thereby is within the jurisdiction, the trustee may proceed against the latter.<sup>44</sup>

Where a preference is obtained through a judgment and levy of execution, the trustee may proceed by suit in equity to set aside the lien, making the sheriff, as well as the creditor, a party if the money be still in the hands of the sheriff,<sup>45</sup> but it is not necessary to join as parties the sheriff levying the execution of other execution creditors.<sup>46</sup>

An action to recover property fraudulently or preferentially transferred may be maintained against the board of trustees of a township.<sup>47</sup>

The bankrupt is not an indispensable party to a suit to enforce a resulting trust against lands in the possession of the trustee.<sup>48</sup>

§ 1145. Intervention by creditors.

Creditors may intervene in a suit to set aside a fraudulent or preferential conveyance.<sup>49</sup>

§ 1146. Possession of property pending suit.

If the trustee is in possession of property at the time of the commencement of a suit to determine the title thereto, he should be permitted to retain possession thereof pending suit.<sup>50</sup> On the other hand, the possession of a creditor will not ordinarily be disturbed,<sup>51</sup> though the court may compel delivery of property in the possession of an adverse claimant, even before appointment of a trustee, where necessary for its preservation, as where the conveyance by which the claimant holds is alleged to be fraudulent and the claimant financially irresponsible.<sup>52</sup> So, where the facts clearly indicate the dishonest, fraudulent and corrupt character of the transfer and an imminent danger of loss and dissipation of the property transferred, the court may require that it be delivered to a receiver to await the appointment of a trustee and the determination of the suit to determine its validity.<sup>53</sup>

§ 1147. Injunction and sequestration pending suit.

The bankruptcy court may restrain an alleged fraudulent transferee of property of the bankrupt from disposing of the same until the matter in controversy can be regularly disposed of,<sup>54</sup> and in a plenary suit commenced by the trustee, the court may issue a writ of sequestration or injunction to prevent a removal of property involved from the district.<sup>55</sup>

§ 1148. Stay of proceedings.

A suit in the bankruptcy court may be stayed until determination of a suit in state court which has first acquired jurisdiction.<sup>56</sup>

§ 1149. Process.

The trustee has authority to attempt recovery of property found in a district other than that of his appointment although neither personal service within the district of his appointment nor entry of appearance of the bankrupt is shown by the record.<sup>57</sup>

Where a plenary suit is commenced by the trustee against an adverse claimant residing in another district, the latter may be brought in by a service of process under section 738 of the Revised Statutes providing for service by special order of the court.<sup>58</sup>

A proceeding by the trustee to set aside a fraudulent conveyance or illegal preference is not a proceeding in bankruptcy, but, while ancillary to such proceeding and authorized to be instituted in either state or federal court, it must be governed so far as pleading and practice are concerned, by the laws and rules of the court wherein it is instituted.<sup>59</sup>

§ 1151. Petition or complaint.

§ 1152. — Caption.

Where the trustee sues in a representative capacity, the title of the complaint should indicate that the suit is brought in his representative capacity. Ordinarily the word "as" should follow the trustee's name, but where it appears from averments of the complaint that the action is by the plaintiff as trustee, the omission of the word will not be fatal.<sup>60</sup>

§ 1153. — Allegations in general.

An allegation of residence is not necessary in a suit to set aside a preferential or fraudulent transfer,<sup>61</sup> but where jurisdiction depends upon diversity of citizenship such citizenship or the facts which in legal intendment constitute it, must be distinctly and positively averred in the pleadings, or appear positively and with equal distinctness in other parts of the record.<sup>62</sup> A mere averment that the trustee or the defendant is a resident of a particular state does not import that he is a citizen so as to confer jurisdiction.<sup>63</sup>

A petition in a suit to recover property preferentially transferred by the bankrupt need not be technical or formal, or in the exact language of the statute.<sup>64</sup> The averments must, however, be clear and unequivocal, and all the essential elements of a voidable preference<sup>65</sup> including insolvency of the bankrupt,<sup>66</sup> the resultant advantage to the preferred creditor,<sup>67</sup> and the reasonable cause to believe a preference would result,<sup>68</sup> should be alleged, but an omission of such allegations may be cured by amendment.<sup>69</sup> Where the suit is instituted by the trustee of a partnership estate, the petition should allege the insolvency of the individual partners.<sup>70</sup> An allegation that the effect of a transfer was to enable defendant to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than other creditors of the same class has been held to be the statement of a conclusion,<sup>71</sup> but there are decisions to the contrary.<sup>72</sup> It is unnecessary to allege specifically that the transfer complained of is voidable by the plaintiff as trustee for the bankrupt.<sup>73</sup>

Prior to the amendment of 1910, it was held necessary to allege the fact that the property of the bankrupt was not sufficient to pay his creditors in full,<sup>74</sup> but an omission in this regard was amendable.<sup>75</sup> The amendment is held to have changed the rule.<sup>76</sup> The amount of secured and unsecured debts, or debts entitled to priority should be alleged<sup>77</sup> but it is not necessary to allege and prove that claims of creditors have been filed and allowed, or that the bankrupt is indebted to general creditors who may share in the preference recovered.<sup>78</sup> In alleging fraud in a suit to set aside a fraudulent conveyance the facts and circumstances relied upon must be clearly set out.<sup>79</sup>

A petition in an action under 67f attacking a lien acquired by legal proceedings, must allege that at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the lien acquired was in effect,<sup>80</sup> but a petition under that section by which the trustee seeks to enforce a lien held by a creditor before bankruptcy need not allege that the trustee has been subrogated to the rights of attachment creditor after due notice, since such notice can be given the original lien holders by service of summons in the action and their rights determined in the trial thereof.<sup>81</sup>

Where the trustee seeks to recover property of the bankrupt in an action which the bankrupt could have maintained but for the intervention of the bankruptcy, he is not required to allege that he has not sufficient assets of the estate in his hands to pay the liabilities thereof.<sup>82</sup>

In an action by the trustee to recover an insurance policy or the proceeds thereof as belonging to the estate of the bankrupt, the interest of the bankrupt must be alleged. In case the bankrupt was named as beneficiary, the terms and conditions upon which he was so named must appear.<sup>83</sup>

§ 1154. — Multifariousness.

A bill in equity to recover a payment or set aside a transfer made by the bankrupt within the four-month period is not demurrable because alleging two causes of action, one based on the fact that the payment or transfer was a voidable preference, and the other on the fact that it was a fraudulent transfer.<sup>84</sup>

§ 1155. — Prayer for judgment.

A prayer for judgment in excess of the value of the property is no ground for demurrer.<sup>85</sup>

§ 1156. — Variance.

Proof of a fraudulent transfer will not support an action under section 60b to set aside a transfer as preferential.<sup>86</sup>

A new trial will not be granted, in an action by the trustee for conversion, upon the ground of variance between a declaration counting on the trustee's title and proof tending to show title in the bankrupt at the time of the alleged conversion, where the variance was not pointed out at the trial, since such objection could have been overcome by an amendment of the pleading to conform with the proof.<sup>87</sup>

§ 1157. Demurrer or plea.

Demurrers and pleas in federal equity suits have been abolished by the new rules.<sup>88</sup> It has been held that a general demurrer will not be allowed in a suit to set aside a fraudulent conveyance unless accompanied by an answer which denies the fraud.<sup>89</sup>

§ 1158. Answer.

In an action to set aside a fraudulent transfer, a mere denial in the answer of the averment in the bill that the claims of the creditors were filed within the statutory period, without more, does not sufficiently invoke the defense of the statutory bar of the claims. Such defense must be presented by a special plea.<sup>90</sup>

§ 1159. Cross-bill.

A cross-bill seeking an accounting with the bankrupt and claiming a lien on any sum which may be recovered as a preference will be dismissed.<sup>91</sup> Where the court denies the defendant the right to file a cross-bill, it may allow him the right to detain in his hands, pending a final determination of the case by the court of appeals, such part of the recovery as will cover his claim against the estate.<sup>92</sup>

§ 1160. Jury trial.

All issues of fact, except as otherwise provided in bankruptcy proceedings, must be tried by jury,<sup>93</sup> but issues of fact in civil cases in the district court may be tried without a jury, whenever the parties file a stipulation in writing waiving the jury. Where the facts are not in dispute the defendant is not entitled to a jury trial.<sup>94</sup>

A jury trial is proper in an action to set aside a fraudulent or preferential transfer;<sup>95</sup> to determine the amount of rent due which accrued while the assignee occupied the premises;<sup>96</sup> to determine if a creditor took an assignment of property from the debtor with knowledge or reason to know of latter's insolvency;<sup>97</sup> to weigh inadequacy of price as an evidence of fraud in a sale by an insolvent vendor;<sup>98</sup> and, in the court's discretion, but not as matter of right, to determine the amount to be allowed as a fee to the attorney of a creditor out of such creditor's distributive share.<sup>99</sup>

§ 1161. Burden of proof.

In an action by the trustee, proof of his appointment as trustee throws the burden upon the defendants to show that he does not represent creditors, and that creditors in existence at the time of the filing of the petition have subsequently been paid.<sup>1</sup> In proceedings to recover money or property obtained by way of preference, the act of the bankrupt complained of, that the transfer created a preference and that the creditor had reasonable cause to believe a preference would be effected must be shown,<sup>2</sup> the burden of proof being on the trustee.<sup>3</sup> The relation and conduct of the parties may in some cases, however, be sufficient to establish a prima facie case.<sup>4</sup>

When the consideration paid for a transfer is shown by the record to have been adequate, the burden shifts to the trustee to show that the defendant purchased in bad faith.<sup>5</sup> Insolvency at the date of the adjudication need not be proved. The adjudication is conclusive on such question.<sup>6</sup>

The burden of proving bona fides, in an action under section 67e has been held to be on the transferee.<sup>7</sup>

§ 1162. Evidence.

An order of the referee giving the trustee leave to sue to set aside a conveyance is no evidence of his election and qualification as trustee.<sup>8</sup> The petition in bankruptcy and the schedules filed by the bankrupt have been held inadmissible against the objection of the defendant,<sup>9</sup> but there is authority to the contrary.<sup>10</sup>

§ 1164. Verdict.

Where the court charged in effect that a transfer was to be regarded as fraudulent if the creditor made a loan with the knowledge that the money was to be used in paying an existing debt, a general verdict of the jury will not be construed as a finding that an intent to defraud, of which the creditor had knowledge, existed.<sup>12</sup>

§ 1165. Judgment or decree—Amount of recovery.

A decree in a suit in a bankruptcy court, may direct the defendant who has been found to have received a preference, to pay over the full amount of his preference, with interest, less the amount of any dividend he is entitled to,<sup>13</sup> but where the suit to recover a preference is brought in a district other than that of the adjudication, judgment may be entered for the full amount of the verdict before the final account of the trustee is filed, though the defendant claims to have a provable debt.<sup>14</sup>

Interest should be allowed only from the date of demand. In case no formal demand is made, interest can be allowed only from the time of the commencement of the suit.<sup>15</sup>

§ 1167. Summary jurisdiction.

§ 1168. — In general.

The test of jurisdiction to proceed in a summary way or by summary proceedings to determine adverse claims to property, real or personal, is possession of such property in or by the bankrupt at the time of the filing of the petition. Where a third person holds property at the time of the bankruptcy merely as agent or bailee of the bankrupt, and asserts no adverse claim thereto, the bankruptcy court, which includes the referee,<sup>1</sup> may by summary proceedings compel the delivery thereof to the trustee in bankruptcy; but, where he acquires the possession prior to the bankruptcy, and claims the right to hold the property as against the bankrupt or the trustee, making a real, though fraudulent and voidable, adverse claim, and does not consent to the jurisdiction, he is entitled to have his rights determined in a plenary suit, in the state court or district court.<sup>2</sup> The doctrine is summed up by Chief Justice Fuller in

2—The authority of the referee, and of the court of bankruptcy in summary proceedings is limited to determining whether the claim made is colorable merely, or is in fact adverse to the claimant, and according as it determines that question will it deny or retain jurisdiction of the controversy. *Shea v. The court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to determine by summary proceedings after reasonable notice to the claimants all controversies between the trustee and adverse claimants over liens upon and title and possession of (1) property in the possession of the bankrupt when the petition was filed, (2) property held by third parties for him, (3) property lawfully seized by the marshal as bankrupt's under clause 3 of § 2 of the Act, and (4) property claimed by the trustee which has been lawfully reduced to actual possession by the officers of the court. These controversies relative to the property of the bankrupt are within the court's jurisdiction under § 2 of the Act and are not controversies at law or in equity as distinguished from proceedings in bankruptcy within the meaning of § 23. A plenary suit may be maintained in the bankruptcy court to determine the controversies above specified which it has jurisdiction to determine by summary proceedings. *Clay v. the case of Babbett v. Dutcher,<sup>3</sup> where it is said: "There are two classes of cases arising under the act of 1898 and controlled by different principles. The first class is where there is a claim of adverse title to property of the bankrupt based upon a transfer antedating the bankruptcy. The other class is where there is no claim of adverse title based on any transfer prior to the bankruptcy, but where the property is in the physical possession of a third person or agent of the bankrupt, or of an officer of a bankrupt corporation, who refuses to deliver it to the trustee in bankruptcy. In the former class of cases a plenary suit must be brought, either at law or in equity, by the trustee, in which the adverse claim to title can be tried and adjudicated. In the latter class it is not necessary to bring a plenary suit, but the bankruptcy court may act summarily and may make an order in a summary proceeding of the delivery of the property to the trustee, without the formality of a formal litigation."

Mere possession by the bankrupt does not confer summary jurisdiction if the facts show that he was not the true owner of the property and did not hold it as such.<sup>4</sup> Funds on deposit in a bank may be regarded as constructively in possession of the trustee so as to vest the bankruptcy court with jurisdiction to summarily determine claims thereto.<sup>5</sup>

The court is without jurisdiction in proceedings against a partnership, none of whose members are adjudged bankrupt, to summarily take the individual estate of a solvent partner without his consent.<sup>6</sup>

§ 1169. — Determination of existence of adverse claim.

The mere refusal to surrender property, or the assertion by a person that he holds an adverse claim thereto, even with an intention to protect it with the usual process of law does not constitute an adverse holding and will not oust the summary jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court to ascertain whether any basis for such claim actually exists. It is only when the evidence indicates that the asserted claim is not false or fraudulent that the court is deprived of jurisdiction.<sup>7</sup> The court of bankruptcy or referee has, therefore, the undoubted power to examine into the claim and determine whether it is merely colorable or not.<sup>8</sup> It is held, however, that a claim, though fraudulent, may, nevertheless, be adverse,<sup>9</sup> and that a plenary suit must be resorted to if the uncontradicted facts asserted by a claimant are sufficient, if true, to make out a real adverse claim, no matter how ill supported it may appear to be.<sup>10</sup> An order directing a special master to take testimony and report his opinion is not a decision that the adverse claim is merely colorable so as to prevent its determination in a plenary action.<sup>11</sup>

§ 1170. — What constitutes an adverse claim.

A claim of paramount or other title is not essential to the character of an adverse claimant. One who has a substantial claim to a lien created by the bankrupt upon his property before the petition is filed is equally an adverse claimant with one who claims absolute title.<sup>12</sup> The fact that the bankrupt does not schedule or claim property as his own is not conclusive that one in constructive possession of the property is an adverse claimant, where the bankrupt is in actual possession and the mere possession of a deed to property does not constitute the holder thereof an adverse claimant where the property is still in the possession of the bankrupt, and the evidence shows that the record owner merely holds title as agent of the bankrupt in pursuance of a scheme to defraud creditors.<sup>13</sup>

One claiming money in the hands of a third party under an assignment from the bankrupt has been held an adverse claimant,<sup>14</sup> as has a pledgee of stock;<sup>15</sup> a surety on the bankrupt's bail bond;<sup>16</sup> a creditor claiming the right to an excess of the value of the security held by him over the amount of his claim;<sup>17</sup> a surety in whose hands money had been deposited to indemnify him for his liability on the bond,<sup>18</sup> one with whom property had been deposited to secure the release of an attachment;<sup>19</sup> a trustee for lien claimants;<sup>20</sup> and an officer holding property in replevin.<sup>21</sup>

So, a purchaser of property from the bankrupt shortly before bankruptcy without knowledge of his insolvency<sup>22</sup> a fraudulent or preferential transferee;<sup>23</sup> a bank claiming the right of set-off;<sup>24</sup> and an owner holding funds due a bankrupt contractor upon whom notice of lien has been filed<sup>25</sup> are generally held adverse claimants.

The wife of the bankrupt may be an adverse claimant,<sup>26</sup> and a summary order against the bankrupt to compel the delivery of property adversely claimed by his wife is improper, since it might act as undue compulsion upon the wife.<sup>27</sup>

Where the claim of possession as against the trustee's right of possession is based solely on an attachment lien, which is annulled by the adjudication in bankruptcy, the person or officer so in possession holds as bailee for the trustee, and must deliver the property upon proper demand and may be required to do so by summary order issue from the bankruptcy court. He is not an adverse claimant, and his mere refusal to surrender the property does not make him such.<sup>28</sup>

A general assignee is not an adverse claimant,<sup>29</sup> and may be

§ 1171. — Possession obtained after bankruptcy.

The bankruptcy court has jurisdiction in a summary proceeding to order restored by a third person to the trustee, property, or its proceeds, which was in possession of the bankrupt at the time of the filing of the petition, and was subsequently seized under process from a state court,<sup>34</sup> or voluntarily delivered to a creditor or adverse claimant,<sup>35</sup> or seized from the sheriff after the arrest of bankrupt,<sup>36</sup> or taken from the possession of the receiver in bankruptcy, with or without his consent.<sup>37</sup> It is held,

however, that where the receiver in bankruptcy has with the apparent consent of the bankrupt court vacated premises of which a third person is claiming possession, and such third person has thereupon entered the premises, the latter cannot be ousted by summary proceedings.<sup>38</sup>

The court may summarily proceed against a mere naked intermeddler either of its own motion, or upon complaint of the bankrupt or some other interested person,<sup>39</sup> and may summarily compel the assignee of the bankrupt's wages under a void assignment, who has given the latter's employer notice of the assignment, to withdraw the notice, and to prosecute the claim, if at all, in the bankruptcy court.<sup>40</sup>

"The law . . . gave the bankrupt the right to enjoy, pending discharge, certain privileges, immunities, and benefits, in the free exercise of which the statute imposes the duty of the court to protect him. Among them is the right to enjoy the benefit of a discharge, if the bankrupt complies with the provisions of the statute, and, in order that the practical good of such discharge shall not be taken from him, that he shall not be coerced, pending discharge, by any device of creditors, into the payment of a debt from which the discharge would free him, or which would operate upon his rights to any particular property, if the effect of such discharge would pass such property either to himself or the estate, as against a creditor who claimed it for himself. The jurisdiction of the court to protect the bankrupt in the enjoyment of such rights, whether ancillary or original, is abundant and its exercise is justified to conserve to the fullest extent the court's original jurisdiction."<sup>41</sup>

§ 1172. — Consent of adverse claimant.

Relying upon the rule that consent cannot confer jurisdiction where the subject matter of the controversy is not within the jurisdiction of the court, several courts have held that the failure of the adverse claimant to formally challenge the jurisdiction of the court, or his consent thereto, does not confer jurisdiction to summarily determine the merits of a controversy.<sup>42</sup> On the other hand, the court, with the consent of the adverse claimant, has been held to have jurisdiction even as against the objection of the trustee,<sup>43</sup> and it is held that a voluntary appearance and submission of issues to the referee and the court is a waiver of the right to a plenary suit,<sup>44</sup> and that consent to the jurisdiction may be inferred from the fact that the claimant acted under an order without seeking to review it.<sup>45</sup>

In view of the provisions of section 23b, it would seem that, though consent is necessary to confer jurisdiction in the case of an adverse claim, yet, such consent having been given, a summary proceeding is proper.

Objection to summary proceedings cannot be considered as waived by a denial of the material allegations of the trustee's petition and the making of affirmative allegations after the objection to the jurisdiction has been overruled.<sup>46</sup>

§ 1173. — Ancillary jurisdiction.

Inasmuch as the process of the bankruptcy court is restricted to the territorial limits of the district, an order for the delivery of property to the trustee cannot be made against an adverse claimant residing outside of the district; the proper course being to institute ancillary proceedings in the district wherein such claimant resides.<sup>47</sup> "While a summary proceeding to collect property belonging to the estate of the bankrupt which is in the possession of a stranger who resides outside of the territorial limits of the court of original jurisdiction is ancillary in character, nevertheless it presents a completely distinct and separable controversy, and, therefore, one which must be determined by the court within whose jurisdiction the property is located and the respondent resides."<sup>48</sup> District courts have the power to determine adverse claims to property seized by them in the exercise of their ancillary jurisdiction.<sup>49</sup>

§ 1174. — Jurisdiction of referee.

Where property is in the possession of a bankrupt at the time of the bankruptcy proceedings, and passes as part of his estate into the possession of the trustee in bankruptcy, and a third person claims an interest therein, the referee may, by a summary proceeding, require such third person to appear in the bankruptcy court, present his claim, and adjudicate the rights of the parties in respect thereto.<sup>50</sup>

Where the property is in the possession of a third person the referee may make inquiry to ascertain whether an adverse claim to property in possession of the claimant exists. Where a claim is merely colorable, he may compel the delivery of the property to the trustee.<sup>51</sup> But unless he can find it merely colorable, he has no jurisdiction to proceed further. He cannot hear and determine its merits under a summary petition, if there is a real controversy as to the merits.<sup>52</sup> The trustee cannot enlarge the referee's jurisdiction merely by alleging that the claim under which the property is held has no merits or is fraudulent, or by calling it "merely colorable," when no other reasons appear for so describing it than its alleged want of merit or fraudulent character.<sup>53</sup>

§ 1175. Compelling completion of contract by summary proceedings.

The bankruptcy court has power to compel, by summary proceedings, the completion of a contract of purchase from one of its officers.<sup>54</sup> One who has purchased real property from the bankrupt a long time prior to bankruptcy and has been in possession ever since the purchase has a title superior to that of the trustee though no conveyance thereof has ever been made,

The question of title to land should be determined by a plenary suit in a proper court and not upon affidavits.<sup>56</sup>

§ 1177. Compelling surrender of property.

§ 1178. — In possession or control of bankrupt.

A referee<sup>57</sup> or a court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction and power to order a bankrupt to pay over to his trustee money, or other property, found to be in his possession or control, and properly belonging to his estate in bankruptcy, and, if the bankrupt fails to obey such order, he may be committed as for a contempt until he complies, upon motion of the trustee.<sup>58</sup> Thus, where the court of bankruptcy finds a transfer of property by a bankrupt in fraud of creditors, the property still remaining in bankrupt's hands, it must be turned over to the trustee,<sup>59</sup> but no such order can be made until the issue is squarely raised between the trustee and the bankrupt, as to whether the bankrupt has in his possession or under his control such money or property;<sup>60</sup> nor unless the testimony proves beyond a reasonable doubt that the same is in fact in his possession or under his control.<sup>61</sup> To sustain such order it must appear, first, that the

In the absence of concealment or fraud, the court can only order the delivery of property which the bankrupt is physically able to deliver, having the same in his possession or control,<sup>63</sup> and if the bankrupt absolutely denies having it and the evidence to the contrary is only inferential, and there is any reasonable doubt as to bankrupt's ability to comply with the order, it should not be made.<sup>64</sup> The fact that the bankrupt accounts falsely for the disposition of his money, or does not satisfactorily disclose the uses of it, or evades the exhibition of his conduct in the premises, may indicate that he has defrauded his creditors, but is not sufficient to justify and order to turn over assets under the penalties for contempt unless it is clearly shown that the property is in his possession.<sup>65</sup> The court may, however, render the order without definite proof that the assets are actually in the bankrupt's possession or subject to his control, if from the facts presented no other reasonable conclusion is deducible.<sup>66</sup> him to turn over the property is proper.<sup>67</sup> The presumption is one of fact varying in weight. The burden is upon the bankrupt to satisfactorily account for the non-production of the property, but in assuming such burden he is entitled to the benefit of a reasonable doubt.<sup>68</sup> The conclusion of the referee that the bankrupt had certain property under his control at the date of the filing of the petition and is concealing same is entitled to great weight.<sup>69</sup>

The summary jurisdiction of the court cannot be invoked to compel the bankrupt to deliver the property of a third person in his possession to the trustee for the benefit of the owner,<sup>74</sup> but the fact that the money sought to be obtained is carried in a bank account labelled with the bankrupt's name as "manager" is not conclusive that the ownership of the same is not in the bankrupt individually.<sup>75</sup> The bankrupt may be ordered to restore money which he has paid to himself after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, as trustee of a corporation whose money he had improperly used,<sup>76</sup> and where third persons alleged to have an interest in a fund held by the bankrupt have not attempted to enforce any trust in their behalf, but have put in their claims against the bankrupt estate as general creditors, it is no answer to an order requiring the bankrupt to pay over the fund that such third persons have an interest therein.<sup>77</sup> render property alleged to belong to the bankrupt should not be made unless the property can be sufficiently identified to enable the marshal to take it into possession,<sup>82</sup> and unless the party is physically able to comply therewith,<sup>83</sup> and his possession and control of the property are shown beyond a reasonable doubt.<sup>84</sup> So, the fact that the court does not believe the statements of a witness as to what became of property of the bankrupt, is not sufficient basis for an order requiring him to turn over the property, where none of the property is actually traced into his possession.<sup>85</sup>

When property of the bankrupt estate is traced to the recent possession of a third person it is presumed that it remains in his possession or under his control until he satisfactorily accounts for its disposition or disappearance. The burden is upon him to satisfactorily so account for it, and he cannot escape an order for its surrender by simply denying under oath that he has it, or that it is the property of the bankrupt estate.<sup>86</sup> Any proceeding to compel the bankrupt to turn over property which was concealed by him or for him may be based upon an examination of the bankrupt's agent as to what disposition he made of the bankrupt's property. But until the property or its proceeds is traced through the hands of the bankrupt, and until he avoids responsibility by showing that his control over it had terminated, because it had reached the possession of his agent and had been converted or stolen, and was hence out of his own control, the agent cannot be compelled to account for the property, unless the property or its proceeds be specifically shown to be in his hands.<sup>87</sup>

Partner withdrawing his interest in firm shortly before bankruptcy of firm and in contemplation thereof required to nership alone, the court may take such proceedings as are necessary to ascertain what assets of an objecting partner are available and to subject such as are available to the payment of partnership creditors.<sup>89</sup>

The wife of the bankrupt will not be ordered to turn over money saved by her from an allowance made for household expenses where the circumstances negative any trust relationship.<sup>90</sup> An order enjoining the wife of the bankrupt from disposing of property in her possession may be discontinued during the pendency of a rule to show cause where both the bankrupt and his wife file answers denying that the property belongs to him.<sup>91</sup>

The bankrupt court may order the return of property forcibly taken from its possession,<sup>92</sup> and where a creditor wrongfully receives payment of its claim from a receiver, the court has jurisdiction to order the amount received restored upon condition that it be shown that there was no existing indebtedness at the time of the payment, and to determine in a summary proceeding the issue of the existence of such indebtedness.<sup>93</sup> But the court cannot by a summary order compel a bank acting as depository of bankruptcy funds to pay over the funds deposited with it, especially where the bank is itself insolvent.<sup>94</sup>

§ 1180. — The application or petition.

If it is determined that the facts justify the institution of summary proceedings, then the trustee should demand of the bankrupt such money or property as it is thought he is withholding, and upon his refusal to turn over the same, a petition should be filed setting forth the claim, demand and refusal, and seeking an order against the bankrupt to show cause why he should not be ordered to pay the sum to the trustee, and in default of same to be punished for contempt.<sup>95</sup> The bankrupt is entitled to a distinct issue upon petition and answer and testirestore same to partnership trustee. In re Rosenthal, 200 Fed. 190, 29 A. B. R. 515.

mony taken thereunder,<sup>96</sup> and the petition should contain definite allegations so that the bankrupt may know what he is called upon to produce.<sup>97</sup> It should allege that the bankrupt has assets of the estate in his possession or under his control, and should describe or identify the assets, or so point out the source from which the petitioner claims they came, as to give the bankrupt fair notice of the charge.<sup>98</sup> It is held, however, that the fact that the petition is indefinite or uncertain in its averments or that no answer is filed or issue joined upon the petition does not deprive the referee of jurisdiction.<sup>99</sup>

A petition for an order to turn over which does not show that the respondent has possession is insufficient.<sup>1</sup> The petition for an order to compel an officer of the bankrupt to turn over property need not negative the fact that the officer holds the property adversely.<sup>2</sup>

§ 1181. — Demurrer.

A demurrer is improper in summary proceedings.<sup>3</sup>

A demurrer to the trustee's petition, if interposed, is waived by answering.<sup>4</sup>

Where a demurrer to a motion of the trustee for an order for the delivery of property is overruled, the parties are entitled to an opportunity to be heard upon the issue tendered by the motion.<sup>5</sup>

§ 1182. — Notice of hearing.

Unless the property is of an exceedingly perishable nature, notice and an opportunity to be heard ought to be given the bankrupt or person in whose possession the property is found.<sup>6</sup>

§ 1183. — Reference.

The subject of a direction to the bankrupt to turn over assets may be referred to a special master.<sup>7</sup>

§ 1184. — Evidence and jury trials.

It lies within the discretion of the referee to determine whether the testimony shall be heard orally, taken in long hand, or written out in the form of stenographer's minutes. If the bankrupt desires the testimony to be perpetuated, the obligation is on him to provide the means therefor especially where the trustee has no funds in his hands.<sup>8</sup> The testimony of the bankrupt, or the officers of a bankrupt corporation taken under section 7a or 21a is admissible, but that of other witnesses is not.<sup>9</sup>

A jury trial is proper to try issues of fact raised in summary proceedings.<sup>10</sup>

§ 1185. — Findings of referee and order of court.

The referee should not confine himself to a summary of the testimony and a statement of his belief therein, but should make definite findings of fact.<sup>11</sup> After all the evidence offered by both sides has been received, the referee makes up his findings. If he is of the opinion that the allegations of the trustee's petition have been sustained, in whole or in part, he so finds, and he thereupon orders the bankrupt by some certain date to turn over to the trustee the assets of the estate which he holds the bankrupt unlawfully retained and still has in his possession or control. The bankrupt may ask a review of these findings or he may not. If he does and the referee's order is confirmed, or if he does not, the same procedure in substance follows. Before he can be treated in contempt, he must be notified to show cause why he should not be attached and committed for failing to comply with the order of the court. If he shows cause, the court is bound to hear any new evidence he may offer.<sup>12</sup> An order which leaves the question of the bankrupt's default and his consequent contempt to be determined without further action by the court is erroneous.<sup>13</sup> An order allowing the bankrupt additional time to comply with an order of the referee to turn over assets is in effect an affirmance of the order of the referee, and the court by striking out the provision in the referee's order, "that in default thereof let the above-named bankrupt be committed for contempt" does not adjudicate that the bankrupt should not be punished for contempt, but leaves such a motion to be brought on at a subsequent period, if the bankrupt did not avail himself of the opportunity to pay within the extended time.<sup>14</sup>

The order to turn over assets must be supported by the pleadings,<sup>15</sup> and should direct the bankrupt to turn over the money to the trustee.<sup>16</sup> It is not necessary to do more than describe the property generally in the order.<sup>17</sup> An order directing the bankrupt to turn over certain goods or pay to the trustee their estimated value is not erroneous.<sup>18</sup>

The court cannot make a summary order which is directly enforceable outside of its territorial jurisdiction.<sup>19</sup>

An order directing the delivery of "merchandise" by the bankrupt, which does not point out or describe the articles, by kind or class, is insufficient. In re Kramer & Muchnick, 209 Fed. 627, 31 A. B. R. 377.

ARBITRATION AND COMPROMISE

§ 1186. Rights and duties of trustee

§ 1187. When compromise granted.

§ 1188. Compounding claims.

§ 1189. Plan of settlement not authorized.

§ 1190. Application for compromise or arbitration.

§ 1191. — In general.

§ 1192. — To whom addressed.

§ 1193. Selection of arbitrators.

§ 1194. Findings of arbitrators.

§ 1186. Rights and duties of trustee.

Pursuant to the court's direction, the trustee may submit any controversy arising during the settlement of the estate to arbitration;<sup>1</sup> and, with the approval of the court, compromise any controversy upon such terms as he deems for the best interests of the estate.<sup>2</sup> Creditors representing the majority in number and amount, however, cannot compel him to compromise a claim, though where they have expressed their disapproval of the commencement of an action on the claim, the court may direct the delivery of a bond by the creditors opposing the compromise, saving the estate from costs, expenses, and counsel fees of litigation.<sup>3</sup> The bankrupt cannot maintain an action in a state court to restrain the trustee from carrying out a compromise.<sup>4</sup>

§ 1187. When compromise granted.

Section 27 authorizes the compromise of claims of trustees against third persons to recover moneys due bankrupt or controversies between such trustees and persons holding or claiming adversely to them, as a claim by a trustee to an accounting by a preferential transferee and fraudulent grantee of bankrupt;<sup>5</sup> or of controversies between trustee and a stranger to the bankruptcy proceedings;<sup>6</sup> or at law or in equity, as distinguished from proceedings in bankruptcy, between a trustee as such and adverse claimants concerning the property acquired or claimed by the trustee.<sup>7</sup> Notwithstanding the fact that the creditors may by vote approve a proposed compromise submitted by a debtor of the estate, such action is not conclusive, for the court may for good cause disallow it.<sup>8</sup>

Any agreement of compromise with reference to payments or transfers held to be preferential, or any compromise with regard to claims against the estate which will increase the asset of and be a benefit to the estate will be approved, but if it is coupled with an agreement not to furnish evidence in a criminal prosecution against the bankrupt, or in any way stifle a prosecution that may be contemplated, the court will not approve the agreement, not interfere in any way with the disposition of money obtained from third parties as a result of the agreement.<sup>9</sup>

§ 1188. Compounding claims.

Whenever it may be deemed for the benefit of the estate to compound and settle any debts or other claims due or belonging to the bankrupt, the trustee or bankrupt or any creditor who has proved his debt may file his petition therefor addressed to the judge or referee and thereupon he will appoint a suitable time and place for the hearing thereof, notice of which must be given as the court may direct, presumably at least ten days, so that all creditors and other persons interested may appear and show cause, if any they have, why an order should not be passed by the court upon the petition authorizing such act on the part of the trustees.<sup>10</sup>

Under the act of 1867, it was held that an assignee could not be authorized to compound debts for the purpose of compromising the same under direction of a committee of creditors, where all creditors did not vote when such committee was appointed, but that each case must be presented separately and the facts making the compromise properly stated.<sup>11</sup>

If after a proposition of settlement has been made a trustee applies for instructions as to a suit the creditors wish brought, he must show that a better result is likely to be obtained by suit than by accepting the proposed settlement and that he will probably succeed, though he is not expected to demonstrate that he will certainly do so.<sup>12</sup>

§ 1189. Plan of settlement not authorized.

Where a plan for the settlement and distribution of the bankrupt's estate not within the provisions of the act is proposed, it is only justifiable if all known creditors consent; and is liable to be interfered with if other creditors appear within the year, for such creditors are entitled to their day in court and to their ratable share of the undistributed assets; and, on a motion by such creditors to set aside an order authorizing the execution of such plan, the distribution of the estate must be arrested until their claims can be liquidated or found invalid, but their merits are not to be passed upon on such motion but in the regular course of the proceedings.<sup>13</sup>

The court cannot compel a creditor to consent to have all the bankrupt estate transferred to a corporation and accept in settlement of his claim the unsecured obligations of the new corporation payable in the future.<sup>14</sup>

§ 1190. Application for compromise or arbitration.

§ 1191. — In general.

Sections 26 and 27 afford an expeditious and inexpensive mode of adjusting, without litigation, many of the contested claims arising in the settlement of an estate. The application of the trustee for a compromise or to submit a controversy to the determination of arbitrators must clearly and distinctly set forth the subject-matter of the controversy and the reasons why he thinks it proper and for the best interests of the estate to have the controversy so settled.<sup>15</sup> The court may hear testimony and arguments of counsel upon an application for submission to arbitration, and though there is no provision for notice to creditors of such hearings or proceedings, the better practice is to give notice. Creditors, however, must, by express provision of the act, have at least ten days' notice by mail of the proposed compromise of any controversy.<sup>16</sup>

§ 1192. — To whom addressed.

This application may be addressed to the court of bankruptcy or to the referee, since he is required generally to perform the duties of such court<sup>17</sup> and is comprehended within the definition of the term "court."<sup>18</sup>

Under the act of 1867 the application had to be made to a judge.<sup>19</sup>

§ 1193. Selection of arbitrators.

"Three arbitrators shall be chosen by mutual consent, or one by the trustee, one by the other party to the controversy, and the third by the two so chosen, or if they fail to agree in five days after their appointment the court shall appoint the third arbitrator."<sup>20</sup> It is unlawful for the third arbitrator to be selected by the two contending parties.<sup>21</sup>

§ 1194. Findings of arbitrators.

"The written finding of the arbitrators, or a majority of them, as to the issues presented, may be filed in court and shall have like force and effect as the verdict of a jury."<sup>22</sup> Such finding when so filed is necessarily reviewable and liable to be set aside

He may, under the direction of the court, submit any controversy arising in the settlement of demands against the estate, or of debts due it, to the determination of arbitrators, to be chosen by him, and the other party to the controversy, and may, under such direction, compound and settle any such controversy, by agreement with the or adjudged upon by the court as a verdict would be. Consequently in a case where a few days before filing his petition a bankrupt gave a mortgage to one of his creditors which on being submitted to arbitrators was held not given with intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors, such finding was held unwarranted and set aside as its necessary effect was to prefer the mortgagee and to hinder and delay others, and such must be presumed to have been his intent.<sup>23</sup>

§ 1195. Statute strictly construed.

The provisions of the act as to compositions are to be strictly construed.<sup>1</sup>

§ 1196. Offer of composition.

§ 1197. — Procedure in general.

“A bankrupt may offer, either before or after adjudication, terms of composition to his creditors after, but not before, he has been examined in open court or at a meeting of his creditors and has filed in court the schedule of his property and list of his creditors, required to be filed by bankrupts.”<sup>2</sup>

2—Section 12a, Act of 1898 as amended June 25, 1910. The words “either before or after adjudication” were added by the Amendment of 1910. Act of 1867 contained no analogous provision to this, but by the amendment of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 182, par. 17) terms of composition might be offered either before or after adjudication, following largely the provision in the 126th section of the English Act of 1869, which, however, was open to serious objection.

The provisions of the two acts may be found in In re Scott, 15 N. B. R. 73, Fed. Cas. No. 12519. Under the amendment of 1874, a composition might be confirmed before an examination of the bankrupt, although a petition for a composition might be included in the petition for adjudication, or presented at any time before, in which event a meeting of the creditors was necessary for the examination of the debtor and the filing of a schedule of assets (In re Spades, 13 N. B. R. 72, 6 Biss. 448, Fed. Cas. No. 13196). If a resolution of composition was adopted, a reasonable time might be allowed to secure the additional signatures necessary to confirm it (Idem; In re Spillman, 13 N. B. R. 214, Fed. Cas. No.

The offer may be made to the referee, and the examination and filing of schedules referred to in the act as a condition precedent to an offer may be had before him,<sup>3</sup> but questions arising thereafter out of the application of the bankrupt for the confirmation of the composition must be heard by the court of bankruptcy and not by the referee.<sup>4</sup> Prior to the amendment of 1910 a composition could not be offered and accepted before adjudication,<sup>5</sup> but any one adjudged bankrupt could offer terms of composition.<sup>6</sup>

The calling of a special meeting of creditors to receive an offer of composition is not required, and a submission of such offer to the creditors at their first meeting after an examination of the bankrupt is competent and sufficient; such submission being within the terms of the notice prescribed, which states that the purpose of the meeting embraces the transaction of "such other business as may properly come before said meeting."<sup>7</sup>

Upon the filing of an application for the confirmation of a composition a time and place should be fixed for the hearing thereon and of any objections thereto and, unless waived, ten days' notice thereof given.<sup>8</sup> It should not be confirmed where there was no general notice to creditors of its terms and it had been offered by bankrupt at the first meeting to certain creditors whose claims had been allowed at that meeting and who accepted it, being at that time but not at the time of the hearing a majority in number and value of those whose claims had been allowed.<sup>9</sup>

§ 1198. — Petition for composition.

The bankrupt must make an offer of specific terms upon which he shall have back his estate. He must get the consent of half the creditors who have filed claims. Then he may file a petition and have the remainder accept the terms, if he can induce the court to so order.<sup>10</sup> The petition should set forth the number of creditors to whom presented, the proposed percentage of payment, and conclude with a prayer for a meeting of creditors to consider its terms.<sup>11</sup> Under the act of 1867 it was held that on filing a petition for a composition, the court would call a meeting of creditors.<sup>12</sup>

§ 1199. — The statements or schedules.

The schedules the bankrupt is required to file are the same as those prescribed when filing a voluntary petition. If the bankrupt in composition understates a debt unintentionally,<sup>13</sup> or omits a claim which he believes, on the advice of counsel, to be worthless, or omits an asset from the statement without fraud and with knowledge of the creditors,<sup>14</sup> or makes a mistake without fraud in the statement of the amount due a creditor,<sup>15</sup> or states the value of his real estate as unknown,<sup>16</sup> such defects will not vitiate the composition. The statement of composition should conform to the schedule in bankruptcy,<sup>17</sup> and debtor's testimony under oath at a meeting of creditors may be considered as part of his statement.<sup>18</sup>

§ 1201. — Necessity of meeting.

A submission of an offer of composition may be made at the first meeting of creditors after the examination of the bankrupt.<sup>19</sup> Since the bankrupt's examination and the filing of his schedule must now precede the offer of composition, no necessity exists for a subsequent meeting of creditors, unless for conference, though Official Form 60 (§ 1815 post) evidently contemplates one after the offer of composition has been presented to the creditors. The rules, forms and orders can not add to or subtract from the act and must yield when any inconsistency appears as here.<sup>20</sup> But, if upon presentation of such an offer to all the creditors collectively, or separately, a majority in number of those whose claims have been allowed and a majority in amount of such claims accept the offer, no reason would exist for the meeting. In such case as soon as the consideration to be paid by the bankrupt to his creditors, and the money necessary to pay all debts which have priority and the costs, have been properly deposited, an application for confirmation, alleging such facts, may be presented to the judge, by whom it must be "heard and decided," though he may refer the application or any issue arising thereon to the referee,<sup>21</sup> and set a time for a hearing thereon. But a composition cannot be confirmed until after it has been presented to all of the creditors of the bankrupt, whether they have proved their debts or not, and has been accepted in writing by the requisite majority in number and amount of those whose claims have been allowed.<sup>22</sup> It is not essential that proofs of claims shall be made before or at, the first meeting, but may be made at any time within a year after the adjudication.<sup>23</sup>

§ 1202. — Voting at meeting.<sup>23a</sup>

A submission of an offer of composition at the first meeting of creditors after the examination of the bankrupt is sufficient and is in law a submission to all the creditors<sup>24</sup> and they may pass a resolution as part of the proceedings that in their opinion such composition is desirable and in the interests of creditors.<sup>25</sup> It has been held that a creditor who was present at such meeting and filed his proof of claim, but was not present at the session when the vote was taken on the composition,<sup>26</sup> or failed to act thereon,<sup>27</sup> should be counted as voting against it, but such is not true under the present law. Only creditors present in person or represented by proper proxy, or who have signified their acceptance or rejection in writing, should be counted. An objection to a claim and the right to vote thereon made for the first time at a composition meeting, has been held to be too late.<sup>28</sup>

Only those who prove and have their claims allowed<sup>29</sup> can vote at a composition meeting.<sup>30</sup> The fact that a creditor<sup>31</sup> has bought a debt to prevent a composition will not prevent him from voting on it, if he have no fraudulent motive.<sup>32</sup> In voting, a creditor to whom a number of claims have been assigned, will have but one vote.<sup>33</sup>

Creditors who have signed an acceptance of an offer of composition and procured the court to act thereon will not be permitted to withdraw their signatures; unless it appears that they were procured by fraud or misrepresentation.<sup>34</sup>

§ 1203. Rights of secured creditors.

Under the act of 1898, secured creditors may vote and their claims will be counted in computing the number and amount but only for the excess over the security,<sup>35</sup> but where one considers himself fully secured, but is not, he cannot be counted to make a majority.<sup>36</sup> A secured creditor taking no part in composition proceedings though present, is entitled to the agreed percentage on his unpaid balance after exhausting his security;<sup>37</sup> or may have his security valued and come in for the difference.<sup>38</sup> If a creditor holds a bond, mortgage or other security for his debt, where no present liability has arisen, and the value of the security is not capable of present determination, because the debt is subject solely to the contingency of a deficiency arising upon foreclosure, such deficiency being merely contingent and not provable, the holder of such security is neither a necessary nor a proper party to a composition.<sup>39</sup>

§ 1204. Rights of litigating creditors.

Attaching creditors have no right to participate in a composition meeting<sup>40</sup> unless they first relinquish their security.<sup>41</sup> Under the act of 1874, it was held that when the debtor filed a petition in bankruptcy and also for composition and was not adjudicated, and a creditor began suit before composition approved, the debtor was not entitled to restrain the creditor.<sup>42</sup>

§ 1205. Rights of minority creditors.

A creditor is not bound to accede to a composition,<sup>43</sup> nor is he legally or morally censurable because he refuses to unite with others, if his refusal proceeds from want of confidence in the debtor;<sup>44</sup> but a minority of creditors will not be permitted to defeat a proposed composition because, if defeated, some special benefit will accrue to them,<sup>45</sup> but they may examine the bankrupt before the composition is confirmed.<sup>46</sup> It must appear that wrong has been done such minority by the vote of the majority on the composition before the court will interfere;<sup>47</sup> and the determination that a proper proportion of the creditors have agreed to the composition cannot be impeached in a collateral action.<sup>48</sup>

§ 1206. Partnership compositions.

Partnerships may enter into compositions with their creditors, the same as individuals. When one partner proposes a composition, the majority in number and amount of creditors, whose acceptance in writing is required, may be composed of individual and partnership creditors, whose claims have been allowed,<sup>49</sup>

but a special partner would seem to have no right to take part in composition proceedings by a firm.<sup>50</sup> An individual member may properly propose a composition to his and firm creditors, and such composition will be valid if accepted by the requisite number.<sup>51</sup> A partner cannot have a composition set aside and his firm put into bankruptcy by setting up his own fraud in effecting the composition.<sup>52</sup>

The acceptance of a composition offered by a partner is not a bar to a claim against the estate of the other partner arising out of wrongful conversion for which all partners are liable jointly and severally as tort-feasors.<sup>53</sup>

§ 1207. Consideration.

§ 1208. — Nature.

A composition in money may be offered, and the money required may be acquired by the bankrupt by the use of his credit.<sup>54</sup> The consideration is not, however, limited to money but must be something equivalent thereto which may ultimately be convertible into money and extends to reasonably safe securities or promises to pay, such as a good business man would naturally accept in payment of merchandise sold.<sup>55</sup> A composition providing for deferred payments or promises to pay,<sup>56</sup> evidenced by time notes or other negotiable paper,<sup>57</sup> is not inconsistent with a statute requiring payment "in money," but a composition deed that provides for preferred payments evidenced by notes, "to be satisfactorily endorsed," is too indefinite and void.<sup>58</sup> The court cannot compel a creditor to consent to have all the bankrupt's estate transferred to a corporation and accept in settlement of his claim obligations of the new corporation, payable at a future date.<sup>59</sup>

Delay in paying notes occasioned by legal difficulties will not prejudice bankrupt's right as to creditors who have been paid;<sup>60</sup> and a composition will not be deemed uncertain because payment is not secured.<sup>61</sup> A proposed composition, payable in thirty days, on condition that bankrupt's property be surrendered and all suits discontinued, is not improper.<sup>62</sup>

Under the act of 1874, it was held that a composition which provided that the payment should be guaranteed by a satisfactory bond to a committee of creditors might be confirmed,<sup>63</sup> which would also probably now suffice.

A composition is illegal if part of the consideration therefor is the payment of one of the bankrupt's creditors in full.<sup>64</sup> A composition agreement whereby the bankrupt offers to pay his debts with worthless stock of a corporation of which he holds the majority of stock, the acceptance of which will impose a large personal liability, will not be confirmed against the objection of a creditor, although a large majority of the creditors have assented thereto.<sup>65</sup>

§ 1209. — Amount.

The amount of the consideration must be at least as much as the creditors could reasonably expect to receive if the estate was administered in bankruptcy;<sup>66</sup> and since it is to be presumed that the owner of a business can make more out of it than another who is a stranger, though possibly of greater business capacity, a bankrupt can afford to offer his creditors more than they could obtain by the administration of the estate in bankruptcy and yet have a margin left for himself.<sup>67</sup> rule in composition proceedings, the consideration must be pro rata on all the debts scheduled by the bankrupt.<sup>68</sup>

§ 1210. — Deposit.

Before the application to confirm is made, an amount sufficient to cover costs, priority claims and expenses, and the percentage named on scheduled claims,<sup>69</sup> whether filed before or after the acceptance of the composition agreement,<sup>70</sup> must be deposited in a depository designated by the judge.<sup>71</sup> The cost of the proceeding and the deposit must be designated by the judge and not the referee, and must be subject to his order.<sup>72</sup> The deposit must provide for the payment of taxes legally due and owing,<sup>73</sup> but secured claims not liquidated need not be considered in fixing the amount thereof.<sup>74</sup>

The securities tendered in compliance with a composition agreement will not be impounded to await the outcome of a suit to establish a lien against the property of the bankrupt.<sup>75</sup>

The amendment of 1874 provided that "the composition should, subject to the priorities declared in the act, provide for a pro rata payment, etc." It was held under that provision that priority of payment out of the assets of the debtor was meant and, where there were no assets, there could be no priority and therefore, the means of making the composition being derived from other sources, debts having priority under the act stood no higher than the claims of general creditors.<sup>76</sup> In view of the change of phraseology, and that the law must be strictly construed,<sup>77</sup> the application to confirm can be made only under the circumstances stated in the act, including the deposit of the ### § 1211. Confirmation of compositions.

§ 1212. — Time of application.

An application for confirmation of a composition may be made after, but not before, the deposit of the consideration.<sup>79</sup>

§ 1213. — Hearing and objections.

Unless waived in writing at least ten days' notice must be given to creditors, by mail, of all hearings upon applications for confirmation of compositions;<sup>80</sup> and where objection is made to the confirmation, the creditor is required to appear on the day of the return of the order to show cause and within ten days thereafter, unless the time is enlarged by special order of the judge, file a specification in writing of the ground of his opposition.<sup>81</sup>

Objections as to regularity of a composition and as to what is for the best interest of the parties can be presented at the hearing of confirmation.<sup>82</sup> A "party in interest," being any one affected, is entitled to be heard so that any one having a provable claim, although it has not been proven and allowed,<sup>83</sup> or an assignee of a claim,<sup>84</sup> or a partially secured creditor;<sup>85</sup> but not one fully secured<sup>86</sup> should be heard.

It is the duty of the court to examine objections of a minority fully as to requisite number,<sup>88</sup> and to investigate the facts independently of any conclusion or agreement the creditors may have made, and it may investigate whether objections are well founded, though the creditor has withdrawn his objection.<sup>89</sup>

§ 1214. — Power of referee.

The law expressly excepts from the duties of the referee all connection with bankrupt's application for approval of composition,<sup>90</sup> but such applications or any specified issue arising thereon may be referred to the referee to ascertain and report the facts,<sup>91</sup> and upon questions arising, the referee, when requested, should appoint a day for bringing the composition before the court, and to issue the required notices to creditors, suggesting in his report any legal questions arising upon the composition papers.<sup>92</sup> He has, however, power to conduct inquiries and adjourn meetings,<sup>93</sup> and examine disputed claims and report thereon;<sup>94</sup> but the court may re-open questions in regard to his ruling on all points.<sup>95</sup>

§ 1215. — When confirmed in general.

The court has no power to confirm or reject a composition except pursuant to section 12d of the law,<sup>96</sup> which provides that "The judge shall confirm a composition if satisfied that (1) it is for the best interests of the creditors; (2) the bankrupt has not been guilty of any of the acts or failed to perform any of the duties which would be a bar to his discharge; and (3) the offer and its acceptance are in good faith and have not been made or procured except as herein provided, or by any means, promises, or acts herein forbidden." If the papers presented to the judge on the hearing of the application to confirm show that, after his examination and the filing of his schedule of property and list of creditors, the bankrupt offered a composition which was presented to all his creditors; that a majority in number and amount of those whose claims have been allowed, agreed to accept such composition; that the consideration agreed to be paid and the money necessary to pay all debts which have priority and the costs of the proceedings have been deposited in the designated depository; and it does not appear on the face of the papers that the amount the creditors will receive by such composition is less than they would receive by the administration of the estate in bankruptcy or that there is any fraud or other valid grounds for refusing to confirm such composition, it should be confirmed, as of course, that is, if a prima facie case is made, unless the dissenting creditors have filed proper objections and support them by satisfactory evidence. The burden of proving the existence of valid grounds for refusing to confirm the composition is on the dissenting creditors<sup>97</sup> and the decision of the majority in number and amount accepting the composition will not be disturbed except on sufficient evidence unless manifest fraud, accident or mistake is shown.

A provision in the composition that an assignment by the bankrupt within four months of the filing of the petition shall be sanctioned does not invalidate the agreement,<sup>98</sup> nor can the fact that a creditor has through accident or mistake failed to file his claim against the bankrupt estate within the statutory period be urged as an objection to the confirmation.<sup>99</sup> Objections to the confirmation of the composition have been overruled where it was contended, for instance, that a corporation was not entitled to the privileges of composition;<sup>1</sup> that property in name of bankrupt's wife should have been included in the schedules;<sup>2</sup> that the estate could pay more than the composition;<sup>3</sup> that debtor paid more in composition than his estate would pay in bankruptcy;<sup>4</sup> or that he was excused from examination on account of illness.<sup>5</sup>

Objections to the confirmation of a composition have been sustained where the trustees were to leave the estate in the hands of the president of a corporation who was a defaulter and not trustworthy;<sup>6</sup> or where deferred payments were provided and the property was to be returned to bankrupt, he not being trustworthy;<sup>7</sup> or where the money deposited was not sufficient to pay the costs, or notice of the proceedings had not been given the creditors, although a majority of those who had notice and proved their claims had accepted.<sup>8</sup> The composition cannot be confirmed if the statement of assets and debts shows that the requisite proportion of creditors have not accepted it;<sup>9</sup> but it is too late to raise an objection to the right of a creditor to vote for the first time at the confirmation hearing.<sup>10</sup>

§ 1216. — Best interests of creditors.

Scotland adopted the French cession, the Roman cessio bonorum, and, while her courts passed on the reasonableness of a composition, the tendency was to uphold it if fairly adopted. England introduced insolvent laws later and there the decision of the creditors was accepted, unless fraudulently procured, though, if grossly unreasonable, it was presumptively fraudulent.<sup>11</sup> While, in England, the court will closely scrutinize a composition and must be first satisfied that it is for the creditor's benefit;<sup>12</sup> here a composition will not be confirmed if it appears not to be for the interest of the creditors, no matter how small a proportion dissent.<sup>13</sup> How far the court should go into the merits of the composition to determine its advisability for the creditors as between themselves and reject it against the wish of the majority as not for the interest of the creditors is an open question. The present act expressly requires the judge to be satisfied that the composition is for the best interests of the creditors, thus laying on the court the difficult burden of instructing parties as to their own interests, which practically will usually be discharged by adopting the creditors' view, in the absence of fraud or collusion and when the offered composition is equally or more advantageous pecuniarily to the creditors than the administration of the estate in bankruptcy would be;<sup>14</sup> but if the offered composition would not yield the creditors as much as the administration of the estate in bankruptcy, the composition should not be confirmed. A great variance between the probable value of the assets and the composition would justify the court in acting on its own motion, though an apparent discrepancy between the estimated value of the assets and the composition is not sufficient,<sup>15</sup> and it has been held, that a discrepancy of as much as 15 per cent would not warrant the court in overruling the discretion of the creditors.<sup>16</sup>

In determining whether the composition will yield the creditors more, or less, than the administration of the estate in bankruptcy, the costs of such administration, the fact that no one can ordinarily administer a man's affairs as well as himself, the delay caused thereby, and the fact that a forced sale brings less than a private sale must all be taken into consideration.

In ascertaining if the composition is for the best interests of the creditors the fact that there is no security for the payment of the composition notes should be considered;<sup>17</sup> or that the debtor proposes advance in per cent of composition;<sup>18</sup> or that the consideration which is offered is satisfactory to the requisite majority of creditors.<sup>19</sup> Either party may furnish evidence on the question whether the composition is for the best interests of the creditors,<sup>20</sup> but the offer and its acceptance by the majority of the creditors indicate that it is for the interest of the creditors until attacked by the dissentients who may rely on the record and need not always produce extrinsic proof.<sup>21</sup> The approval of the majority of the creditors is prima facie evidence that the composition is for the best interests of the estate and the burden is upon those who attack the composition,<sup>22</sup> and unless specific errors can be pointed out on the confirmation of a composition, whether it is for the best interests of the creditors will not be inquired into by the appellate court.<sup>23</sup>

§ 1217. — Acts in bar of confirmation.

Guilt of any of the acts or failure to perform any of the duties which would be a bar to discharge are expressly made a bar also to the confirmation of a composition. Those acts are the concealment of property from the trustee, making a false oath or presentation or use in composition of a false claim,<sup>24</sup> and fraudulently, and in contemplation of bankruptcy, destroying, concealing, or failing to keep books of account.<sup>25</sup> If the bankrupt has been guilty of any of the acts or failed to perform any of the duties named the judge must reject the composition, even if satisfied that it would be for the best interest of the estate not to do so.<sup>26</sup> Violation by the bankrupt of a criminal law of the state will not prevent the confirmation of a composition.<sup>27</sup>

The fact that a discharge has been refused is not an absolute bar to composition.<sup>28</sup> The fact that a discharge was barred by failure to apply for it in time would seem not to be one of the acts barring a confirmation, if a discharge could have been obtained if applied for in time, since the purpose is to prevent a bankrupt obtaining at his creditor's hands a discharge which his conduct prohibited his getting otherwise. Until there is an authoritative decision on the latter point, it is safer to apply for the confirmation of a composition before the expiration of such period; but the filing of an application within the period would suffice, the hearing and decision being held after its expiration.

The evasiveness of an answer by the bankrupt will not alone warrant the rejection of a composition on the ground of false oath. The false oath must have been knowingly and corruptly made.<sup>29</sup>

§ 1218. — Bad faith.

Absolute good faith is required of the bankrupt and all those connected with a composition, and, if the bankrupt has made false statements about his debts, or assets, or other creditors, or anything which may have influenced the making of the composition, or creditors have used improper means to induce others to accept or refrain from opposing a composition, it will not be confirmed.<sup>30</sup> As the court has no power to confirm or reject a composition, except pursuant to this section, and no power to set one aside unless fraud was practiced in securing it and knowledge of such fraud has come to the petitioners since such confirmation,<sup>31</sup> any objections consistent with this section, except those based on after discovered fraud, should be presented on the hearing to confirm and not a hearing to set aside. Where there is a discrepancy between the composition and the apparent value of bankrupt's property and other evidence of fraud, the composition should not be rejected without notice to the parties interested and taking into account the relations and relative number of creditors favoring the composition;<sup>32</sup> nor should the composition be rejected if, without fraudulent intent, assets were omitted, or non-existent debts inserted in the schedule, such errors not requiring a change in the terms of the composition, especially if the creditors knew of them when they accepted the composition; <sup>33</sup> nor because bankrupt is related to some of the accepted creditors, <sup>34</sup> nor because an indorsee on a note of the bankrupt advises him to accept a composition and such acceptance will not serve to discharge the indorsee. <sup>35</sup>

Confirmation should be refused if lack of good faith appears; as the giving of money to one creditor to induce him to sign; <sup>36</sup> or the purchase of claims to be used in favor of a composition unless there is clear proof that the motive was proper; or improperly inducing the withdrawal of opposition; or expectation of an advantage from accepting without any positive promise, or giving one creditor a secret benefit or advantage <sup>37</sup> or secret preference; <sup>38</sup> or promise to settle, accepting creditors' claims at expense of others; <sup>39</sup> or agreeing through sympathy or friendship for the bankrupt to take that which would not be for the interest of all the creditors. <sup>40</sup>

That the attorney for the receiver in bankruptcy after the examination of the bankrupt and his offer of composition, secured powers of attorney from creditors, and, as their attorney, voted in favor of a composition is no ground for refusing to confirm the composition, no fraud being practiced. <sup>41</sup>

While the fact that the bankrupt made a preferential transfer should not prevent the confirmation of a composition yet a composition should not be confirmed where it clearly appears that there have been preferential transfers which may be recovered by the trustee, and that the estate in hand with such preferences recovered and added, will net the creditors a greater percentage than offered in the proposed composition. <sup>42</sup>

§ 1219. — Frauds and omissions.

The court, on application to confirm should correct mistakes and expose and punish fraud and improper practices,<sup>43</sup> as where a creditor after receiving payment in full signs an agreement with other creditors to take seventy cents in the future; or where one creditor exacts an advantage not known or enjoyed by the others for uniting in the composition;<sup>44</sup> or where an agent in composition obtains the same by false representations;<sup>45</sup> or if a partner after composition, procures assignment of claims to a relative and then institutes proceedings to set aside the composition and put the firm in bankruptcy;<sup>46</sup> but a preferred creditor is liable for the amount of the advantage over others; and, if he pays, his original claim can be proved.<sup>47</sup>

A mis-statement of assets to warrant the refusal to confirm a composition must be materially false and have been intentionally made for the purpose of obtaining credit,<sup>48</sup> and credit must have been actually obtained by means of the untrue statement.<sup>49</sup>

§ 1220. — Order or decree of confirmation.

The confirmation need not be made at a meeting<sup>50</sup> and it is only necessary to record the decree containing the resolution.<sup>51</sup> position they are payable in their original amount;<sup>54</sup> but the tender of money according to the terms of the composition is equivalent to payment.<sup>55</sup>

An agreement of the trustee to guarantee to a certain creditor a certain dividend cannot be enforced against him, the agreement being void as against public policy.<sup>56</sup>

§ 1223. — Distribution of consideration.

The act provides that the consideration shall be distributed as the judge shall direct.<sup>57</sup> As the amount is fixed by the composition and as it must be paid to all the creditors pro rata<sup>58</sup> this provision can only mean that, upon the confirmation of the composition, the judge shall direct or order the distribution of the deposit, including debts having priority and costs, to be made and, in case no trustee has been appointed, by whom it shall be made. In Official Form 63 (§ 1823, post) the clerk is ordered to do it but there is nothing in the act which would prevent the judge selecting some one else, or appointing a person specially for the purpose,<sup>59</sup> although in view of the small fees provided by the act such appointments might be deemed the perquisites of the clerk.

In pro-rating the consideration among creditors, the interest to be considered in making a distribution is that of the creditors at the time of acceptance<sup>60</sup> and of all of them because the fact that one might be specially benefited by the refusal to confirm the composition would not justify such refusal.<sup>61</sup>

§ 1224. — Proof of claims.

To be entitled to a share in the distribution of the consideration a creditor must have filed and proved his claim within the time and in the manner provided for by section 57n of the act.<sup>62</sup> A creditor whose claim has not been scheduled and who has not filed same until after the filing of a petition to confirm the composition cannot share the deposit ratably with other creditors, but may be entitled to any surplus remaining after the paying of expenses and the dividends of the scheduled claims and those not scheduled but filed before the issue of the rule nisi.<sup>63</sup>

The bankrupt has the right to appear in opposition to the allowance of a claim,<sup>64</sup> and he may be heard to object to the allowance in composition of a claim offered for proof after the expiration of a year, though the same has not been scheduled.<sup>65</sup>

§ 1225. — Right of set-off.

The bankrupt in a composition stands, as to set-off, in the position of a trustee, if none has been appointed,<sup>66</sup> but a creditor who receives a composition payment from his bankrupt debtor, with knowledge of all the facts, is not entitled to have a set-off enforced which he neglected to assert when the composition was made.<sup>67</sup>

§ 1226. — Failure to perform.

The failure of the bankrupt to perform a composition according to its terms does not empower a creditor to disregard the proceedings and sue for his debt;<sup>68</sup> but if fraud was practiced in securing it, there seems to be no reason why it might not be set aside. An offer to compromise is not a defense to an involuntary petition.<sup>69</sup>

The court has no power to imprison a creditor for refusing to receive money on finality of a composition,<sup>70</sup> nor will such refusal in any way affect the validity of the proceedings.

§ 1228. Effect of composition.

§ 1229. — Conclusiveness.

If the court had jurisdiction of the subject matter and the persons, and jurisdiction is shown to have attached, all the subsequent proceedings are presumed to be regular and its decision upon every question properly arising in the proceeding is binding on all courts till reversed on appeal. The order of confirmation is conclusive that the proper number of consents have been obtained; that proper and sufficient notice was given; that the consideration deposited is valid; that the papers are properly executed; that every act required by the law was duly and properly done;<sup>73</sup> and that the court had jurisdiction and the proceedings were regular,<sup>74</sup> and the order cannot be collaterally attacked.<sup>75</sup>

§ 1230. — Effect upon bankruptcy proceedings.

A composition does away with the effect of the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>76</sup>

After the confirmation of the composition and the distribution of the consideration, the case is to be dismissed. Before dismissal the necessary orders should be made to authorize the proper disposition of any property held subject to the court's orders as money belonging to the estate held by the sheriff which, without a proper order of the court, would not be at bankrupt's disposal.<sup>77</sup> When the order of dismissal is made, all proceedings are then at an end, unless subsequent steps should be taken to set aside the composition,<sup>78</sup> and no claims can thereafter be filed.<sup>79</sup>

The referee does not, however, lose his powers in the administration of the estate because of the pendency of a composition offer, and the pendency of a petition to set aside a composition does not operate to prohibit him from exercising his right independently of, or in conjunction with, such application to re-open the estate, and such re-opening is not an interference with the administration of the estate.<sup>80</sup>

§ 1231. — Effect on bankrupt's debts.

The order of confirmation serves as a discharge by operation of law<sup>81</sup> and no further discharge is required.<sup>82</sup>

The confirmation of a composition discharges a bankrupt from his debts other than those agreed to be paid by its terms and those not affected by a discharge.<sup>83</sup> Debts are released by the confirmation although they may be incorrectly stated in the schedules, unless such errors were substantial or intentional,<sup>84</sup> and the same is true of a claim which is not proven, the creditor failing or refusing to participate with the other creditors when the composition is offered,<sup>85</sup> but the claim of a creditor whose debt is not scheduled and who has no notice of the proceedings prior to the filing of the application for the confirmation of the composition agreement is not discharged.<sup>86</sup> The failure of a creditor to ascertain the amount allowed on his claim, where notice of the composition proceeding has been properly given, will estop him from asserting that his claim was in excess of the amount scheduled by the bankrupt.<sup>87</sup>

A composition includes and binds debts created by fraud,<sup>88</sup> and a debt so created is discharged by a composition in which the creditor participates.<sup>89</sup>

of indorsers are not bound, and can recover from them, the maker not paying, where the note did not become due until after the bankruptcy of the indorsers.<sup>90</sup>

The acceptance of a composition is not considered as being a voluntary assent of the creditor to the satisfaction of the debt, so that if thereafter the bankrupt makes a new promise to pay the unpaid balance of the debt, such promise may be made the foundation of a new suit by the creditor.<sup>91</sup>

§ 1232. — Effect on secured creditors.

A secured creditor who accepts an offer of composition thereby loses his right to retain any securities held for the debt.<sup>92</sup>

§ 1233. — Effect on co-debtors and partners.

The present act expressly provides that the liability of a person who is a co-debtor with, or guarantor or in any manner surety for, a bankrupt shall not be altered by the discharge of such bankrupt.<sup>93</sup> A composition is a substitute for a discharge and the bankrupt's discharge from his debts under a composition is a discharge by operation of law which does not release his partners, sureties or guarantors; though the usual rule is that a creditor releasing the principal debtor on a composition releases the surety.<sup>94</sup>

An order approving the composition of a partnership releases partners from individual liability for firm debts.<sup>95</sup>

in it and any money on hand should be paid to the bankrupt,<sup>98</sup> who is at liberty to deal with it as he wishes if no fraud has been practiced.<sup>99</sup> If there is no provision for the disposition of property, the bankrupt retains the same subject to the summary order of the court,<sup>1</sup> and where the composition gives his property and books back to the bankrupt, the creditors will not be permitted to undo what they consented to.<sup>2</sup> The bankrupt is entitled to the benefit of any leases made by the trustee,<sup>3</sup> and his receiver has no claim on the rents and profits of his land, it being after acquired property under the composition.<sup>4</sup>

§ 1235. — Effect on liens and attachments.

After filing a petition a creditor cannot acquire a lien and this is not affected by composition proceedings.<sup>5</sup>

An attachment made within four months of the commencement of proceedings will be dissolved by a composition;<sup>6</sup> but not by a prematurely initiated composition;<sup>7</sup> nor can confirmation give validity to such illegal composition.<sup>8</sup>

§ 1236. — Subsequent litigation.

Creditors have a right to receive their quota under the composition and its payment to them cannot be suspended by injunction unless there is a lien upon the fund;<sup>9</sup> nor will an injunction be allowed because the debtor fails to plead the composition.<sup>10</sup> A creditor, seeking to liquidate his claim in a replevin suit in a state court, has no standing to ask that other creditors wait for their dividends under a composition until he can get judgment, when the bankruptcy court finds the evidence does not sustain the charge of fraud on which the replevin suit is based;<sup>11</sup> but where a composition has been complied with, an injunction restraining a suit in a state court is proper.<sup>12</sup>

§ 1237. Composition must be pleaded.

The composition is a defense that may be waived and, if a suit is brought on a debt after confirmation, it must be pleaded or it is deemed to be waived and the court will not thereafter relieve the party from the result of his laches.<sup>13</sup> An order confirming a composition may be pleaded as a discharge, and under an allegation that a discharge was obtained, proof of an order confirming a composition is admissible.<sup>14</sup>

§ 1238. Effect of failure to confirm composition.

Whenever a composition is not confirmed, the estate shall be administered in bankruptcy.<sup>15</sup>

An order refusing to confirm a composition on the ground that it is not for the best interest of the estate is not res adjudicata as to the right to a subsequent discharge.<sup>16</sup>

§ 1239. Certified copy of order as evidence.

A certified copy of an order confirming a composition is evidence of the jurisdiction of the court, the regularity of the proceedings and the fact that the order was made,<sup>17</sup> and constitutes evidence of the revesting of the title of his property in the bankrupt, and, if recorded, will impart the same notice that a deed from the trustee to the bankrupt, if recorded, would impart.<sup>18</sup>

§ 1240. Appeal and review.

§ 1241. Setting aside compositions.

§ 1242. — Comparison of acts.

Section 13a of the act of 1898, provides that "The judge may, upon the application of parties in interest filed at any time within six months after a composition has been confirmed, set the same aside and reinstate the case if it shall be made to appear upon a trial that fraud was practiced in the procuring of such composition, and that the knowledge thereof has come to the petitioners since the confirmation of such composition."

There was no analogous provision in the act of 1867, but by the amendment of 1874<sup>20</sup> it was provided that "If it shall at any time appear to the court, on notice, satisfactory evidence and hearing, that a composition, under this section, cannot, in consequence of legal difficulties, or for any sufficient cause, proceed without injustice or undue delay to the creditors or to the debtor, the court may . . . set it aside." The difference in the provisions of the two acts is accordingly great. Under the former, if at any time the court found the composition could not proceed "without injustice or delay," it might be set aside. Under the act of 1898, a composition can only be set aside upon an application filed within six months after confirmation and for fraud in procuring it, of which the applicants—who need only be "parties in interest"—must have been ignorant at the time of the confirmation.<sup>21</sup>

21—The difference in the two acts renders many of the decisions under the earlier act inapplicable to the present, as for instance, that the court might, two years after the final order, set aside a composition, though in that case it did not on account of laches (In re Herman, 17 N. B. R. 440, 8 Ben. 436, Fed. Cas. No. 6405); that it could be set aside if not of benefit to creditors as well as bankrupt (In re Allen, 17 N. B. R. 157, Fed. Cas. No. 210); that creditors who have not proved their debts can not take part (In re Bryce, 19 N. B. R. 287, Fed. Cas. No. 2069); and that creditors who accepted the compromise can not vote for assignee (Ex parte Hamlin, 16 N. B. R. 320, 2 Lowell 571, Fed. Cas. No. 5993; In re Herman, 17 N. B. R. 440, 9 Ben. 436, Fed. Cas. No. 6405).

The provisions for the setting aside of a composition and of a discharge<sup>22</sup> are alike, and decisions construing them should be considered together.

§ 1243. — Grounds for setting aside.

The court of bankruptcy has no power to set aside a composition except as given in section 13, which limits section 2 (9) of the act.<sup>23</sup>

The sole ground for setting aside a composition is fraud, and it must have been unknown to the applicants at the time of confirmation.<sup>24</sup> The want of knowledge must not only be actual but legal. If on proper inquiry they might have known or if facts existed which would have caused a reasonable man to make such inquiry they will be charged with knowledge. But, even if a creditor has relied on the general observance of the bankruptcy act, he will not be estopped from seeking to set aside a composition, unless it be clearly shown that he was in possession of the information as to which he was guilty of laches or that he deliberately ignored an opportunity to keep posted.<sup>25</sup>

A fraudulently procured composition will be set aside,<sup>26</sup> as where it was procured by fraudulent conduct of the trustee seeking to aid the bankrupt,<sup>27</sup> or by false assurances made by the bankrupt's attorneys that there was no haste and that the creditor would be included in the composition,<sup>28</sup> or by concealment of assets,<sup>29</sup> or by a false statement by the bankrupt which was relied upon by a creditor in accepting the terms of a composition.<sup>30</sup> As a general rule, it may be said that frauds which would have been a bar to the confirmation if discovered therefore may be urged as grounds for setting the composition aside where discovered after its confirmation.<sup>31</sup> However, the voluntary payment in full of other debts after bankrupt's release by composition does not render fraudulent a promise to a creditor to induce him to sign composition "that no other creditor should receive better terms,"<sup>32</sup> nor is the failure of a creditor to get notice because his address was misstated in the schedule through mistake, sufficient grounds for setting aside the composition.<sup>33</sup>

A composition, though fraudulent, will not be set aside, where the creditors will not profit by setting it aside, as where a second petition in bankruptcy has been filed since its confirmation and the bankrupt is unable to meet the notes given to the creditors in payment of their claims.<sup>34</sup>

§ 1244. — Parties in interest.

The confirmation of the composition can only be set aside "upon the application of parties in interest."<sup>35</sup> A creditor who has assigned his claim cannot petition for the vacation of an order confirming a composition.<sup>36</sup>

§ 1245. — Limitations.

A composition can only be attacked in the bankruptcy court and there only within six months after the order of confirmation. After that, and elsewhere at all times, it is unimpeachable.<sup>37</sup>

§ 1246. — Petition to set aside.

The petition to set aside a composition need not set out in detail how and when the petitioner learned the facts relied upon. It is sufficient that it allege that the petitioner had no knowledge of the facts at the time the composition was confirmed.<sup>38</sup> Failure of a petition to make all creditors assenting to the composition parties is not fatal.<sup>39</sup>

cient,<sup>40</sup> but a verification by an agent who has no personal knowledge of the facts, upon information and belief, is insufficient.<sup>41</sup>

The commencement of an action at law by a creditor on his claim is not an abandonment of his petition to have a composition set aside.<sup>42</sup>

§ 1247. — Notice of hearing.

Though no provision is expressly made for notice of the hearing on the application to set a composition aside the better practice is to give notice to the parties interested,<sup>43</sup> especially to any creditor charged with being a party to the fraud.

§ 1248. — Restoration or deposit of consideration.

The restoration of the consideration received by the creditor, or an offer to restore the same is not a condition precedent to the setting aside of a composition.<sup>44</sup>

It is held, however, that if a note given to applicant under a composition falls due while his application to set such composition aside is pending, the amount thereof should be paid into court by the bankrupt;<sup>45</sup> but, if the applicant in such circumstances does not appear to receive payment after notice, he is entitled, upon subsequent refusal, to a summary order.

§ 1249. — Jury trial.

Section 13 provides that "if it shall be made to appear upon a trial," thus clearly distinguishing the mode to be adopted here from that in section 12, which provides (par. c) for a "hearing" and (par. d) that the "judge" should be satisfied. The question of fraud is to be tried by a jury.<sup>46</sup>

§ 1250. — Burden and quantum of proof.

The burden rests upon the creditor seeking to have a composition set aside, to show by proper averments and evidence, sufficient grounds why this should be done.<sup>47</sup>

Clear proof of fraud is necessary to set aside a composition.<sup>48</sup>

§ 1251. — Effect of setting aside.

While a composition induced by fraud may be set aside, the property acquired by the bankrupt, in addition to his estate at the time the composition was confirmed, must be applied to the payment in full of claims of creditors for property sold to him on credit in good faith while such composition was in force, and the residue, if any, added to his estate in bankruptcy<sup>49</sup> to be applied to the payment of debts arising at the time of adjudication. Whenever a composition is set aside the court must reinstate the case<sup>50</sup> and the trustee, upon his appointment and qualification, is vested with the title to all of the bankrupt's property as of the date of the final decree setting aside the composition.<sup>51</sup> It has been held that where payments have been made under a composition which is afterwards set aside, such payments are not affected.<sup>52</sup>

§ 1252. — Order setting aside as evidence.

A certified copy of the order setting a composition aside, not revoked, is evidence of the jurisdiction of the court, the regularity of the proceedings and of the fact that the order was made.<sup>53</sup>

§ 1253. Jurisdiction and power to sell.

§ 1254. — Ancillary jurisdiction.

Where real property of the bankrupt is situated in another district, the bankruptcy court of that district has ancillary jurisdiction to make a sale thereof.<sup>1</sup> There exists no necessity for invoking ancillary jurisdiction, however, for the court of original jurisdiction has the power to order a sale in another state or district.<sup>2</sup>

§ 1255. — State court has no power over sales.

The title to the bankrupt's property vests in the trustee as soon as the adjudication is made; any sale thereafter must be made by such trustee under the direction of the bankruptcy court. The state court has no jurisdiction to sell such property under such circumstances, but if it did make sale, the purchaser would take no title.<sup>3</sup> Where a federal court authorizes a sale, and the deposit of the proceeds, such decision will control in spite of the fact that the action of a state court in which insolvency proceedings were brought prior to the bankruptcy proceedings, permitting a sale, was reversed on appeal.<sup>4</sup>

The petition for an order of sale may be presented to and granted by the referee.<sup>5</sup>

§ 1257. Liquidation without sale.

The trustee may, if to the interest of the estate, relieve the property from the lien by discharging the incumbrance, or he may agree with the creditors as to the value of the property,<sup>6</sup> or he may apply to have the lien ascertained and liquidated, or for an order directing the sale of the property held as security for any provable claim, as the most correct means of ascertaining its true value, and from the proceeds may pay the debts covered by the security.<sup>7</sup>

§ 1258. Sale pending composition proceedings.

A failure to make the deposit required by section.12b upon the filing of a petition for composition, will prevent the pendency of such petition from being urged as an objection to a sale of the bankrupt's assets.<sup>8</sup>

§ 1263. — Good will.

The practice and good will of a bankrupt physician cannot be sold by his trustee.<sup>13</sup>

The good will of a bankrupt corporation becomes extinguished by the trustee's sale of all goods and chattels thereof and cannot thereafter be sold by the trustee.<sup>14</sup>

§ 1264. — Interest in real estate.

An interest such as a remainder in real property may be sold, subject to liens thereon.<sup>15</sup> The interest of a bankrupt as legatee under a will may be ordered sold though the extent thereof has not been determined.<sup>16</sup> While the court will not take possession of immoral places, to conduct a disreputable business there carried on, it will, under proper circumstances and at the proper time, take possession to sell bankrupt's interest therein.<sup>17</sup>

§ 1265. — Incumbered property.

A court of bankruptcy, as well as the referee, has power to order the sale of property upon which a lien is asserted and direct the money arising therefrom to be brought into court for distribution among those entitled to it<sup>18</sup> without first determining either the validity or amount of the lien.<sup>19</sup> Such sale should not be ordered unless it is satisfactorily shown that the interests of the general creditors will be thereby advanced,<sup>20</sup> and if the

§ 1266. — Leases.

A lease should not be sold unless sufficient money is realized to pay the rentals due and to become due thereunder, or unless a bond conditioned upon the payments of such rents be given.<sup>22</sup>

§ 1267. — Liquor license.

Whether a liquor license held by the bankrupt may be sold depends upon whether the same is assignable.<sup>23</sup>

§ 1268. — Property in possession of adverse claimant.

A court will not summarily order the sale of property, real or personal, claimed by the trustee, even though the title be in dispute, if the estate be in the actual possession of a third person holding as owner and claiming absolute title to it, whether derived from the debtor before he was adjudged bankrupt or from another.<sup>24</sup>

§ 1269. — Trustee's right of action.

A trustee's right of action cannot ordinarily be assigned.<sup>24a</sup> While the right of a trustee in bankruptcy to bring suit to set aside a transfer made more than four months prior to bankruptcy in fraud of creditors may not alone be assigned, yet, the trustee has a transferable interest in the property so transferred, which he may transfer or convey and assign with it the right vested in him to maintain an action to set aside the transfer. Such transfer or assignment should only be authorized, how-

§ 1270. Sale free of liens.

§ 1271. — In general.

A court of bankruptcy, including the referee, has authority to direct a sale of property by the trustee in bankruptcy free and clear of all liens and incumbrances, in which event the liens are transferred to the proceeds<sup>27</sup> according to their priority;<sup>28</sup> or it may direct a sale of the property and require the trustee in bankruptcy to institute suit to determine the validity of a lien.<sup>29</sup> Such an order of sale is discretionary,<sup>30</sup> and will not be made where it is evident that there is no equity in the property, and the sale will prejudice lienors,<sup>31</sup> but only where the interests of the general creditors will be advanced thereby.<sup>32</sup> So, where the holder of bonds of the bankrupt secured by mortgage giving him the right to apply the bonds to the purchase of the mortgaged property upon a foreclosure sale has instituted suit to foreclose the mortgage in which the trustee, who disputes the holder's title, is made a party defendant, a sale free from liens should not be made, especially where it appears that the mortgaged property will not bring enough to pay the bonds.<sup>33</sup> The same rule with reference to the sale free of liens would apply to perishable property.<sup>34</sup>

A sale free of liens does not, however, affect a lien in the nature of a tax assessment against the property sold, but in this case the trustee should protect the purchaser by providing for the payment of the taxes.<sup>35</sup> Where more than four months before the petition was filed, the bankrupt executed a real estate mortgage to one creditor, a chattel mortgage on fixtures to the real estate to another and suffered judgments to be taken by a third, the bankruptcy court will direct a sale clear of all liens, and out of the proceeds pay off the incumbrances or liens according to the priority to which they would be entitled under the said law.<sup>36</sup>

A referee or court of bankruptcy may direct the trustee to sell free of incumbrances, personal property of the bankrupt in his possession, but covered by a chattel mortgage, on notice to the incumbrancers, and to approve the sale when made. It is within the fair exercise of his discretion to approve a sale found to be for the fair cash value of the property, though less than the amount of the mortgage debt.<sup>37</sup>

§ 1272. — Sale free from dower.

Property of the bankrupt may be sold free from his wife's inchoate right of dower, with her consent.<sup>38</sup> It is held that a trustee who has been ordered to sell real estate free of all liens, is not authorized to sell subject to an inchoate dower interest of the bankrupt's wife.<sup>39</sup>

§ 1273. — Order to sell.

A sale is not free from liens unless so provided by order,<sup>40</sup> and the trustee cannot sell free from liens without a judicial decision of the validity thereof, notwithstanding he denies their validity.<sup>41</sup> An order merely directing the sale of the property without mentioning liens, will be taken as directing a sale subject to liens,<sup>42</sup> but in case of a direction to sell free from first or superior liens, without mentioning inferior liens, the latter may also be divested and transferred to the proceeds, if such is the intention of the parties and the result is equitable.<sup>43</sup>

A certificate from the referee concerning an order to sell property discharged of liens should affirmatively show that notice has been given creditors and lienholders. A general statement that such notice has been given will not suffice.<sup>44</sup>

§ 1274. — Recovery of proceeds.

Where incumbered property has been sold free from liens without the consent of the lienor, the latter may proceed by suit in the state court to determine his right to recover the amount of the mortgage debt from the trustee.<sup>45</sup> An action in trover by a lienor to recover the proceeds of a sale free from liens is an affirmation of such sale.<sup>46</sup>

An answer which alleges that the mortgagee through its agent took from the bankrupt a trust deed of all its property, and that the agent exercised control over all financial affairs of the bankrupt until its adjudication, and that the mortgagee obtained a large amount of money from the bankrupt has been held sufficient to justify the introduction of evidence as to amount due the mortgagee.<sup>47</sup>

§ 1276. — In general.

The provisions of the act of congress of March 3, 1893, c. 225, relating to sales of land by order of United States courts is inapplicable to sales by a trustee in bankruptcy which are controlled solely by the provisions of section 70b of the Bankruptcy Act and No. 18 of the General Orders in Bankruptcy,<sup>48</sup> and it is held that the trustee may sell realty at public auction without any order of the court, and after such notice and at such place as in his judgment seems best.<sup>49</sup>

A sale by a trustee in bankruptcy is, however, except where otherwise controlled by statute, subject to the general rules and principles of procedure obtaining in other judicial proceedings.<sup>50</sup> Official Form 42 (§ 1799, post) should be followed where a sale of real property is desired.<sup>51</sup> The referee is not bound by the prayer of the trustee in making the sale, but may conduct the same in such manner as he deems to the best interests of the estate.<sup>52</sup>

The court may bring a lienholder objecting to a sale before it by service of a rule to show cause why the petition of the trustee to sell the property should not be granted,<sup>53</sup> but the validity of an incumbrance against property sought to be sold cannot be summarily determined upon petition of the trustee to sell.<sup>54</sup>

§ 1277. — Order of sale.

An order of court for the sale of property is not essential in the case of sales, at public auction<sup>55</sup> though in cases of private sales it is essential.<sup>56</sup> The better practice is, however, to procure such order in all cases, since it might in some contingencies protect the trustee.

Where an order is made, the form thereof is sufficient if it directs the sale of the right, title, etc., of the bankrupt, and it need not direct the sale of the right, title, etc., which the trustee acquired by the decree of bankruptcy.<sup>57</sup> An upset price need not be fixed in the order.<sup>58</sup> Where an order of sale is made after a lienholder has given notice of his alleged lien, the order should provide for the imposition of such lien on the proceeds of sale.<sup>59</sup>

§ 1278. — Notice of sale—Private sales.

A private sale made without an appraisal of the property and without the order or approval of the court vests no title in the buyer,<sup>61</sup> but a sale is none the less public because not conducted by an auctioneer, or because notice thereof is not posted on the premises as required by a rule of court.<sup>62</sup>

All sales are to be at public auction unless otherwise ordered by the court. For good reason shown a specified portion may be ordered sold at private sale, in which case an account of each article, the price brought and to whom sold must be kept and filed. Perishable property may be ordered sold immediately with or without notice.<sup>63</sup> Perishable property may consist of buildings rapidly deteriorating and in a dilapidated condition and requiring immediate expenditure of a large sum of money to prevent absolute loss.<sup>64</sup> It has been held that perishability in bankruptcy involves physical deterioration of the property itself, not mere depreciation in value, and hence a stock of hardware cannot be sold as perishable without notice, though becoming unseasonable.<sup>65</sup> On the other hand it has been held that a horse comes within this provision since he consumes food and thus reduces his value;<sup>66</sup> and salt which could be sold for immediate delivery, but otherwise would be unsalable;<sup>67</sup> and, in fact, Christmas toys and the like, would be considered, immediately before the holidays, or fireworks before the Fourth of July. In other words if a thing became unseasonable after the lapse of a few days, there would be no physical deterioration but a serious depreciation in value which would warrant a sale without the required notice. Objections to a private sale and a sale before appraisement, cannot be made for the first time before the district judge.<sup>68</sup>

At least ten days' notice by mail of all sales must be given creditors, unless waived in writing,<sup>69</sup> or the court orders it without notice.<sup>70</sup>

Notice to a creditor whose name and address appear in the bankrupt's schedule of liabilities is not notice to the assignee of the creditors whose proof of claim containing his address is duly filed.<sup>73</sup>

Where the time allowed by an order for the sale of property has expired, a sale cannot be had after expiration of the time fixed by the order without the giving of a new notice to creditors and lienors.<sup>74</sup>

Creditors attending sale and bidding on property are estopped to set up want of notice.<sup>75</sup> A sale of real property cannot be collaterally attacked for alleged error in the description of the property sold, contained in the published notice.<sup>76</sup>

No notice to stockholders of a bankrupt corporation of a proposed sale of its assets is necessary.<sup>77</sup>

§ 1279. — Appraisement.

Section 70b of the act provides that "All real and personal property belonging to bankrupt estates shall be appraised by three disinterested appraisers; they shall be appointed by, and report to, the court." Want of appraisal does not, however, necessarily invalidate a sale,<sup>78</sup> cannot be raised for the first time before the district judge,<sup>79</sup> and is no ground for collateral attack.<sup>80</sup>

The referee has general authority to appoint appraisers and his action is subject to revision by the court of bankruptcy. An appraiser is not disqualified because he is a stockholder and officer in a corporation in which a creditor is also interested.<sup>81</sup> While the appointment of appraisers is not void by reason of the fact that the referee permitted creditors to express their preference, the better practice is for the referee to act independently of the creditors.<sup>82</sup>

The particularity with which an appraisement is to be made must depend somewhat upon circumstances. The appraisement, however, should be general, rather than special, only such particularity being given as will be sufficient to reasonably identify the property in character and quantity and give a fair idea of its value.<sup>83</sup> The prevailing cost to the trade should be adopted by the appraisers as the actual value, due allowance being made for any actual deterioration or depreciation in value.<sup>84</sup>

§ 1280. — Time of sale.

A sale of incumbered property should not be ordered until the trustee's appointment, so as not to interfere with the exercise of his election to redeem the property pledged, to sell it subject to the lien, or to release the equity of redemption at an agreed price.<sup>85</sup>

While the uniform practice is to make no order of sale until after adjudication, unless necessary to preserve the property, an order of sale made by a referee prior to the adjudication, while exercising the power of the district judge, will not be disturbed, when the sale was made by consent and no prejudice is shown.<sup>86</sup>

§ 1281. — Place of sale.

A sale of real property or any interest in land need not be made on the property itself, though situated in another district and state.<sup>87</sup>

Where the property of the bankrupt is sold in bulk and it is impossible to determine the proportionate value of the particular part subject to a lien to the gross purchase price, the lien will not attach to the proceeds.<sup>89</sup> So, it is held, that a creditor holding a mortgage upon a part of the stock of goods sold loses his lien by his failure to object to a sale of the entire stock and ask for a separation.<sup>90</sup>

A sale of the bankrupt's interest in real estate may be had without partition,<sup>91</sup> and assuming that a sale of real estate by a trustee is to be assimilated to a sale under a decree in equity silent as to the manner of sale, it cannot be attacked collaterally and held void because not made in parcels.<sup>92</sup> The court will not determine in advance of sale whether a building placed upon leased property by the bankrupt is severable and should be sold separately. The trustee is only authorized to sell the bankrupt's rights in the property, the extent of which he cannot guarantee, nor the court pronounce upon.<sup>93</sup>

§ 1283. — Auctioneer.

The court may appoint persons other than the trustee to conduct the sale.<sup>94</sup>

The trustee may employ an auctioneer to conduct the sale, and need not be personally present thereat,<sup>95</sup> but the court may, in its discretion, disapprove the selection by the trustee. The appointment of an auctioneer by the court to conduct sales operates as a disapproval of any selection the trustee makes thereafter, as well as any previously made by him.<sup>96</sup>

bids,<sup>97</sup> and a bidder whose bid, though higher than any other, has been refused is entitled to a review of an order affirming a sale to another bidder,<sup>98</sup> unless the order of sale expressly reserves the right of the referee to reject any bid.<sup>99</sup> The trustee cannot demand that a bidder disclose for whom he is acting, nor can one whose bid in a representative capacity has been refused, be thereafter refused the right to bid as an individual, nor can his right to bid be conditioned upon his making an upset bid greatly in excess of any other bids.<sup>1</sup>

The bankrupt has a right to bid at a trustee's sale.<sup>2</sup>

Where a prospective bidder and the trustee's solicitor agree that the bidder will let the solicitor have the property at a certain price without reference to the selling price, such agreement will not avoid the sale;<sup>3</sup> nor will a private agreement between the auctioneer and the ultimate purchaser that the bid of any other person is to be raised $50 each time until a sign is given to stop, invalidate the sale.<sup>4</sup>

The trustee may demand immediate compliance after accepting the bid, and upon failure on the part of the bidder, may resell the property.<sup>5</sup>

Where the trustee is authorized to sell at a private sale, an offer or bid which is accompanied by a substantial payment in evidence of good faith cannot be withdrawn before the acceptance or rejection thereof by the trustee.<sup>6</sup>

§ 1286. — Necessity of confirmation.

In judicial sales, that is, a sale of particular property specifically pointed out by the court and ordered during the pendency of proceedings concerning it, such as are sales by trustees, the court is the seller and the trustee its agent to get the highest bidder, the sale not being consummated nor any title passing until confirmation, the act of confirmation alone completing the passing of the title. In execution sales, that is, a sale of any property belonging to the judgment debtor that the sheriff may seize, the court has rendered its decision and is done with it, the sheriff being the real seller and the title passing at once to the highest bidder. In execution sales the purchaser immediately becomes vested with rights which can only be divested by showing that he himself or his agents have been guilty of fraud, whilst, in judicial sales, until confirmation, the so-called purchaser has no such rights, but is simply the preferred bidder awaiting the acceptance of his offer by the court.<sup>7</sup> The approval of a sale by the receiver upon terms offered by a prospective purchaser, renders the transaction a judicial sale as fully as if the sale had been ordered before any offer was made, and the offer subsequently made had been considered and approved.<sup>8</sup>

§ 1287. — Notice to creditors.

Creditors need not be notified of an application to confirm a sale.<sup>9</sup>

§ 1288. — Parties entitled to be heard.

The purchaser is entitled to be heard upon an application to set aside a sale, to the extent of showing that he has rights, and to point out why the discretion of the court should not be exercised.<sup>10</sup>

A stockholder of a bankrupt corporation cannot contest the validity of a sale of its assets.<sup>11</sup>

alleged, every fact relied on to establish it should be distinctly stated, and the whole should be verified by some one cognizant of the facts.<sup>12</sup>

§ 1290. — Grounds for setting aside sale.

No sale for less than seventy-five per cent of the appraised value ought to be confirmed,<sup>13</sup> unless good reasons are shown why a better price would not be obtainable on a resale, and the burden of proof rests upon the trustee, who brings such report to the court for confirmation, to make such showing, rather than upon the creditors to make good their objections thereto. In a case where the inadequacy of price is insignificant, the sale should not be set aside on that ground especially when the objecting party was present as a creditor at the sale,<sup>14</sup> but where there is a gross inadequacy of price or circumstances impeaching the fairness of the sale (by which is not meant a subsequent offer of a better price), the sale should be set aside.<sup>15</sup>

To warrant the setting aside of a sale for inadequacy of price the difference between what the property brought and its real value must be such as to be unconscionable, and as to create a presumption of fraud.<sup>16</sup> A sale will not be set aside because of a slightly higher bid made by the bankrupt than that accepted, where the bankrupt has failed to make a deposit or pay the amount of his bid, though given opportunity to do so.<sup>17</sup>

A sale for an inadequate price may nevertheless be allowed to stand if the purchaser pays the trustee the difference between the price paid and the actual value of the property with interest.

So, if the price paid is found to be inadequate, the purchaser may return the property and have back the purchase price with interest, upon condition that if the funds of the estate are sufficient to pay all claims and expenses of administration, the property is to be returned to the purchaser.<sup>18</sup>

The fact that the objecting creditor failed to bid because of an impression received by him from the trustee that a cash deposit would be required, is no ground for setting aside a sale even though the price received was less than seventy-five per cent of the appraised value,<sup>19</sup> nor is the fact that a claim marked "worthless" subsequently becomes valuable, ground for setting aside a sale thereof.<sup>20</sup>

That the successful bidder has not before confirmation paid to the trustee the balance due on the purchase price, is no bar to a confirmation.<sup>21</sup>

Neither the fact that the ultimate purchaser of the property is a syndicate organized by a former officer of the bankrupt<sup>22</sup> or a committee representing creditors in pursuance of a reorganization plan,<sup>23</sup> nor the fact that one of three trustees of the estate is a stockholder and director of the corporation to which the property is knocked down<sup>24</sup> will invalidate the sale. Nor will the fact that the bid of the person to whom the property was knocked down was made by a firm of lawyers which had, at various times, been employed by the bankrupt and his trustee avoid the sale where no retainer or permanent employment of the attorneys by the bankrupt or the trustee is shown.<sup>25</sup>

A sale will be set aside where the required notice is not given;<sup>26</sup> or where the trustee's solicitor bids at the sale;<sup>27</sup> or where the trustee purchases at his own sale;<sup>28</sup> or where it is made to an appraiser prior to the appraisal of the property, though the purchase is made through a third party and an adequate price is paid for the property,<sup>29</sup> or where property purchased from a trustee was held a few months later at a vastly

§ 1291. — Appeal and review.

A creditor has the right to call for an investigation into the conduct of the trustee in selling the property, even after the latter's account has been filed and approved.<sup>33</sup> A review of an order of the referee refusing to confirm a sale may be had before a resale of the property but the better practice is to defer the review until after the resale has taken place.<sup>34</sup>

§ 1292. Resale of property by trustee.

A purchaser refusing to complete his sale is liable for the loss upon a resale.<sup>35</sup> Where a person petitioning for a resale who has agreed to pay a stipulated price for the property upon a resale, and to pay the purchaser at the prior sale the cost of improvements placed upon the property, pays more than the agreed amount for the property, he will not be required to pay for the improvements and the taxes upon the property in addition thereto.<sup>36</sup>

§ 1293. Trustee to make conveyances.

In the case of securities held by any creditor the trustee should be ordered to execute a proper transfer to said creditors of all the rights and claims which the bankrupt, or his creditors, may have in the same,<sup>39</sup> provided there is no equity in it for the estate. Sale of trustee's right of action to set aside a fraudulent transfer is to be made without warranty or representation interest subject to the incumbrance,<sup>47</sup> and with no higher or better interest than the bankrupt could have conveyed.<sup>48</sup> A purchaser at a sale by the trustee stands on the same footing with a purchaser at an execution sale and takes the estate of the bankrupt subject to all equities against it, whether he knows of them or not.<sup>49</sup> Where the trustee fails to reduce a note to possession but sells merely the right, title and interest of the bankrupt therein, the purchaser obtains no better title than the bankrupt had and where the note is in the possession of a receiver in supplementary proceedings, the purchaser is entitled to possession of the note or the proceeds thereof only upon payment of the judgment and expenses of the supplementary proceedings.<sup>50</sup> The purchasers under a sale will be left to establish their title whenever the occasion may arise.<sup>51</sup>

A purchaser of all the assets of the bankrupt cannot enforce performance by third persons of contracts with the bankrupt involving elements of personal trust and confidence in him.<sup>52</sup>

The purchaser of a claim against a third person obtains no right of action against an undisclosed principal who was not scheduled as a debtor.<sup>53</sup>

A sale of property which has been previously assigned by the bankrupt gives the purchaser all the rights of the trustee, and he may sue in the state courts to set aside the prior assignment.<sup>54</sup>

Where the good will of the bankrupt, a corporation, is sold, it may thereafter be enjoined from using its corporate name even though it has received a discharge.<sup>55</sup>

§ 1299. — Payment of taxes and water rents.

The purchaser, and not the estate, will ordinarily be held liable for taxes assessed after sale and before final delivery of the deed.<sup>56</sup> The purchaser of the property at a foreclosure sale who has full knowledge of the non-payment of taxes on the property is not entitled to reimbursement out of the bankrupt estate where the taxes are subsequently paid by a third party.<sup>57</sup> When the trustee transfers property subject to the payment of taxes then owing, the grantee or a purchaser from him is under obligation to pay the same, and cannot be subrogated to the rights of the municipality for a preferential payment thereof out of the estate.<sup>58</sup>

A purchaser of bankrupt's stock and good will who agreed to save estate harmless from claims for rent has been held liable for taxes and water rents due under the provisions of lease which required the bankrupt to pay as "additional rent" such taxes and water rents.<sup>59</sup>

§ 1300. — Recovery for deficiency.

A purchaser seeking to recover for a deficiency in the property purchased from the trustee has but one cause of action, and an allowance to him of part of his claim will bar any future allowances for the balance.<sup>60</sup>

§ 1301. — Resale by purchaser.

A bankrupt purchasing a claim from one who has purchased the same from the trustee in bankruptcy obtains no greater rights than his assignor. Hence where the trustee sells a claim against a third person which was only scheduled as a claim against such person and not against an undisclosed principal and the bankrupt after his discharge purchases the claim from the third person, he cannot sue the undisclosed principal.<sup>61</sup>

§ 1302. — Removal of fixtures—Indemnity.

The court has power to cancel a bond given by a claimant to indemnify the trustee against injury to the real estate caused by the removal of claimant's machinery therefrom though the bond was given to purchasers of real estate from the trustee instead of to the trustee.<sup>62</sup>

§ 1303. Distribution of proceeds of sale.<sup>62a</sup>

§ 1304. — As between creditors.

Upon a sale of incumbered property, priority creditors without liens, cannot participate in the proceeds.<sup>63</sup>

A judgment creditor who has not perfected his lien by execution and levy is not entitled to the proceeds of such sale as against a junior creditor whose lien was perfected prior to the commencement of the proceedings.<sup>64</sup> If there are two mortgages, and the proceeds of a sale in bankruptcy are sufficient to pay off the first as well as costs and expenses, the senior mortgagee is entitled to be paid in full the same as he would in case of a sale by way of foreclosure.<sup>65</sup>

The holder of a lien upon property owned jointly by the bankrupt and another is entitled to have his debt paid in full from the proceeds of the bankrupt's interest in the property. In such case the other creditors are subrogated to the right of the bankrupt to demand contribution from the other owner.<sup>66</sup>

Although real estate stands in the name of a partner, if it be in fact firm property, the unsecured individual creditors of the partner have no claim on the proceeds.<sup>67</sup>

§ 1305. — Interest.

Where the security is more than sufficient to pay the secured creditor in full he is entitled to interest to the day of sale<sup>68</sup> and in some cases interest has been allowed to the date of the report or final decree of distribution.<sup>69</sup>

ceeds a part of the purchase price paid is inferior to the right of the vendor to have the proceeds applied to the payment of the purchase price.<sup>70</sup>

§ 1307. — Expenses, fees and costs.

Where property is sold upon the petition of the trustee, under a lien or mortgage, only the actual costs of sale are chargeable upon such proceeds and not any portion of the costs in bankruptcy,<sup>71</sup> though the lienholders may waive their right to object to allowances for such costs.<sup>72</sup> However, reasonable expenses, fees and costs incident to the sale and for the protection of the property prior to the sale are chargeable,<sup>73</sup> though, where the mortgage stipulates for a sale without appraisal in the event of foreclosure, the fees of the appraiser and keeper put in charge of the premises should not be deducted,<sup>74</sup> and it is held that a lien creditor is entitled to have the property pledged to him undiminished by any expense of administration or operation of the business, unless such operation has been sought for or acquiesced in by him.<sup>75</sup>

Several courts have applied a very reasonable rule in this connection, holding that the proceeds may be applied to the costs and expenses of the sale in an amount not exceeding what the mortgagee would be required to pay had he foreclosed in the state court,<sup>76</sup> and that the referee may be allowed for services

Where the mortgaged property is pursued into a foreign jurisdiction and extricated by the receiver and trustee in bankruptcy from a perilous position there, the mortgagee may be charged a reasonable amount for the expenses of the officers of the bankruptcy court.<sup>78</sup>

The mortgagor is entitled to a reasonable attorney's fee out of the proceeds, but is not necessarily entitled to the fee stipulated for in the mortgage.<sup>79</sup>

§ 1308. Effect of sale.

§ 1309. — In case of liens.

§ 1312. Accountants.

Expert accountants who at the instance of certain creditors make an investigation of the bankrupt's books for the purpose of ascertaining whether any assets are being concealed will not be allowed their fees.<sup>1</sup>

§ 1313. Appraiser's fees.

Expenses and compensation of a receiver and his appraisers will not be allowed where it appears that they acted fraudulently and that a receivership was unnecessary.<sup>2</sup> The receiver has been allowed an appraiser's fee paid by him though the trustee was dissatisfied with appraisement and ordered a second one.<sup>3</sup>

In some districts appraisers are not allowed more than $5 per day, and it is held that only in extraordinary cases should an allowance be made for more than two or three days.<sup>4</sup>

§ 1314. Attorney's fees.

§ 1315. — In general.

When services of counsel are really required they will be allowed, but should be confined to such services during the bankruptcy proceedings, excluding previous consultations or advice, as well as all unnecessary attendance during the proceedings,<sup>5</sup> though they do not include services of counsel rendered in the matter of the bankrupt's application for a discharge.<sup>6</sup>

It has been held that only "one reasonable attorney's fee" is allowable, which should be divided between the attorneys of the petitioning creditors, the bankrupt, and possibly the trustee.<sup>7</sup> While such construction is in harmony with the policy to minimize the expenses, the correct reading of the provision in 64b(3), would seem to refer the word "one" to the words "irrespective of the number of attorneys employed," rather than to take it to mean that only one fee absolutely is to be allowed. The result in the cases cited favors this view, since to divide the one fee will give but little to each, unless that one fee be made correspondingly large. The provision might reasonably be construed to mean that, notwithstanding the petitioning creditors may have many attorneys and the bankrupt likewise, only one fee is to be allowed to bankrupt's attorneys, and one fee to the creditor's attorneys.<sup>8</sup> By this means the ordinary meaning of the language is preserved and the result will be more reasonable. The same rule should be applied where two or more attorneys are employed by the receiver.<sup>9</sup>

§ 1316. — Reasonableness.

It will be observed that section 64b(3) provides for the allowance of an attorney's fee in three cases, (1) to the petitioning creditors in involuntary cases; (2) to the bankrupt in involuntary cases while performing the duties prescribed; and (3) to the bankrupt in voluntary cases in the court's discretion, but in each it is required that the fee must be reasonable. The amount depends upon the services rendered and their value, to be determined on evidence or the court's knowledge<sup>10</sup> of the facts in each case, the reasonableness applying to the counsel as well as to the estate.<sup>11</sup> If an attorney has a choice of two courses which lead to the same result he will be allowed a reasonable sum for the least services actually necessary by the less expensive course.<sup>12</sup>

Whether any fee at all is to be allowed the attorney of a voluntary bankrupt rests in the sound discretion of the court, and, in determining reasonableness, the character and condition of the estate, the orders necessary for its protection and the time and attention of the attorney required are to be considered, so that there can be no fixed fee.<sup>13</sup>

The judge will not disturb an allowance by the referee, where there is no evidence that it was unjust, excessive or exorbitant, especially if the referee gave creditors time to file such evidence; and, if distribution has been made and the attorney paid the allowance, the right to object will be waived.<sup>14</sup> But if the fee

asked for be exorbitant, even though it be recommended by the referee, no fee will be allowed.<sup>15</sup> In involuntary cases, the petitioning creditors and the bankrupt are entitled of right to such fee, only its reasonableness is to be determined by the court;<sup>16</sup> such determination in neither case to be arbitrary but in the exercise of legal judgment and judicial discretion and subject to review by the appellate court.<sup>17</sup>

The referee has power to determine the reasonableness of attorney's fees allowed by the trustee to the bankrupt.<sup>18</sup>

§ 1317. — For services actually rendered.

The provision is for the professional services actually rendered and hence it must be shown that the services for which the allowance is asked were actually rendered, and that they were necessary and proper,<sup>19</sup> and unless it is so shown, no allowance will be made.<sup>20</sup>

§ 1318. — Attorney for bankrupt in voluntary cases.

The question of allowance in this case rests in the sound discretion of the court,<sup>21</sup> to be exercised with due regard to the spirit of the statute.<sup>22</sup> The amount of fee is to be determined by the character and condition of the case, the orders necessary for its protection and the time and care required of the attorney.<sup>23</sup> It should be for services necessary to enable the bankrupt to bring his case properly before the court, secure an adjudication and reference, surrender his estate and perform his duties for the benefit of creditors, and is not necessarily restricted to services beneficial to the estate, rendered primarily in its interest.<sup>24</sup> The statute presupposes the payment of fees for services rendered by counsel in the ordinary course of the proceedings, and section 64b, cl. 3, contemplates the allowance of additional fees for extraordinary services.<sup>25</sup> The bankrupt is not entitled to be reimbursed money paid to his attorney before the filing of the petition as a fee for professional services and in preparing the petition and schedules,<sup>26</sup> though if the fee has not been paid, the attorney will be entitled to an allowance therefor,<sup>27</sup> but in so far as these services are mainly clerical no considerable compensation is allowed.<sup>28</sup>

No allowance will be made for an unsuccessful application for a discharge,<sup>29</sup> and in one case an attorney's fee was disallowed though the application was successful.<sup>30</sup>

An allowance may be made for services rendered prior to and in contemplation of bankruptcy whereby taxes are reduced, since the estate benefits thereby.<sup>31</sup>

The bankrupt's attorney may be allowed the amount of filing fees paid by him on behalf of bankrupt in voluntary proceedings though an involuntary petition has previously been filed.<sup>32</sup>

Attorneys for the bankrupt have been allowed compensation in preparing the petition for adjudication, attendance at court, attendance upon the first meeting of creditors, assisting the bankrupt in the preparation of his schedules,<sup>35</sup> preparing and filing the bankrupt's petition for a discharge and attendance in court on hearing of same,<sup>36</sup> successfully resisting several of the charges made in the creditor's petition,<sup>37</sup> and advising in the matter of continuance of business pending the adjudication.<sup>38</sup> But they have been refused compensation for advice on the question of bringing proceedings,<sup>39</sup> for services in preparing the bankrupt's admission of inability to pay debts, and attending the hearing for adjudication, for services in proceedings contesting the title of adverse claimants to property alleged to belong to the estate,<sup>40</sup> for attending a sale of assets,<sup>41</sup> for contesting a receiver's claim for fees,<sup>42</sup> and for services in connection with the bankrupt's application for a discharge,<sup>43</sup> or objections to a composition.<sup>44</sup>

required, there is no presumption of such need, and ordinarily attorney's fees for such services are not chargeable against the estate.<sup>45</sup>

The fact that the bankrupt is guilty of a contempt will not prevent an allowance for services rendered prior to such contempt, such services being confined, in any event, to the preparation of schedules, attendance at examinations and other duties in aid of the estate and its administration, but will not include services in defending bankrupt against charges of fraud and concealment of assets and other matters involving personal liability. The amount of fee will be governed by the extent of the services,<sup>46</sup> and in matters of difficulty the allowance will be correspondingly increased.<sup>47</sup>

In estimating the compensation which should be allowed an attorney for assisting in the preparation of schedules, respect must be had to the nature of the work, which is largely clerical.<sup>48</sup>

§ 1320. — Attorney representing bankrupt and creditors.

The interests of the creditors and the bankrupt can in no sense be considered compatible, and therefore, under no condition should an attorney be permitted to represent the bankrupt and at the same time any of the creditors or the trustee. Irrespective of the fact that to represent both is to represent adverse interests, and is a violation of the ethics of the profession, and is opposed to public policy, the result is bound to affect injuriously the interests of the creditors. The bankrupt is required to make a disclosure of his assets, and if his attorney, as the representative of the creditors, is permitted either to have a voice in the selection of the trustee or the attorney to represent him, he may to a greater or less extent influence the efforts to obtain a disclosure of the assets of the estate, or to set aside conveyances made or liens created against the bankrupt. Accordingly a fee should not be allowed an attorney for representing both interests.<sup>52</sup>

§ 1321. — Attorney for petitioning creditors.

The attorney for petitioning creditors is entitled to a reasonable fee as of right and its allowance or disallowance is not a matter of discretion with the court, but the amount is to be determined not arbitrarily, but in the exercise of legal judgment and judicial discretion,<sup>53</sup> which may be reviewed by the appellate court.<sup>54</sup>

The policy of the present act being to minimize the expense of administering estates the courts must so construe it.<sup>55</sup> The fees of attorneys for the petitioning creditors are to be determined by the condition of the estate, by the results effected, and the assets saved.<sup>56</sup> No fees can be allowed them for services caused by their own negligence or inadvertence.<sup>57</sup> To entitle an attorney to an allowance for services rendered the petitioning creditors a contract of employment must exist,<sup>58</sup> and the services must have been rendered prior to the appointment of a trustee.<sup>59</sup> The fact that an attorney calls attention to a defect in the petition by demurring thereto, and thereby is instrumental in curing the defect does not render him an attorney for the petitioning creditors in the absence of a contract of employment.<sup>60</sup>

An attorney filing a second petition which is never acted upon because of the sufficiency of the first petition after being amended, is not entitled to an allowance as an attorney for petitioning creditors.<sup>61</sup>

One who acts as attorney for the receiver of the bankrupt estate may on that ground be refused an allowance as attorney for the petitioning creditors,<sup>62</sup> and vice versa,<sup>63</sup> since the two positions are inconsistent. It has been held, however, that the amount allowed an attorney for services rendered the receiver or trustee should not be considered in fixing the amount to be allowed him for services rendered the petitioning creditors.<sup>64</sup>

After the appointment of a trustee, no allowance to petitioning creditors can be made for attorney's fees on examinations of the bankrupt, such services being either for the trustee or the individual creditors.<sup>65</sup>

No allowance can be made from the estate of a bankrupt in voluntary proceedings, for the fees of the creditors' attorneys.<sup>66</sup>

Whenever it is for the interest of the estate that rights should be litigated or any steps taken to preserve or recover property belonging to it, and the trustee either arbitrarily or through caprice declines to employ counsel for such purpose, the creditors may apply to the referee for authority to employ counsel to conduct such litigation and his compensation will be paid out of the estate,<sup>67</sup> or where a trustee refuses to move to set aside a sale because of the stifling of competition and certain attorneys successfully resist the confirmation of such sale, thereby saving a large sum to the estate, they should be paid from the estate.<sup>68</sup>

Services by the attorneys for a creditor which aid in rejecting claims, setting aside priorities,<sup>69</sup> securing the appointment of a proper trustee,<sup>70</sup> and opposing a discharge,<sup>71</sup> are not allowable. Nor can an allowance be made to a creditor whose claim is unsuccessfully attacked.<sup>72</sup>

A creditor has been held entitled to an allowance of an attorney's fee for filing his petition for leave to foreclose his mortgage and for representation under the trustee's petition to sell the property free from liens.<sup>73</sup>

The allowances should be made to the creditors for their expenses in employing counsel, and not to the attorneys themselves.<sup>74</sup>

§ 1323. — Attorney for trustee.

The fee for the trustee's attorney is not embraced in the section 64b(3) allowing "one reasonable fee," etc., but, whenever it becomes necessary for an officer to have legal assistance, the cost is one of the expenses of administration.<sup>75</sup> A trustee may employ legal assistance when necessary, and a court will not give him any direction in advance as to such employment, but he must decide in the first instance as to the necessity therefor.<sup>76</sup>

Fees to a reasonable amount may be allowed him as part of the costs of administration<sup>77</sup> by the referee ex parte,<sup>78</sup> for his actual disbursements and compensation for services rendered in the necessary preservation of the estate,<sup>79</sup> and, as a general rule, no allowance will be made for services rendered prior to his appointment.<sup>80</sup> An attorney cannot be deprived of his right to compensation as attorney for the trustee, after the services have been performed, on the ground that he has previously acted for the bankrupt,<sup>81</sup> or for the petitioning creditors.<sup>82</sup>

In the absence of a rule requiring the trustee's selection of an attorney to be approved by the court, it is no objection to the allowance of the claim of the attorney for services that the same were rendered before his selection was approved.<sup>83</sup>

No allowance will be made to the trustee's attorney if he was appointed as a result of an agreement with the trustee that if the attorney procured the trustee's appointment, the attorney should be retained.<sup>84</sup>

The allowance of an attorney's fee is within the sound discretion of the court,<sup>85</sup> which should be exercised in accord with the spirit of the act, and hence, where there was no onerous duty, the referee's refusal to allow a fee to the trustee's attorney on the ground that he had received a fee as attorney for bankrupt will be sustained.<sup>86</sup> The claim of trustee's attorney for a fee for services rendered on an examination undertaken at his suggestion in the hope of discovering concealed assets but without resulting benefit to the estate will not be allowable where there is evident lack of good faith of either attorney or trustee.<sup>87</sup> But an attorney selected by the creditors to represent the trustee, who traces and recovers concealed assets, will be allowed a reasonable fee by the court, where the creditors refuse to pay it.<sup>88</sup> In voluntary cases the estate should bear a fair allowance for attorney's fees incident to the trustee's opposing, though unsuccessfully, an application for a discharge.<sup>89</sup>

The question as to allowance of attorney's fees, like other contested questions, may be certified by the referee to the judge for his decision at the instance of interested parties.<sup>90</sup> The fact that an allowance to the trustee's attorney is in a lump sum, without a detail of items, is not ground for reversal thereof.<sup>91</sup>

The court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to pass on the reasonableness of a contingent fee retained by an attorney under an agreement with the trustee for conducting a suit, and, if found excessive, to require the excess to be refunded,<sup>92</sup> and, where the trustee obtained authority to employ an attorney on a contingent fee but suppressed facts, knowledge of which would have prevented the giving of such authority, the contract may be set aside and reasonable compensation awarded.<sup>93</sup> The same per-

§ 1324. — Attorney for receiver.

A receiver is entitled to the assistance of counsel, and to a reasonable allowance therefor,<sup>98</sup> to be paid out of the estate to the extent that the attorney acted directly in behalf of the estate, or it has been benefited by what he has done,<sup>99</sup> but he is not entitled to an allowance for services performed by counsel for the petitioning creditors.<sup>1</sup>

No claim for services as attorney for the receiver is chargeable per se against the estate, predicated alone upon the fact of employment and service rendered,<sup>2</sup> and expenses and compensation of the receiver and his attorneys will be disallowed where it appears that they acted fraudulently and that the receivership was unnecessary.<sup>3</sup>

The attorney for the receiver should not be allowed any fees for services rendered in obtaining the receiver's appointment, or other matters preliminary to the appointment, since such services are rendered in the interest of the moving creditors and should be collected from the estate in the hands of the trustee.<sup>4</sup>

Where an order appointing a receiver is vacated because the receiver entered into an agreement with several attorneys to divide fees, actual proper disbursements made by the receiver or the attorneys will be allowed, but no compensation will be allowed to any of them.<sup>5</sup>

The allowance to a receiver is entirely within the discretion of the court, unaffected by the report of the referee.<sup>6</sup> The number of attorneys should not enter into the allowance of attorney's fees.<sup>7</sup>

§ 1325. — Attorney for general assignee.

The attorneys for an assignee under a voluntary general assignment, in possession prior to the bankruptcy proceedings, should not be allowed any compensation out of the estate,<sup>8</sup> except upon a showing of absolute necessity for such employment which resulted in benefit to the estate.<sup>9</sup> Nor should a trustee in a chattel deed of trust executed by an insolvent for the benefit of creditors, be allowed compensation for his services in executing his trust.<sup>10</sup>

§ 1326. — Procedure to obtain allowance.

A claim for an attorney's fee under section 64b (3) must be presented to the court of original jurisdiction.<sup>11</sup> The reasonableness of the fee is to be determined by the court or referee and may be done ex parte.<sup>12</sup> Action thereon may be suspended for a reasonable time to get testimony as to the amount allowable, but if it is then impossible to secure such testimony, the referee should decide the question on the evidence before him.<sup>13</sup> Proceedings to test the propriety of payments to an attorney for all services, namely those rendered before the payment as well as those services to be rendered in the bankruptcy proceeding itself, should be taken in the form of a motion to fix the allowance, and for an order directing the return of the balance, unless an issue is raised.<sup>14</sup>

A fee to the attorney for the bankrupt or petitioning creditors should not be allowed except upon notice to the parties interested, and upon petition and recommendation of the bankrupt or the petitioning creditors,<sup>15</sup> but it is held that attorneys for the trustee or receiver may present their claims direct.<sup>16</sup> Under the act as it existed prior to the amendment of 1910 no notice of the application of a receiver's attorney for compensation was necessary.<sup>17</sup>

The trustee is the only party who can object to the disallowance of attorney's fees to his attorney. The attorney has no standing to object.<sup>18</sup>

§ 1327. Auctioneer's fees.

Priority of auctioneer's fees, see post, section 1364.

§ 1328. Bankrupt's living expenses.

While the law makes no provision for the expenses of the bankrupt or his livelihood between the adjudication and his discharge, under the equity powers of the court there appears no reason why a reasonable allowance might not be made out of the estate for the actual necessities of the bankrupt, and if there are exemptions to be subsequently set apart to him, why he should not be required to reimburse the estate therefrom, but this allowance would not include indulgence in vices or extravagant habits of living or unnecessary expenditures.<sup>19</sup>

§ 1329. Broker's commissions.

The allowance of a commission to a broker for negotiating a sale of the property is within the discretion of the court.<sup>20</sup>

§ 1330. Compensation and expenses of officers of the court.

The compensation of referees,<sup>21</sup> trustees,<sup>22</sup> clerks, marshals,<sup>23</sup> receivers,<sup>24</sup> and stenographers<sup>25</sup> is fixed by law and is in full for their services, but does not include certain expenses necessarily incurred in the performance of their duties and allowed upon the settlement of their accounts. No additional compensation can be granted, though the services are valuable and worth more than the commissions fixed by the act.<sup>26</sup> Fees not required to be paid before filing the petition may be ordered by the judge at any time paid out of the estate, or, after notice and proof that bankrupt can pay them, the judge may require him to do so.<sup>27</sup>

The judge may order the commissions paid immediately after they are earned.<sup>28</sup> Notice of an application by a receiver for compensation must specify the amount asked.<sup>29</sup>

A notice of hearing for fixing the allowances to a receiver which as to each allowance specifies exactly the amount asked is not insufficient in failing to request an additional allowance as provided in section 48e.<sup>30</sup>

Before incurring any expense in publishing or mailing notices, or in traveling, or in procuring witnesses, or perpetuating testimony, the clerk, marshal or referee may require from the person desiring the service indemnity for such expense, and money advanced for such purpose must be repaid as part of the costs of administering the estate.<sup>31</sup> The cost of preserving the estate subsequent to filing the petition, the cost of administration, including witness fees and mileage according to the laws of the United States, and one reasonable attorney's fees, are debts entitled to priority of payment.<sup>32</sup>

§ 1331. Costs of obtaining composition.

Costs and disbursements in connection with an application to confirm a composition are not recoverable from the estate.<sup>33</sup>

§ 1332. Expense of contest of claims.

Claims must be established at the expense of claimants, and no allowance of costs to the attorney of a creditor whose claim is unsuccessfully contested will be made out of the estate.<sup>34</sup> However, it is held, that a creditor who contests the validity of the claim of another is liable, upon the decision being adverse to him, for the taxable costs and disbursements of the creditor whose claim was contested, and the fees, costs and expenses of the referee.<sup>35</sup> A creditor proving a claim is in no sense a witness nor entitled to fees.<sup>36</sup> A party seeking re-examination of an allowed claim is required to indemnify the claimant for traveling expenses incurred by him in coming to the hearing.<sup>37</sup>

Attorneys for creditors successfully defending claims against the estate are not entitled to compensation out of the estate where the trustee had not refused to act,<sup>38</sup> but where one of the creditors successfully objects to the allowance of a claim filed by another creditor, after the trustee declines to interfere, thereby saving a considerable sum for distribution among the creditors generally, his attorney contesting such claim may be allowed a fee to be paid out of the estate.<sup>39</sup>

Where a contest over a claim was carried on for the sole purpose of controlling the election of the trustee, costs of the contest will not be allowed.<sup>40</sup>

§ 1333. Expense of continuing business.

Employees of the bankrupt who continue the business of the bankrupt without authority from the court will not be allowed compensation for services after the adjudication as part of the expenses of administration.<sup>41</sup> The continuing of the business of the bankrupt by his employees for the remainder of one day after the filing of the petition has been held not to constitute the carrying on of the business of the bankrupt entitling them to compensation within the meaning section 2 (5).<sup>42</sup>

The compensation of trustees, marshals, and receivers for carrying on the business of the bankrupt is treated elsewhere.<sup>43</sup>

§ 1334. Expense of procuring or preventing a discharge.

The question as to whether an allowance may be made out of the estate in the matter of bankrupt's application for a discharge is one on which the courts do not agree, though the better opinion would seem not to favor such allowance.<sup>44</sup> However, moneys advanced by the bankrupt to pay for notices of a hearing upon application for a discharge should be repaid him out of the estate.<sup>45</sup>

The power to award costs against an objecting creditor who fails to substantiate his specifications of objections in opposition to a discharge is discretionary, and where it appears that the objections are made in good faith, the court may refuse to tax costs against such creditor,<sup>46</sup> but if the objections are frivolous and vexatious, the costs may be taxed against the objecting creditor.<sup>47</sup> A creditor may prosecute his objections to a discharge in forma pauperis,<sup>48</sup> though, in some districts, the person interested in preventing a discharge is required to deposit with

Creditors' expenses in opposing the bankrupt's discharge, though successful, should not be paid out of the estate,<sup>50</sup> though it is held that such expenses should be borne by all the creditors who are benefited thereby, if the opposition is successful, and, if unsuccessful, may in the discretion of the court, be paid out of the estate.<sup>51</sup>

§ 1335. Costs upon dismissal of petition for adjudication.

If a petition in involuntary bankruptcy is dismissed the debtor may recover costs against the petitioners.<sup>52</sup>

Liability of petitioners for damages, etc., upon dismissal of petition, see Chapter IX.

§ 1336. Costs in obtaining exemptions.

Services rendered in having the bankrupt's exemption allowed will not be fixed by the court.<sup>53</sup>

§ 1337. Costs to petitioning creditors.

In involuntary cases, where the debtor resists the adjudication, and the court, after hearing, adjudges the debtor a bankrupt, the petitioning creditor shall recover, and be paid out of the estate, similar costs as are allowed to a party recovering in a suit in equity.<sup>54</sup>

§ 1338. Expenses of creditors in recovering assets.

The reasonable expenses of one or more creditors in recovering property for the benefit of the estate may be allowed.<sup>55</sup>

§ 1340. Rent.

Rent after the leased property is in the hands of the court may be allowed as part of the necessary costs and expenses of administration.<sup>57</sup> Where the landlord has failed to make a claim for use and occupation of the premises as an expense of administration, he cannot thereafter maintain an action against the trustee for damages for such use, though it be alleged that the action sounds in tort, it being in reality an attempt to collect rent.<sup>58</sup> A landlord's claim for use of premises used by the receiver or trustee is not for rent under his lease with the bankrupt but for quantum meruit. The courts, however, in several instances have adopted the rent fixed by the lease as a fair measure of the reasonable value of such use.<sup>59</sup>

Right of referee to employ stenographic help, see ante, section 366.

§ 1342. Witness fees.

Priority of witness fees is elsewhere treated.<sup>60</sup>

§ 1343. Funds available for payment of expense.

Proceeds of exempt property cannot be used in payment of commissions,<sup>61</sup> nor can commissions be allowed out of property which comes into the possession of the trustee through the fraud of the bankrupt and is adjudged to be returned to the real owner.<sup>62</sup> Commissions should not ordinarily be paid out of the proceeds of incumbered property which are insufficient to pay off the incumbrance. The bankruptcy act in so far as it authorizes payment of commissions of the referee and trustee from the proceeds of the sale of incumbered property only applies to cases in which the court rightfully exercised its jurisdiction to sell free from liens, or where the lien holder consents to such sale.<sup>63</sup>

Payment of costs and expenses of administration out of incumbered property, see also, post, section 1348.

In partnership cases, "the expenses shall be paid from the partnership property and the individual property in such proportions as the court shall determine."<sup>64</sup>

Where there are assets of the firm and of one or more individual members, the joint estate and the individual estates must each pay its proportion of the expenses of administration.<sup>65</sup> Except in the matter of expense, it is of no consequence whether there are two proceedings or only one by or against partners, for the rights of creditors and others are the same.<sup>66</sup>

§ 1344. Report and approval of expenses—Notice.

Section 62a of the act provides, that "the actual and necessary expenses incurred by officers in the administration of estates shall, except where other provisions are made for their payment be reported in detail, under oath, and examined and approved or disapproved by the court. If approved, they shall be paid or allowed out of the estates in which they were incurred."<sup>67</sup> This section clearly makes it the duty of the officers to render itemized accounts under oath and that the court shall examine and approve or disapprove the same; in other words, that, upon an accounting by a trustee, while creditors have a right to examine and object to such account and be heard thereon, it is the duty of the referee to examine the items in detail.<sup>68</sup> Exceptions should be promptly filed if a receiver's account is objected to and after the questions thus raised are determined by the ref-

- § 1405. Procedure to obtain priority.

§ 1345. Jurisdiction to determine priorities.

The court of bankruptcy, which includes the referee,<sup>1</sup> has jurisdiction to determine claims of priority to property and money constituting part of the estate of the bankrupt, but it will not undertake to determine priorities to a fund which is not a part of the estate for distribution.<sup>2</sup>

§ 1346. Order of priority.

§ 1347. — In general.

The order of priority, (1) taxes, (2) cost of preserving the estate, (3) costs of administration, (4) wages, and (5) liens in their order, prescribed (subdivisions a and b section 64), is that usually followed in equity. That all bankrupt's property in the control of the court should be distributed according to this order is but reasonable and in accord with the course adopted in railroad receiverships, which go even farther and give priority over the mortgages to receiver's certificates issued for operating expenses and betterments. Taxes are prior in lien to all other liens except judicial costs,<sup>3</sup> which costs usually include reasonable allowance to counsel<sup>4</sup> as well as the actual and necessary cost of preserving the estate subsequent to the filing of the petition,<sup>5</sup> and are paid even before exemptions are set aside. Wages are almost universally given like priority over statutory and contractual liens,<sup>6</sup> but have been held not entitled to priority over the expenses and allowances to the receiver in bankruptcy and his attorney.<sup>7</sup>

The order of distribution prescribed by the bankruptcy act should be observed though the provisions of the state law prescribe a different order.<sup>8</sup>

The debts entitled to priority are to be paid in full and in the order set forth in section 64 of the statute, and this is true although such payment may exhaust the fund and leave nothing for the satisfaction of subsequently enumerated priority claims. Any liens not enumerated in this section, follow in the order provided by the state law, and it has been held that although there may be specific liens on the estate sufficient in the aggregate to exhaust the entire assets, their payment must be postponed to the payment of wages or the cost and expenses of administration.<sup>9</sup> Furthermore, where there are only sufficient funds to pay priority claims, the trustee will not be permitted to expend the estate in litigation concerning the right of general creditors.<sup>10</sup>

§ 1348. — In case of incumbered property.

The first two subdivisions (a and b) of section 64 direct the order of distribution of the bankrupt's property. Notwithstanding it has been held that it is applicable only after the assets have been marshaled and the liens discharged<sup>11</sup> and that it does not affect liens which come within other provisions of the statute,<sup>12</sup> the better opinion is that it applies to all of the bankrupt's property which may come under the control of the bankruptcy court and is administered in the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>13</sup> The law provides for a full and complete settlement of the bankrupt's affairs as of the date of the filing of the petition. To do this it is not sufficient to consider only the unsecured creditors and the property which remains after the liens are satisfied, but it is necessary to see that the liens are satisfied in their proper order and that the balance of the bankrupt's property is distributed among his other creditors in their order. That the act recognizes this fact is shown in the requirement that all the bankrupt's property, whether encumbered or not, and all his creditors, secured as well as unsecured, must be included in his schedules;<sup>14</sup> that the trustee is to examine into the securities and take proper steps to save any excess over the amount secured;<sup>15</sup> and that the court of bankruptcy may sell the property free of liens, transferring the liens to the proceeds, or subject to liens, or direct the trustee to appear in any proceeding to enforce the liens, whichever course will best subserve the interest of the bankrupt estate and also preserve the valid rights of the lienors;<sup>16</sup> at the same time the act recognizes as valid various liens.<sup>17</sup> To illustrate, suppose the bankrupt owned a recently improved residence lot, worth, with improvements, $16,000, on which there were taxes due, a vendor's lien for part of the purchase money of the lot, a mortgage for money borrowed to improve the property, a judgment subsequent to said mortgage which was a lien on the property, and labor and mechanics' liens, which by the law of the state took precedence of all other liens, while the bankrupt claimed his homestead exemption, which the state law limited in value, out of the property, and that, if sold free of liens, the property would sell for enough to pay all these claims and leave something for the other creditors. Clearly it would be the trustee's duty under the act to apply to the court to order such a sale and of the court to grant it, thus bringing the proceeds into the bankruptcy court, to be administered in the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>18</sup>

Whether the incumbered property is brought in voluntarily or involuntarily would seem to make no difference, as the same reasons exist in either case for subjecting the security to the prior payments. No injustice is thereby done the secured creditor since it would not be brought into the bankruptcy proceedings unless there were other claims which the state or federal laws gave priority over such lien, or it was believed that something could thereby be obtained over and above the secured debt.<sup>19</sup> Unless it forms practically all the bankrupt's property, in which case it would only bear the costs and expenses of realizing on it in the best and most economical manner, it only bears its proportion of the costs. Similarly it has been held that, where incumbered property was disposed of through the bankruptcy proceedings, the amount paid the secured creditors was a dividend.<sup>20</sup> If there is nothing apparently in the property over the security and it is not brought into the bankruptcy proceedings, no service is rendered the secured creditor, no benefit accrues to him from the proceedings, and no reason exists for charging him with any part of the expenses. There is no inequality, or lack of uniformity, in this; the one benefits and pays; the other receives nothing and is required to give nothing. The state insolvency or assignment laws are not to be compared with the bankrupt law in this respect, because the state constitutions prohibit laws impairing the obligations of contracts which the United States constitution does not. A law, however, is not to be construed as impairing the obligations of contracts unless susceptible of no other construction. The year allowed in many states after a sale under a mortgage for the mortgagor to redeem, during which he retains possession, receives the rents and profits and may neglect and waste the property, is a practical illustration of where the contract does not result according to its terms. This is sustained as relating to the remedy. This very year of redemption has been used as a reason for bringing incumbered property into bankruptcy.<sup>21</sup>

In many cases claims, though subsequent in point of time, are prior liens, as a labor claim over a prior mortgage or lien;<sup>22</sup> a mechanic's lien over a mortgage;<sup>23</sup> or a labor claim over a landlord's lien.<sup>24</sup>

If there is a fund to be distributed among creditors, and some take subordinate to a lien, and there are others not affected by the lien, those who are not affected by the lien are paid first, and the lien creditor is postponed to them.<sup>25</sup>

§ 1349. Taxes.

§ 1350. — Right to priority.

Taxes legally due and owing by the bankrupt to a state, county, district or municipality, are first in order of priority, and the courts will not favor any evasion of the law by giving a too liberal construction to its words. The manifest intent of the law is that, while the estate is in the hands of the trustee, his custody will not constitute a barrier to prevent the collection of taxes which would be collectible under the law if the property had remained in the possession and control of the bankrupt himself.<sup>26</sup>

To be entitled to priority, the tax must be due and owing at the time the petition in bankruptcy is filed.<sup>27</sup> A tax may, however, be legally due and owing at the time of the filing of the petition, though not payable until after the adjudication.<sup>28</sup> Taxes that are due and owing should be paid before the secured creditors.<sup>29</sup>

The taxes of the state where the property of a bankrupt corporation is situated have no priority over those of the state of its organization, as under the present act all taxes whether those of the United States, or of a state, county, district or municipality are given an equal right of priority.<sup>30</sup>

The amount, as well as the legality, of the tax may be inquired into, and if the tax is found to be excessive the same is not entitled to priority, even though the time allowed by the local law for the review thereof has expired.<sup>31</sup> Taxes are not deprived of their right to priority by the fact that under the state law they are not debts enforceable by suit against the owner,<sup>32</sup> nor can laches in collecting them affect their priority.<sup>33</sup> It is immaterial that the property upon which the tax was levied never passed into the hands of the trustee.<sup>34</sup> So, the fact that the county treasurer upon being satisfied that no one will bid in property on a tax sale strikes the same off to the county does not extinguish the debt nor deprive the county of its right to priority, nor can the trustee in bankruptcy by relinquishing the property to the mortgagee, with or without the consent of the court in a proceeding to which the county was not a party, destroy such right to priority.<sup>35</sup>

Where there are two funds, one available to general creditors, and the other to secured creditors, taxes should be paid out of the fund available to the general creditors.<sup>36</sup> It is held, however, that taxes assessed against property of the estate which has been taken from the estate by a mortgage foreclosure should be postponed to the expenses of administration under the general rule of marshaling assets, since the taxes are still a lien against the mortgaged property and the remedy against such property ought to be first exhausted.<sup>37</sup>

A claim for taxes will not be paid as a priority claim out of bankrupt's estate, where he merely holds property under a lease in which he agreed to pay all taxes against the leased property.<sup>38</sup>

A trustee should not pay taxes where such payment would operate to the advantage of a third party against another, they being in any event secure.<sup>39</sup>

In the case of taxes due a state, county or municipality, the claim therefor should be proved like that of any other creditor.

Penalties for non-payment of taxes are included in the amount of the tax,<sup>40</sup> and interest may be allowed on them up to the time of payment.<sup>41</sup>

§ 1351. — What are taxes.

The supreme court has defined a tax to be a pecuniary burden laid upon individuals or property for the purpose of supporting the government.<sup>42</sup> The word tax is used in an unrestricted sense and includes all obligations imposed by the state and general governments, under their respective taxing and police powers, for governmental or public purposes. That a tax so imposed may not be a general property tax does not deprive it of its character as a tax.<sup>43</sup> within the meaning of the act;<sup>45</sup> nor a finding of a state board as to the amount of the tax<sup>46</sup> conclusive upon the bankruptcy court.

In order to entitle a tax to priority, it should not be a mere claim clothed with the garb of a tax, but should be actually a tax, so that if it is a mere bonus exacted by the state for the privilege of increasing the capital stock of a corporation<sup>47</sup> or a penalty imposed upon a corporation for failure to perform certain acts<sup>48</sup> it is not entitled to priority. A tax imposed upon corporate bondholders which it is made the duty of the corporation to collect is not a tax upon the corporation and is not entitled to priority in the distribution of the corporation's assets,<sup>49</sup> nor is the liability of the bankrupt to a municipality for taxes collected by him as an officer of the county entitled to priority.<sup>50</sup> However, a license fee or franchise tax imposed upon a corporation is a tax and entitled to priority of payment,<sup>51</sup> as is a cigarette tax imposed against dealers in cigarettes,<sup>52</sup> and water rents due to a municipality.<sup>53</sup> has full knowledge of the non-payment of taxes, nor third parties who bid in the property at a tax sale, and hold tax certificates are entitled to relief out of the assets of the estate.<sup>54</sup> So, a grantee who pays taxes assessed against the property while owned by the bankrupt will not be subrogated to the rights of the municipality,<sup>55</sup> and when the trustee transfers property subject to the payment of taxes then owing, the grantee or a purchaser from him are under obligation to pay the same, and cannot be subrogated to the rights of the municipality for a preferential payment thereof out of the estate.<sup>56</sup>

Under the former law it was held that the claim of lessors of a bankrupt lessee for the amount of taxes paid by them, which the lessee had covenanted to pay, was not entitled to priority,<sup>57</sup> nor was a debt due a foreign state for taxes.<sup>58</sup>

§ 1353. — Taxes on exempt property.

Taxes due on exempt property at the time of bankruptcy should be paid by the trustee in bankruptcy out of the fund which would otherwise go to the general creditors, although such taxes are a lien upon and enforceable against such exempted property, since they are taxes legally due and owing as provided by this section, and the bankrupt is entitled to the full amount of exemption allowed by the state law.<sup>59</sup> receiver and reasonable counsel fees, (3) receivership debts, (4) assenting bondholders, (5) simple contract debts.<sup>67</sup>

A plaintiff in an attachment within four months of bankruptcy is not entitled to priority of payment of the costs of caring for property prior to the petition, such claim being held "a claim for taxable costs," provable under section 63 (3) of the statute<sup>68</sup> unless given priority by the state law.<sup>69</sup>

While costs for the care and preservation of property incurred prior to the filing of the petition are not within the express terms of this provision, when they result in benefit to the whole estate and not to any particular creditor or in the duplication of charges, they are in effect given practical priority under the equity powers of the bankrupt courts and should be paid in full.<sup>70</sup> Thus a judgment creditor, who had set aside a fraudulent conveyance but lost his prior right to the fund by the adjudication of the debtor bankrupt, will be allowed reasonable indemnity for his expenses in securing such result;<sup>71</sup> and an assignee in a voluntary assignment, made in good faith and who has acted likewise, has been allowed the money actually disbursed by him in preserving the estate and a reasonable sum as custodian.<sup>72</sup> This was the view taken under the act of 1867, in which the provision was "costs . . . for the custody of the property, as herein provided,"<sup>73</sup> implying clearly the custody after the commencement of the proceedings.<sup>74</sup> Under the present act, it has been held<sup>75</sup> that this provision relates to costs directly connected with the proceedings in bankruptcy and does not exclude, from the priority given them by the state law, fees and costs accruing, though prior to the petition, in legal proceedings not directly connected with the bankruptcy proceedings; and also includes expenses incurred by a receiver appointed to take charge of the property by the bankruptcy court.<sup>76</sup>

§ 1358. — Receivership.

In bankruptcy matters litigation should not as a rule be conducted by a receiver, yet when services of an attorney or counsel are necessary to a proper care of the estate and the performance of his duties as receiver, he is entitled to an allowance for such services, to be charged and allowed as an expense of the receivership. In that case such expenses would be entitled to priority of payment.<sup>77</sup>

Claims for goods purchased by the receiver in excess of his authority are not entitled to priority over liens.<sup>78</sup>

Receiver's certificates issued to raise money with which to prevent a deterioration of the property have been held entitled to priority,<sup>79</sup> even as against liens.<sup>80</sup> Where the receiver does not issue certificates to the full amount to which he is authorized but creates debts for the purpose of preserving the estate for which he does not issue certificates, the creditors not holding certificates are entitled to share on an equal basis with those holding certificates.<sup>81</sup> Knowledge of the receivership and the receipt of payment from the receiver may estop a mortgagee from denying the right of the holders of the certificates to priority.<sup>82</sup>

for the benefit of the estate by the efforts and at the expense of one or more of the creditors, the reasonable expenses of such recovery is entitled to priority of payment.<sup>83</sup> The amendment is not retroactive. The allowance may include reimbursement for the expense of employing counsel to examine the bankrupt prior to the appointment of the trustee.<sup>84</sup>

While the law does not specifically provide for the case where a fund belonging to the estate is rescued from destruction, expenses incurred therein would doubtless be entitled to a like priority.<sup>85</sup> It is not to be understood from this, however, that a creditor may indiscriminately institute proceedings for the recovery of property and thus burden the estate with costs or litigation, but the proper procedure is first to apply to the trustee, who is the logical representative of all the creditors, to bring the suit, and only if he declines would the creditors be authorized to proceed. If there be no trustee, the creditors may proceed. In any case unless there is a resulting benefit to the estate, the expenses incurred by a creditor would not be entitled to priority under this subdivision of the statute.

§ 1360. Filing fees in involuntary cases.

The present act<sup>86</sup> gives priority to the filing fees paid by creditors in involuntary cases,<sup>87</sup> and allows petitioning creditors in involuntary cases, if successful, the same costs as in an equity suit. This gives petitioning creditors practically all the former act did. Under the act of 1867, notaries taking proofs of debt in bankruptcy proceedings were held not entitled to priority in the payment of their fees.<sup>88</sup>

§ 1363. — Debts of assignee.

Debts contracted by a common-law assignee are not payable as part of the expenses of administration. Such claims should be paid by the assignee and a claim presented against the estate.<sup>95</sup>

§ 1364. — Auctioneer's fees.

As unless otherwise ordered by the court,<sup>96</sup> all sales must be by public auction, the fees of the auctioneer are allowable and entitled to priority. It is not true now, as held under the act of 1867, that, the trustee being expected to conduct the sales, the necessity of the auctioneer's employment must be affirmatively shown before his fees will be allowed.<sup>97</sup>

Such rent is compensation for use and occupation and hence not necessarily determined by the terms of a previously existing lease or the amount the bankrupt had been previously paying, though such amounts may form the basis of its computation, nor is it a claim against the estate as such, but an expense incurred for its preservation and to be paid pro rata with other costs of administration.<sup>99</sup> The length of such occupation must be reasonable and the court will determine such fact and allow for such time only.<sup>1</sup> It has been held that the prevention of injury to the premises by failing to remove machinery and the like is not to be considered in determining such compensation.<sup>2</sup>

§ 1368. Attorney or counsel fees.

Section 64b (3) provides for the allowance as costs of administration of one reasonable attorney's fee, for professional services rendered, irrespective of the number of attorneys employed, to the petitioning creditors in involuntary cases, to the bankrupt in involuntary cases while performing the duties prescribed by the act, and to the bankrupt in voluntary cases as the court may allow.<sup>6</sup> Questions as to the reasonableness and propriety of such fees are fully discussed in the preceding chapter.

An attorney cannot schedule his claim for services prior to the petition as an unsecured claim and then claim it as a priority under section 64,<sup>7</sup> but priority of payment of the fee of bankrupt's attorney out of the funds on hand is not lost because a claim was not presented until after the declaration and payment of the first dividend;<sup>8</sup> nor because there is a claim for rent which became a lien upon the property more than four months before the filing of the petition, the order of payment as well as the priority being fixed by this subdivision;<sup>9</sup> nor because there are specific liens on the property.<sup>10</sup>

An attorney appearing for creditors in opposition of a motion to dismiss the proceedings is entitled to priority.<sup>11</sup> It is held that no allowance of fees to the attorney for a petitioning creditor should be made from the proceeds of incumbered property, where it is impossible to ascertain what sum will remain, after the payment of all valid liens, for distribution among unsecured creditors.<sup>12</sup>

attorney is entitled to a lien on the proceeds for his fee in prosecuting such claim, and the court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to pass on his right, fix the amount, with or without a jury, and enforce it in the distribution of the proceeds, notwithstanding that the trustee may have paid such lien creditor his distributive share, it having been paid without due authority.<sup>13</sup>

§ 1369. Wages and labor claims.

§ 1370. — In general.

Wages due to workmen, clerks, traveling or city salesmen, or servants, which have been earned within three months before the date of filing the petition, not to exceed three hundred dollars to each claimant, are entitled to priority of payment. The words workmen, clerks or servants as here used are neither co-extensive nor limited by the word wage-earner as defined by the law,<sup>14</sup> but are to be understood in their ordinary signification. Thus a clerk is one employed to keep records or accounts, an amanuensis, a scribe, accountant, and bookkeeper,<sup>15</sup> or a salesman in a store.<sup>16</sup> A servant is one employed by another for menial offices, or who labors for the benefit of a master or employer and is subject to command, a subordinate helper or assistant,<sup>17</sup> and may include a musician employed at regular wages,<sup>18</sup> or a salesman in a retail store,<sup>19</sup> but not a factor,<sup>20</sup> or the editor of a newspaper.<sup>21</sup> A workman is one employed in labor, whether in tillage or manufacture, a worker, an artificer or laborer, skilled or unskilled, a mechanic or artisan, a handi-

One who is under a contract with the bankrupt by which he agrees to put out certain work for a certain price, furnishing his own men, and getting the benefit of their labor, is not a workman.<sup>24</sup> A teamster is entitled to priority only for such amount as his personal services are worth exclusive of the value of the use of his wagon and team.<sup>25</sup> One engaged at a monthly price to deliver milk at the bankrupt's premises is not a workman or servant,<sup>26</sup> nor is the claim of the proprietor of a blacksmith shop for shoeing horses and sharpening tools of the bankrupt entitled to priority.<sup>27</sup> A contractor using his plant,<sup>28</sup> or a manager in charge of a branch of a broker's office in another state<sup>29</sup> or the president or managing officer of a corporation<sup>30</sup> is not entitled to priority, but a claimant will not be deprived of his or her right to priority as a wage-earner by the fact that he or she is also an officer of the bankrupt corporation,<sup>31</sup> or the wife, or daughter of the bankrupt.<sup>32</sup> The provision in favor of wage-earners should not be stretched, however, to cover claims of principals in disguise.<sup>33</sup>

Prior to the amendment of 1906<sup>37</sup> a traveling salesman,<sup>38</sup> or an agent selling goods on a stipulated commission,<sup>39</sup> was not entitled to priority. That amendment, which is not retroactive,<sup>40</sup> provides that the wages due a city or traveling salesman are entitled to the same right of priority as wages due a workman, clerk or servant. The fact that his wages are in the form of commissions<sup>41</sup> or that commissions are based upon all sales made in the salesman's territory rather than upon sales directly traceable to him<sup>42</sup> is immaterial, and the fact that by agreement with his employer the salesman is to pay his own expenses cannot lessen the latter's right to the agreed compensation, where the expenses are fairly incidental to the service to be performed.<sup>43</sup>

Under a contract by which a salesman becomes entitled to his commissions only upon the acceptance of the article sold and payment therefor, the date of such acceptance and payment and not the date of the sale determines whether the commission was earned within three months of bankruptcy or not.<sup>44</sup>

It may be generally stated that labor claims are entitled to priority and payment in full before the discharge of liens against the estate;<sup>45</sup> and there appears no reason why the trustee might not pay the same as soon as sufficient money for that purpose comes into his hands.<sup>46</sup> Labor claims are entitled to priority over claims of the United States or a contractor subrogated to its rights,<sup>47</sup> and a claim of a clerk for wages earned within three months of the bankruptcy of his employer has been held superior to a claim of the bankrupt for homestead exemptions out of the proceeds of the bankrupt estate, irrespective of any provisions of the state law.<sup>48</sup>

§ 1371. — Breach of contract of employment.

If an employee under a contract for services for a fixed period is discharged, and before the expiration of such contract period the employer becomes bankrupt, the employee would be entitled to priority of payment for wages due within the three months prior to bankruptcy not to exceed $300, provided such employee would have a right of action and could recover such wages, since they would not be merged by an action that might be necessary in order to secure their liquidation or collection.<sup>49</sup>

§ 1373. — Application of payments.

Payments made by the bankrupt will be applied in discharge of wages earned prior to the three-month period unless it clearly appears that the parties intended otherwise.<sup>51</sup>

§ 1374. — Priority under state laws.

Subdivision 4 of section 64 of the statute limiting the amount of wages to that earned within three months is not to be considered as being affected or enlarged by any general prior or subsequent provision in the law, as subdivision 5, which accords priority of payment to "debts owing to any person who by laws of the states or United States is entitled to priority," but such latter provision is to be construed as applying to debts other and different from those specified in clause 4.<sup>52</sup>

Priority of labor liens, see also, post, section 1389.

Hence, if under the laws of the state wages for a greater period than three months are entitled to priority, allowance can be made only for such as are earned within the three months.<sup>53</sup>

§ 1375. — Wages assigned or in judgment.

or after<sup>55</sup> bankruptcy, provided he has not novated the debt or merged it with other debts by taking new obligations or securities wholly due and payable to himself.<sup>56</sup> A party's advancing money to pay labor claims does not, however, entitle him to be subrogated to the rights of the laborers, without an express assignment.<sup>57</sup> There is nothing to prevent a father from proving as entitled to priority, a claim for a minor son for labor as an operative.<sup>58</sup>

The general rule that a cause of action is merged in the judgment, does not apply to the case of an employee having a claim against bankrupt for wages earned within three months of the commencement of the proceedings upon which he recovers a judgment, but such claim for wages may be proved as an unsecured debt and will be entitled to priority of payment.<sup>59</sup>

§ 1376. Debts entitled to priority under state or federal laws.

§ 1377. — In general.

Fifth in the order of payment of the debts entitled to priority under section 64b of the present bankruptcy law are "debts owing to any person who by the laws of the states or of the United States is entitled to priority." As has been stated, this provision applies to debts other than and different from those specified in the previous clauses of the subdivision; and does not affect or enlarge such specific provision.<sup>60</sup> But it has been held on the contrary that where wage claimants were entitled to liens by virtue of a state law, they are entitled to priority under subdivision 5 of this section, though the wages were not earned within three months before the date of the commencement of bankruptcy proceedings,<sup>61</sup> but this is contrary to the weight of authority.<sup>62</sup> If both a state law and the bankruptcy act give priority to the same class of debts, the latter not alone controls the state law in case of absolute conflict between the two, but by its express regulation of these priorities, excludes the state law altogether.<sup>63</sup>

Provision is made elsewhere for determining the validity of liens; <sup>64</sup> but, if found valid, this provision recognizes their right to priority according to the state or federal laws; <sup>65</sup> notwithstanding that the provision of the state law giving priority forms part of its insolvency law, the insolvency laws being suspended only so far as they come into conflict with the bankrupt law or intrude on its province. The rule that the federal bankruptcy act supersedes all state insolvency or bankruptcy laws relative to persons or acts declared by congress to be subjects of bankruptcy relates merely to the administration of the state laws in proceedings in the state courts, and does not prevent the enforcement in federal bankruptcy proceedings of any general priorities recognized by the state laws, where such priorities are conferred by the state laws as substantive rights of priority not dependent upon the resort to particular remedies accessible only in proceedings in the state courts, and where such priorities are not in conflict with the express priorities declared by the bankruptcy act itself or otherwise in conflict with its provisions.<sup>66</sup>

§ 1378. — Debts assumed by bankrupt.

Where the bankrupt has assumed the debts of a third party, the creditors of the latter are entitled to share equally with the bankrupt's creditors, in the distribution of the proceeds of a personal privilege of the bankrupt.<sup>69</sup>

§ 1379. — Claim of cestui que trust.

It has been held that the question whether the owner of a trust fund is entitled to a preference over other creditors must be determined by the federal decisions.<sup>70</sup>

Ordinarily, the owner of a trust fund can secure a preference out of the proceeds of the estate only where he can trace the trust property or fund, in its original or substituted form, into the hands of the trustee.<sup>71</sup> So, creditors who base their claims upon the misapplication of trust funds by the bankrupt, or conversion by him of property left in his possession, are not entitled to priority over general creditors unless the money or proceeds of the property can be traced to some specific fund and distinguished.<sup>72</sup>

The claim of a cestui que trust in proceeds of converted property has been held entitled to priority over the claim of trustee for compensation.<sup>73</sup>

Title of trustee to property held in trust, see ante, section 852.

§ 1380. — Claims on checks, or orders.

Whether or not a claim founded on a check given by one, who becomes bankrupt before such check is presented for payment, is entitled to priority, depends on the construction placed on the contract evidenced by the check. In jurisdictions where it

§ 1381. — Costs and fees.

While ordinarily, a claim for costs incurred by a creditor in an attachment suit commenced prior to bankruptcy is entitled to priority if accorded such by the state law,<sup>76</sup> it is held that costs incurred in an attachment suit commenced within four months of bankruptcy are not entitled to a preference though the state law so provides.<sup>77</sup> Fees of a sheriff, accruing on a writ of attachment on a provable debt, issued before the filing of the petition, and continuing in force until then, are entitled to priority under the bankruptcy act, where the law of the state gives them priority.<sup>78</sup>

§ 1382. — Claims of bank depositors.

Ordinarily when funds are deposited in bank, the relation of debtor and creditor immediately arises between the banker and the depositor, and the money becomes the property of the former. He has the right to use it but must pay the debt of the depositor by cashing his checks. When the banker obtains the deposit by committing a fraud, as by receiving it after hopelessly insolvent, the relation between the parties is different, and the money does not become the property of the bank but becomes a trust fund in the banker's hands. In such case money and checks deposited are entitled to priority of payment over the general creditors, and an equal amount may be obtained from the receiver of the bank. Checks and drafts delivered to a bank for collection and deposit under like conditions, which had not been collected when the bank closed its doors, remain the property of the depositor, although indorsed to the bank without qualification and their proceeds upon collection may be recovered by him.<sup>79</sup> In the case of drafts purchased of a bank under like condition which are returned unpaid, the purchaser has the right in equity to reclaim the amount paid therefor.<sup>80</sup> A savings bank would be entitled to priority of payment out of the assets of an insolvent bank created under a statute providing that "upon it becoming insolvent, after paying its circulation, the assets should be first applied to paying deposits made with it by savings banks."<sup>81</sup>

The fact that the fund arose from taxes does not alter the relation of debtor and creditor, and the depositor in such case is not ordinarily entitled to any priority, but if the funds have been received from the municipality through the fraud of the bank, the bank becomes a trustee for the municipality, and the municipality is in such case entitled to a return of its entire deposit.<sup>82</sup>

§ 1383. — Claims of other depositors.

Money deposited with bankrupt, not a bank, is not, as a general rule, entitled to priority.<sup>83</sup> So, one who deposited money with the bankrupt as security, which money has been misappropriated by the bankrupt, is not entitled to priority, the money not being traceable into a specific fund,<sup>84</sup> and a lessee who makes a deposit of money as security for rent is only entitled to prove his claim for the unused portion thereof as a general creditor.<sup>85</sup>

§ 1385. — Claim of creditor making false representations.

The claim of a creditor making false representations as to the financial condition of the bankrupt upon which another creditor relies will be postponed as to the part thereof which existed at the time of the misrepresentations, to the claim of the creditor relying on the misrepresentations.<sup>87</sup>

The claim of an officer of the bankrupt corporation who has obtained property from creditors by means of fraudulent representations as to financial condition of the corporation will be postponed to the claim of the creditors so parting with their property.<sup>88</sup>

§ 1386. — Judgments.

The liens and priorities of judgments are to be determined as they existed under the state law at the time of the filing of the petition;<sup>89</sup> hence, where an execution has been properly levied, the execution creditors are entitled to priority of payment from the proceeds of the property levied on;<sup>90</sup> but a judgment of a minor court, which is not a lien on personal property until levied thereon, nor on real estate until docketed in a higher court, and from which when the petition is filed an appeal is pending, is not entitled to priority.<sup>91</sup> A judgment or levy must be one which is a valid lien under the bankruptcy act;<sup>92</sup> and it must not only be a valid lien but must be properly presented in the bankruptcy proceedings, so that attaching creditors, who have not proved their claims, cannot move that they be given priority in the proceeds of the attached goods;<sup>93</sup> and the claimant must show

A large judgment against a bankrupt, purchased by a national bank for much less than its face value and used to hinder and delay the debtor's creditors is not entitled to priority but should be postponed to the claims of the other creditors;<sup>97</sup> so where the judgment creditor failed for many years to make a levy<sup>98</sup> or to record his lien where the land was located.<sup>99</sup>

Where under a state law a lien for wages is given priority over all claims excepting taxes and costs of administration, and the lien has attached before the fund is turned over to the bankruptcy court, and it is not such an one as is avoided by the bankruptcy act, it will be respected.<sup>12</sup>

§ 1390. — Miscellaneous liens.

An attorney employed at a yearly salary is held to be within a statute giving employees a first and prior lien for all work and labor done for a corporation, and when the lien is filed it relates back to the date of employment but fixes no time limit therefor, it is sufficient if filed during the employment and, if bankruptcy intervenes during the six months after filing such lien within which suit may be brought, the bankruptcy limitation of one year supersedes the other.<sup>13</sup>

A truckman and cartman cannot claim priority under a state statute relating to general assignments since such statute is incompatible with the bankrupt act.<sup>15</sup>

§ 1391. — Mortgages.

The question of priority of a mortgage is determined by the local law<sup>16</sup> so of two mortgages on the same property the senior will be entitled to priority of payment over the junior.<sup>17</sup> Where a mortgage junior to a mechanic's lien was given in part to pay off a mortgage senior to such lien, the mortgagee may be subrogated pro tanto to the lien of the original mortgage.<sup>18</sup> The right to priority extends only to the property against which the lien exists; so that after sale of the property, under the mortgage, a balance remaining unpaid is not entitled to priority of payment out of the balance of the estate.<sup>19</sup> Where first and second mortgages exist, the latter may be displaced in favor of costs incurred in selling the property, including compensation to the trustee.<sup>20</sup>

§ 1397. — Claims of United States.

The present law as the act of 1867, specifically provides that taxes due the federal, state or municipal governments shall be entitled to priority of payment, but, unlike the former, the present law so far as the government is concerned provides for priority of taxes only. The courts have generally held that this provision was not to be considered as superseding, or in anywise limiting, sections 3466 and 3467 of the Revised Statutes, but was to be construed as supplementary and in pari materia, being inserted in the present law merely to recognize and reaffirm the right which those sections gave to exclude the possibility of a different conclusion.<sup>44</sup> This construction was, however, expressly disapproved by the supreme court in a recent decision,<sup>45</sup> in which a labor claim was awarded priority over a debt due the United States. It was there said, "By the statute of 1797 (now section 3466) and section 5101 of the Revised Statutes, all debts due to the United States were expressly given priority to the wages due any operative, clerk, or house servant. A different order is prescribed by the act of 1898, and something more. Labor claims are given priority, and it is provided that debts having priority shall be paid in full. The only exception is 'taxes legally due and owing by the bankrupt to the United States, state, county, district, or municipality.' These were civil obligations, not personal conventions, and preference was given to them; but as to debts, we must assume a change of purpose in the change of order. And we cannot say that it was inadvertent. The act takes into consideration, we think, the whole range of indebtedness of the bankrupt—national, state, and individual—and assigns the order of payment. The policy which dictated it was beneficent and well might induce a postponement of the claims, even of the sovereign, in favor of those who necessarily depend upon their daily labor. And to give such claims priority could in no case seriously affect the sovereign. To deny them priority would in all cases seriously affect the claimants."

The decision of the supreme court necessarily renders inoperative the various decisions as to the necessity of proving a claim

§ 1399. — Claims of unpaid vendor.

While ordinarily an unpaid vendor may be entitled to priority in the proceeds of the land conveyed, the rule is not absolute.<sup>54</sup> An unpaid vendor of personal property, whose contract of conditional sale has been held void as to the trustee, may, nevertheless, participate in the estate equally with the other creditors.<sup>55</sup>

In the absence of any agreement as between the vendor in a conditional sale of personal property and the bondholders or mortgagees under a mortgage having an after-acquired property clause, the true test of determining whether the lien of the conditional sale contract is inferior to the lien of the mortgagee is whether the personal property has been so attached to the real property mortgaged as to become a part of the realty.<sup>56</sup>

§ 1402. Waiver of priority.

The right of a creditor to priority of payment in the distribution of the estate may be waived by some act inconsistent with the continuance of such right;<sup>59</sup> as where creditors claiming money as the proceeds of collections made on their behalf stand silent while such money is paid out in dividends, of the payment of which they had notice;<sup>60</sup> or where a creditor, having a lien for goods sold the bankrupt, did not ask that the goods furnished be sold separately, when all the bankrupt's property was sold, although such creditor had notice of the sale, and where there was no evidence as to the price which such creditor's goods brought,<sup>61</sup> or if the creditor sues the trustees for damages.<sup>62</sup> But there is no waiver where the original pledgee has no knowledge that his stock has been repledged by the bankrupt, until after he had filed his claim as a preferred creditor.<sup>63</sup>

A claim having been proved within the year allowed by the act, it may be given the preference to which it is entitled under the state law, although no claim of preference is made until after the expiration of the year.<sup>64</sup> So, the fact that a preferred creditor inadvertently votes as a general creditor at the election of a trustee without any declaration of an intention to surrender his priority does not constitute a waiver of his right to priority.<sup>65</sup>

§ 1403. Marshalling of assets.

Where there are two classes of creditors having a common debtor, who has several funds, and one class can resort to all funds and the other to but part, the former take payment out of the fund to which they can resort exclusively; if the former resort to the fund common to both classes, to the loss of the latter, the latter are subrogated to the extent of such loss to the place of the former.<sup>66</sup>

§ 1404. Priority in proceeds of property fraudulently transferred.

The lien of a preferential or fraudulent transfer void under the provisions of the act is discharged by the adjudication and the transferee is not entitled to any preference in the distribution of the bankrupt's estate.<sup>67</sup> The proceeds of property which has been fraudulently or preferentially transferred by the bankrupt should be distributed among all creditors including those who were not creditors at the time of the transfer,<sup>68</sup> as well as the fraudulent grantee if he has a provable claim, and this though the suit by the trustee resulting in the setting aside of the fraudulent conveyance was brought under section 70e as a representative of creditors and not as trustee in bankruptcy.<sup>69</sup> The fact that a conveyance by the bankrupt is void only as to certain creditors and that such creditors instituted a suit to set aside such conveyance does not entitle them to priority out of the proceeds of such suit where their suit was commenced within four months prior to bankruptcy.<sup>70</sup> The bankruptcy court is not bound by a judgment of the state court providing a rule of distribution of the proceeds of a suit commenced therein within four months of bankruptcy.<sup>71</sup>

An infant who has made advances to the bankrupt and taken a preferential bill of sale in settlement thereof cannot, by rescinding the bill of sale, become entitled to priority in payment.<sup>72</sup>

§ 1406. Dividends.

§ 1407. — In general.

Section 65a provides that "Dividends of an equal per centum shall be declared and paid on all allowed claims, except such as have priority or are secured."<sup>1</sup>

A dividend in bankruptcy is a parcel of the fund arising from the assets of the estate, rightfully allotted to a creditor entitled to share in the fund, whether in the same proportion with other creditors, or in a different proportion.<sup>2</sup> This section expressly excepts claims which have priority or are secured from those on which the dividends of an equal per centum are to be paid; that is, leaves them to be first paid in full. The debts entitled to priority of payment are defined,<sup>3</sup> as are also the secured claims which the law recognizes.<sup>4</sup> Provision is also<sup>5</sup> made for ascertaining the value of the security and that a dividend shall be paid only on the unpaid balance of the claim, as on other unsecured debts.<sup>6</sup> Hence a dividend, that is less than the whole, is not declared, or paid, on a secured claim,<sup>7</sup> nor on a claim entitled to priority,<sup>8</sup> unless the assets applicable to debts of one class entitled to equal priority are not sufficient to pay them in full, but only upon an unsecured claim.<sup>9</sup> If the security is enforced by the aid of the bankruptcy court, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, the amount paid the secured creditor would

That all creditors whose debts are duly proved and allowed shall be entitled to share in the bankrupt's property and estate pro rata, without any priority or preference whatever, except that wages due from him to any operative, or clerk, or house servant, to an amount not exceeding fifty dollars, for labor performed within six months next preceding the adjudication of bankruptcy, shall be entitled to priority, and shall be first paid in full: Provided, That any debt proved by any person liable, as bail, surety, guarantor, or otherwise, for the bankrupt, shall not be paid to the person so proving the same until satisfactory evidence shall be produced of the payment of such debt by such person so liable, and the share to which such debt would be entitled may be paid into court, or otherwise held for the benefit of the party entitled thereto, as the court may direct."

be considered a dividend.<sup>10</sup> This is the prevailing and apparently correct view since the act very clearly intends that, if the assets are sufficient, the secured claims and those entitled to priority shall be paid in full seriatim, before the question of a "dividend" of equal per centum can arise at all.<sup>11</sup>

It is maintained, however, that this section does not define dividend, but merely provides that an equal per centum except as to secured claims and those entitled to priority, which are elsewhere required to be paid in full if there are sufficient assets, shall be paid on all allowed claims. The exception refers to the equality, not to the dividend. By reference to the definition of dividend in Bouvier's Law Dictionary and the act of 1867, the conclusion is reached that dividend refers to the portion of the estate assigned to a creditor, which is required by this section to be at an equal per centum on those claims not entitled to priority or secured, although the term has been held to include also the portions assigned the secured creditor or the creditor entitled to priority.<sup>12</sup>

§ 1408. — Declaration and payment.

Referees are required to declare dividends and prepare and deliver to the trustees dividend sheets showing the dividends declared and to whom payable, and they must be paid within ten days thereafter;<sup>13</sup> but in making such declaration they should withhold funds sufficient to pay all expenses and priorities. Creditors must have at least ten days' notice by mail of the declaration and time of payment of dividends,<sup>14</sup> and if, after such notice, they stand silently by and see money claimed to be theirs used to pay dividends, they will not be heard afterwards to claim it.<sup>15</sup> The meeting for the declaration of a dividend should be combined with that for its payment; and, if there is to be only one dividend, the final meeting can and should, in proper cases, be combined with such dividend meetings.<sup>16</sup>

§ 1409. — Time of declaring.

“The first dividend shall be declared within thirty days after the adjudication, if the money of the estate in excess of the amount necessary to pay the debts which have priority and such claims as have not been, but probably will be, allowed equals five per centum or more of such allowed claims. Dividends subsequent to the first shall be declared upon like terms as the first and as often as the amount shall equal ten per centum or more and upon closing the estate. Dividends may be declared oftener and in smaller proportions if the judge shall so order: Provided, That the first dividend shall not include more than fifty per centum of the money of the estate in excess of the amount necessary to pay the debts which have priority and such claims as probably will be allowed: And provided further, That the final dividend shall not be declared within three months after the first dividend shall be declared.”<sup>17</sup>

The final dividend may be declared and the final report of the trustee approved at any time after the expiration of three months from the time of the first dividend, if the other conditions are present showing the estate to be apparently ready for final accounting, notwithstanding some of the creditors whose claims are scheduled have not proved them and the time for proving claims has not expired.<sup>18</sup> An application for such purpose should, however, be only upon an order to show cause, or other sufficient notice to all persons scheduled or appearing in any way in the proceedings as creditors, giving them an opportunity to

Subdivision “b” was amended by the Act of February 5, 1903, by the substitution of the matter in the text for the following, which appeared in the Act of 1898: “The first dividend shall be declared within thirty days after the adjudication, if the money of the estate in excess of the amount necessary to pay the debts which have priority and such claims as have not been, but probably will be, allowed equals five per centum or more of such allowed claims. Dividends subsequent to the first shall be declared upon like terms as the first and as often as the amount shall equal ten per centum or more and upon closing the estate. Dividends may be declared oftener and in small proportions if the judge shall so order.”

Analogous provision of Act of 1867. “Sec. 28. . . . know not only of the dividend but notifying them that their claims should be proven, or their rights lost.<sup>19</sup>

§ 1410. — Notice.

At least ten days' notice must be given of the declaration and time of the payment of dividends. The form of such notice is prescribed by the supreme court.<sup>20</sup>

§ 1411. — Who entitled to.

The condition at the time of the filing of the petition measures the extent of the estate and the rights of all creditors to share in the estate. The filing of the petition vests in each creditor an equitable estate in such a proportion of the bankrupt's property as the creditor's claim bears to the entire amount of provable claims.<sup>21</sup> Only those creditors whose claims have been proved and allowed before the dividend is declared can participate in the dividends derived from the bankrupt's estate,<sup>22</sup> and they will be permitted to participate as long as there is anything to distribute;<sup>23</sup> but where the claims have been withdrawn for amendment by permission, they are to be taken into account.<sup>24</sup> Plaintiffs in a replevin suit against an assignee under a voluntary assignment are entitled to a dividend from the estate of bankrupt assignor on the difference between their total demand and value of goods replevined;<sup>25</sup> and where A, between whom and bankrupt there were mutual debts, paid, after the filing of petition, a note on which he and bankrupt were each liable for half, he cannot set off such payment, but should pay the trustee the difference on the mutual account, and receive a dividend on the payment of half of the note.<sup>26</sup>

If a bankrupt's estate is sufficient to pay the claims of all unpreferred creditors in full and leave a surplus, the preferred creditors are entitled to a dividend out of the surplus without surrendering their preference, as against the claim of the bankrupt to such surplus.<sup>27</sup>

It has been held that the trustee of a bankrupt corporation, who has proved his debt as a creditor against such corporation, is entitled to a dividend notwithstanding that he is liable individually for such corporation's debts;<sup>28</sup> and a creditor, who has proved a debt against bankrupt's estate on an indorsed note of bankrupt's and has afterwards received a portion thereof from the indorser and released him from further liability, is entitled to a dividend on the whole amount;<sup>29</sup> but, where the note was indorsed by the bankrupt and the partial payment made by the maker, the creditor is entitled to a dividend on the balance only;<sup>30</sup> and a foreign creditor, who had realized on a judgment and levy subsequent to the adjudication, must account to the trustee for the sum realized and can only have a dividend on the original debt.<sup>31</sup> Anything tending to defeat equality among the creditors is in fraud of the act.<sup>32</sup>

Preferences must be surrendered before a creditor can receive a dividend.<sup>33</sup>

A creditor who has surrendered an illegal preference given him by the bankrupt and has proved his claim is entitled to share on an equal basis with the general creditors.<sup>34</sup> So a creditor's fraud in taking and concealing a conveyance from the bankrupt which is subsequently set aside does not preclude him from participating in the distribution of the proceeds arising from the sale of the property as to a debt in no way involved in the fraudulent conveyance.<sup>35</sup>

A creditor who has received a preference should be permitted to prove his claim, and after proof thereof, be directed to pay over the amount of the preference with interest less the amount of his dividend. So, where the amount of the dividend exceeds the amount of the preference, the creditor should not be compelled to pay the amount of the preference into court, but the same should be deducted from his dividend and only the balance paid him.<sup>36</sup>

A creditor who has received part payment on his claim as a result of a legal priority, cannot be denied further dividends until the general creditors are paid an amount equal to those received by reason of the priority, but may be allowed dividends as a general creditor for the balance.<sup>37</sup>

A creditor receiving a dividend is entitled to retain the same until the order directing the payment thereof is set aside by proceedings directly taken for that purpose.<sup>38</sup>

The bankruptcy court, being a court of equity, may determine equities between creditors entitled to a dividend. Thus, in one case, it was held that an indorsee of bankrupt's note could have determined the amount of the liability of the indorser thereof, who was also a creditor of the estate, and that the court could direct a payment of such amount from dividends due such indorser.<sup>39</sup>

§ 1412. — Who not entitled to.

Creditors who fail to present their claims on or before the day appointed for the declaration of a dividend are not entitled to a dividend to the prejudice of those who have had their claims allowed, but must look to other property of the bankrupt;<sup>40</sup> nor a creditor, who, without legal excuse, omits to prove and file his claim until after the declaration and order of payment of a final dividend, though his claim may be allowed;<sup>41</sup> and, if a creditor include in his claim valid items, and also known illegal items, supporting the whole by a false oath, he is debarred from any dividend;<sup>42</sup> and creditors of a partnership forced into insolvency under a state law cannot take dividends, to the prejudice of creditors whose claims arose after the commencement of such insolvency proceedings, against one of the partners who started a new business and was thrown into bankruptcy.<sup>43</sup>

A stockholder of the bankrupt owing a balance on his stock cannot share in a dividend until he pays the balance due on his stock, but where such stockholder settles this claim against him by compromise, he may share in the dividend, though the fund on which it is based is made up principally by moneys received from him.<sup>44</sup>

§ 1413. — Dividends in case of single creditor.

When but a single creditor proves his claim, he is entitled to be paid in full, and, if there is a surplus, the same must be applied to the payment of creditors acknowledged by bankrupt to have valid claims,<sup>45</sup> and it has been held that this is true though the claims have not been proved.<sup>46</sup>

§ 1414. — Dividends in case of foreign bankrupt.

“Whenever a person shall have been adjudged a bankrupt by a court without the United States and also by a court of bankruptcy, creditors residing within the United States shall first be paid a dividend equal to that received in the court without the United States by other creditors before creditors who have received a dividend in such courts shall be paid any amounts.”<sup>47</sup>

The object of this provision is to place creditors of a domestic bankruptcy proceeding upon an equal footing with creditors who have received dividends in a foreign proceeding; but in the event there are no assets in the latter, such creditors would be entitled to share equally with the domestic creditor. If the two proceedings are being conducted simultaneously, and assets are disclosed in the foreign proceeding, a non-resident creditor should be required to resort to the foreign estate first, and then, after the amount of his dividend is ascertained, should be permitted to share in the dividend of the domestic proceeding after

Where claims have been presented and permission obtained to amend the proofs, enough may be withheld to pay an equal dividend on such suspended claims, but no lien is thereby acquired on such retained funds, nor is the referee bound to apply them on such claims.<sup>48</sup> The trustee may withhold a dividend declared upon the property of a firm until settlement of a suit brought by such trustee against the dividend creditor to recover an amount due a member of said firm;<sup>49</sup> or on the claim of a judgment creditor from which an appeal has been taken before the bankruptcy proceedings until a decision on the appeal;<sup>50</sup> or payment may be withheld on a particular claim where its declaration was unauthorized;<sup>51</sup> or where a dividend is ordered on a claim for professional services rendered the bankrupt, until those interested have an opportunity to apply to vacate said order.<sup>52</sup> The declaration and payment of dividends, when ready, on proved and allowed claims, will not be delayed for unproved claims, nor will the final settlement and closing of an estate be delayed and other creditors kept waiting for their money, to give a negligent creditor further opportunity to get his claim allowed.<sup>53</sup>

§ 1420'. — Dividends unaffected by subsequent allowances.

"The rights of creditors who have received dividends, or in whose favor final dividends have been declared, shall not be affected by the proof and allowance of claims subsequent to the date of such payment or declarations of dividends; but the creditors proving and securing the allowance of such claims shall be paid dividends equal in amount to those already received by the other creditors if the estate equals so much before such other creditors are paid any further dividends."<sup>66</sup>

The object of this provision is to give each creditor who proves his claim and has it allowed within the year an equal proportion of his claim with those who have previously received dividends, provided that at the time of the declaration and payment of any dividend, there is enough to pay creditors, who have come in since the last preceding dividend, an amount equal to what the others have previously received; and, if there is not enough to do so, the whole is paid on account to the latter creditors; and this process is continued until each successive batch of creditors, who came in between dividends, are made equal with those preceding them; and, only when this has been done, is a further dividend paid to the first batch of creditors. Since the final dividend is not declared until the estate has been completely administered, as a rule, there is nothing out of which creditors whose claims have been proved and allowed subsequent to the declarations of such dividend can be paid, so that, as a penalty for their laches, such dilatory creditors will receive nothing, unless further funds should come into the trustee's hands.<sup>67</sup>

§ 1421. — Unclaimed dividends.

Section 66a of the act provides that "Dividends which remain unclaimed for six months after the final dividend has been declared shall be paid by the trustee into the court." Instead of permitting the unclaimed dividends to be indefinitely tied up, as was the case under the act of 1867, and perhaps ultimately inuring to the benefit of the depository in which held, pending a claimant therefor, this section provides a determinate period for making claim, after which such dividends are to be distributed to the creditors who have not been paid in full, and the surplus given the bankrupt.<sup>68</sup> Under the act of 1867 it was held that amounts remaining in the hands of the assignee, after discharge of a bankrupt against whose estate no debts were proved, if there was reasonable cause to believe none would be proved, upon proper petition, would be paid to the bankrupt, which would probably be the rule adopted now without reference to the subdivision b of the same section.<sup>69</sup>

"Dividends remaining unclaimed for one year shall, under the direction of the court, be distributed to the creditors whose claims have been allowed but not paid in full, and after such claims have been paid in full the balance shall be paid to the bankrupt; provided, that in case unclaimed dividends belong to minors such minors may have one year after arriving at majority to claim such dividends."<sup>70</sup>

§ 1422. — Attachment or garnishment of dividends.

The distribution of the assets of a bankrupt cannot be interfered with by attachment, garnishment or any process of a state court.<sup>71</sup>

rupt in addition to his estate at the time the composition was confirmed or the adjudication was made shall be applied to the payment in full of the claims of creditors for property sold to him on credit, in good faith, while such composition or discharge was in force, and the residue, if any, shall be applied to the payment of the debts which were owing at the time of the adjudication.' ' 72

Two classes of creditors arise where a confirmation of a composition is set aside or a discharge revoked, i. e., those whose claims accrued prior and those subsequent to the confirmation or discharge. The latter class, acting in good faith on the strength of the confirmation or discharge, give new credit to the debtor, and the purpose of this provision is to permit the application of the subsequently acquired property, together with the estate at the time the composition was confirmed or the adjudication was made, to the payment in full of such claim to the exclusion of those antedating such confirmation or discharge. The residue of the estate, if any, after the payment of such claims, should be applied to the payment of the debts which accrued prior to the adjudication. The purpose of this provision is self-evident. It is only by placing this sanctity upon the adjudication that it will cause full faith and credit to be given it. It permits the transaction of business with persons who have been discharged or who have entered into a composition with creditors, without fear as to the title they may convey, and without fear of loss.

§ 1427. Reopening the estate.

§ 1428. — In general.

The court or the referee,<sup>76</sup> may, in its discretion, reopen an estate whenever it appears that it was closed before being fully administered.<sup>77</sup> This may be done upon a showing at an ex parte hearing before the referee.<sup>78</sup> The pendency of a petition to set aside a composition does not operate to prohibit the referee from exercising his right independently of, or in conjunction with, such application to reopen the estate, and such reopening is not an interference with the administration of the estate.<sup>79</sup> Where a discharge has been refused upon the ground of concealment of assets, the estate may be reopened for the purpose of reaching such assets.<sup>80</sup>

Title to concealed and non-scheduled property does not revert in the bankrupt upon his discharge so as to deprive the court of jurisdiction thereof upon the reopening of the estate.<sup>81</sup>

§ 1429. — Who may petition.

An application or petition to reopen the estate must be made by some party interested in the estate and who would be benefited by such reopening. One whose claim has become barred by laches is not a proper petitioner;<sup>82</sup> nor can a former trustee who has been discharged seek a reopening of the estate.<sup>83</sup>

tary bankrupt after the estate has been closed and the bankrupt discharged, setting out additional schedules of property, with the reasons for their former omission, and the court may reopen the proceedings for the purpose of administering the new assets for the benefit of creditors who proved their claims in accordance with the statute in the original proceedings. But such supplementary proceedings cannot affect the discharge of the bankrupt, where more than a year has elapsed since it was granted, nor has a creditor who failed to prove his claim in the original proceedings any standing in such supplementary proceedings, or the right to examine the bankrupt therein.<sup>83a</sup>

§ 1430. — Limitations and laches.

While the law is silent as to the time within which an estate may be reopened, this right would doubtless exist at any time when unadministered assets are discovered. An application to reopen is, however, addressed to the sound discretion of the court and where it is not made within a reasonable time may be refused.<sup>84</sup> Laches on the part of a petitioning creditor will bar the right to have the estate re-opened.<sup>85</sup>

§ 1431. — Form and sufficiency of petition.

§ 1432. — Receiver.

A temporary receiver may be appointed upon the reopening of the estate.<sup>88</sup>

§ 1433. Distribution of individual and firm property.

§ 1434. — In general.

Section 5f provides that "The net proceeds of the partnership property shall be appropriated to the payment of the partnership debts, and the net proceeds of the individual estate of each partner to the payment of his individual debts. Should any surplus remain of the property of any partner after paying his individual debts, such surplus shall be added to the partnership assets and be applied to the payment of the partnership debts. Should any surplus of the partnership property remain after paying the partnership debts, such surplus shall be added to the assets of the individual partners in the proportion of their respective interests in the partnership."

This subdivision prescribes the rule for the distribution of assets between individual and firm creditors of bankrupt partners, and applies not only to the case of the adjudication of the partnership, as such, but also where a member of the firm is adjudged bankrupt in his individual capacity.<sup>89</sup> It is but a reaffirmance of the equity rule which remits joint creditors primarily to the joint fund and the individual creditors to the individual fund.<sup>90</sup>

assets of a firm can be administered in bankruptcy (except by consent of the solvent partners) is by putting the firm into bankruptcy; and if a sole surviving or liquidating partner commits an act of bankruptcy he in his individual capacity and as surviving partner may be adjudged bankrupt and the partnership assets and his separate estate may be administered under the act.<sup>94</sup>

Any surplus that remains in an individual estate after payment of individual debts as allowed, should be added to the assets of the partnership and applied to the payment of the partnership debts and not to the payment of interest on the individual debts.<sup>95</sup>

2—It was held under the Act of 1867 that if a partnership was dissolved and one of the partners purchased all the assets of the firm, agreeing to pay all the debts; and both partners are individually adjudged bankrupt, so that there is no solvent partner and no firm property, the firm and individual creditors of the partner who assumed to pay the firm debts are entitled to share pari passu in the estate of such partner. (In re Downing, 3 N. B. R. 182,

The individual and partnership creditors share equally in the distribution of assets where both classes of debts are incurred upon the credit of the property owned by a member of the firm (In re Goedde, 6 N. B. R. 295, Fed. Cas. No. 5500); where the individual assets consisting of goods purchased by the bankrupt from the partnership on its dissolution prior to bankruptcy being the same goods in the purchase of which the partnership debts originated. (In re Jewett, 1 N. B. R. 130, Fed. Cas. No. 7309.) If all the assets of a bankrupt firm were expended in the payment of costs, and there was no fund to be divided among the firm creditors, the firm and individual creditors must be paid pari passu out of the separate estate of each partner. (In re McEwen, 12 N. B. R. 11, 6 Biss. 294, Fed. Cas. No. 8783); but under the present Act there is no provision allowing joint and separate creditors to share pari creditors,<sup>3</sup> but a firm while solvent may in good faith dissolve, the retiring partner transferring the joint property to the remaining partner, who may assume the joint debts, and the joint creditors will share equally with individual creditors in the individual assets, upon the remaining partner becoming bankrupt.<sup>4</sup> If a firm expires by limitation and the interests of all the partners are transferred to one of them, who agrees to apply firm assets to the payment of firm debts, and he afterwards files a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, and includes the firm assets and debts in his schedule, the other members should intervene and have the firm adjudicated bankrupt, that the firm assets may be applied to the firm debts.<sup>5</sup>

§ 1437. — Claims for taxes.

A claim against a partner for personal taxes is not enforceable against the partnership estate as against the claims of partnership creditors.<sup>6</sup> If under state laws a member of a partnership is liable for the taxes due from the firm, taxes levied against a firm must be paid as a preferred claim, from the estate in bankruptcy of a member thereof.<sup>7</sup>

§ 1438. — Claims of the United States.

A claim of the United States against a firm some of whose members are non-residents, has been held to be entitled to priority of payment out of the individual estates of the resident partners;<sup>8</sup> and debts arising out of internal revenue bonds, passu in the separate estates. In the cases cited, if the property could not be held to be partnership assets because the transfer was preferential or fraudulent, or on some other ground, the partnership creditors could not resort to it.

§ 1439. — Subrogation of creditors of partner.

The creditors of an individual partner will be subrogated to the rights of a creditor of the partnership who has received payment of his debt from property belonging to the individual partner; and the trustee of one partner will be subrogated to the rights of the creditors of another partner to the extent that their claims against the latter have been satisfied by the sale of the former's property.<sup>11</sup>

§ 1440. — Claims between estates—Marshalling of assets.

Section 5g provides that "The court may permit the proof of the claim of the partnership estate against the individual estates, and vice versa, and may marshal the assets of the partnership estate and individual estates so as to prevent preferences and secure the equitable distribution of the property of the several estates."

Where a partnership is adjudged a bankrupt, without an adjudication of the members thereof, both the partnership assets and the individual assets of the partners are administered and marshalled.<sup>12</sup>

Where all the partners become bankrupt, the general rule is that a separate estate shall not claim against the joint estate in competition with the joint creditors, nor shall the joint estate claim against a separate estate in competition with the separate creditors,<sup>13</sup> unless there be a surplus of the joint estate to be divided among the individual creditors and vice versa.<sup>14</sup> It is equally clear that a solvent partner cannot prove his own separate debt against the separate estate of the bankrupt partner, so as to come in competition with the joint creditors of the partnership, for the reason that he is himself liable to all the joint creditors, which is sufficient to show that in equity he cannot be permitted to claim any part of the funds of the bankrupt before all the creditors to whom he is liable are fully paid.<sup>15</sup> Neither can a solvent partner prove against the separate estate of the bankrupt partner in competition with the separate creditors of the bankrupt until all the joint creditors of the partnership are paid or fully indemnified, for if a dividend were reserved to such a party on such proof the joint creditors might be injured by such solvent partner stopping the surplus of the separate estate, which would otherwise be carried over to the joint estate, or the separate creditors might be injured by the funds being stopped and the transmission of the same be delayed.<sup>16</sup> The exceptions to this rule are (1) where the property of a partner has been fraudulently applied for the purpose of a partnership; (2) where a distinct trade is prosecuted by one or more of the members of the firm.<sup>17</sup>

Where a bankrupt is a member of two firms, the assets should be so marshalled that the creditors of each firm may have priority in the distribution of the assets of the firms of which they are creditors. If a surplus remains after paying the creditors of one firm, it is subject to the claims of the individual creditors and not to the creditors of the other firm. If, however, there is a surplus of individual assets, it should be apportioned pro rata among creditors of both firms according to the partner's respective interests,<sup>18</sup> and where the partnership estate is indebted to another firm, one of the members of which is also

A bankrupt creditor of his bankrupt copartner has the residuum of the estates, separate and joint, belonging to the latter after all the bankrupt debtor's separate creditors and the firm debts are paid, but not until then,<sup>20</sup> and a solvent partner cannot prove against the separate estate of the bankrupt partner in competition with the bankrupt partner's separate creditors until all the partnership creditors are paid or fully indemnified,<sup>21</sup> nor for interest on the balances in his favor shown by the firm's books, unless by express agreement.<sup>22</sup>

PART I

THE RIGHT TO A DISCHARGE

§ 1442. Nature of right and congressional control thereof.

The right to a discharge is not an absolute one, but is a mere privilege granted to the bankrupt under certain conditions, which congress may alter from time to time.<sup>1</sup> If an amendatory act is silent as to its effect, it affects all pending proceedings.<sup>2</sup>

§ 1443. Who is entitled to discharge.

This is the correlative of "Who may be a bankrupt,"<sup>3</sup> for the law does not offer a meaningless and useless proceeding, but says that certain persons may become bankrupt through voluntary or involuntary proceedings and to such gives the discharge provided for as of right, unless the bankrupt is guilty of one of the offenses prescribed in the act.

A corporation or partnership which has been adjudged bankrupt is entitled to a discharge in all respects as an individual would be.<sup>4</sup>

The fact that a bankrupt is a non-resident of the district does not affect his right to a discharge.<sup>5</sup>

An order granting a discharge is proper, notwithstanding a creditor objected to the reference of the case to a referee to report the facts, which objection was renewed before the judge, if no legal grounds appear for opposing the discharge and the creditor had an opportunity to present such grounds.<sup>6</sup>

§ 1444. Discharge of a partnership.

All or any number of partners may petition for a partnership discharge.<sup>7</sup>

A discharge is granted to a partnership upon the same terms and under the same conditions as to any other person, and therefore the general discussion of discharges which is given with reference to an individual will apply equally here. The grounds of opposition to a discharge in the case of a partnership are the same as in the case of individuals and are confined to those named in the act.<sup>8</sup>

§ 1445. Discharge of partner.

An individual seeking a discharge from both individual and partnership liabilities cannot obtain a discharge from the latter unless proceedings are had on behalf of the partnership itself, or unless he makes his partners parties to the individual proceedings.<sup>9</sup> Where the firm has been adjudicated bankrupt on the voluntary petition of the partners composing the firm, either partner without reference to the other, may present his individual petition for a discharge, in which event the petition therefor should recite the adjudication of the firm and of the petitioners as a member of the firm, and should pray for a discharge from both firm and individual debts, and the notice to creditors should advise them of the same facts.<sup>10</sup> A prayer for discharge from "provable debts" is, however, equivalent to an application for discharge from partnership debts.<sup>11</sup>

Individual discharges cannot be granted under an adjudication against the partnership only<sup>12</sup> although an adjudication of partners as individuals may be entered in an involuntary proceeding against the partnership entity alone, and individual discharges thereafter obtained.<sup>13</sup> An individual member of a firm, may on his own independent application, made in his own right, obtain a discharge from firm liabilities, regardless of the existence or nonexistence of firm assets.<sup>14</sup> A partner is not prevented from filing his individual petition in bankruptcy after a discharge has been denied in the partnership proceedings, although he sets forth the same debts and the same assets.<sup>15</sup>

That one partner commits an act barring his discharge may not be ground for the refusal of a discharge to his co-partner but the burden is on the latter to show he did not participate in such act.<sup>16</sup>

A bankrupt partner who has obtained a discharge from his individual debts may thereafter amend his application for a discharge so as to render the same applicable to his liability on firm debts which were scheduled by him, even though the time for proving such firm debts has expired.<sup>17</sup>

For a discussion of particular acts barring a discharge, see subsequent sections.

§ 1447. — Form.

The application for a discharge should be substantially in the prescribed form.<sup>18</sup>

§ 1448. — Filing.

It is held that the petition may be filed with the referee,<sup>19</sup> though there is authority to the contrary.<sup>20</sup>

§ 1449. — Time for making.

After the expiration of one month and within the next twelve months subsequent to his adjudication, a bankrupt has an absolute right to apply for a discharge,<sup>21</sup> and after that, and within the next six months, his petition may be filed by leave of court,<sup>22</sup> if it shall be made to appear to the judge that he was unavoidably prevented from making his application within the year,<sup>23</sup> but not otherwise.<sup>24</sup>

In a recent well-considered case, the twelve-month period was held to date from one month after the adjudication and not from the adjudication.<sup>25</sup> In computing the time within which the application may be filed the day on which the bankrupt was adjudicated should be excluded. Where the last day of the period falls on Sunday or a holiday the application may be filed on the following day.<sup>26</sup>

An adjudication will not be opened after the expiration of the eighteen-month period to allow the bankrupt to apply for a discharge where there are no allegations of fraud, mistake, or error in the adjudication.<sup>27</sup> Where the application is filed more than twelve months after an adjudication, but without leave and without a showing of unavoidable delay, leave will not be granted nunc pro tunc, if prayed for after the expiration of the period of eighteen months fixed by law.<sup>28</sup> Under the act of 1867 it was held that whatever be the showing of unavoidable delay in the filing of the application for discharge, it had to be made before the administration of the estate was completed and the trustee discharged,<sup>29</sup> though in view of the clear terms of the present statute that would not now be true.

The provisions of this clause apply both to involuntary and voluntary bankrupts.<sup>30</sup>

The discretion vested in the judge in allowing a petition filed more than a year after adjudication is a judicial one, and not a discretion of an arbitrary nature.<sup>31</sup> The words "unavoidably prevented" should be given a broad interpretation, so as to empower the court, in the exercise of its discretion, to grant an application for an extension of time whenever it appears that his failure to file his application was due to excusable neglect, mistake, reliance upon advice of counsel, and the like, and not merely where such failure was due to physical obstacles, or other facts or circumstances which literally deprived the bankrupt of his will or power to exercise his right.<sup>32</sup> Inadvertance of the bankrupt's attorney<sup>33</sup> or an erroneous notice from the referee that the time for the filing of the application expires on a certain date does not, in all cases, however, excuse a failure to file the same within the proper time. It is the duty of the bankrupt to take notice of the date of the adjudication and see that the application is filed within a year from such date,<sup>34</sup> and no extension should be allowed where he could have avoided default by ordinary diligence or attention.<sup>35</sup> While poverty of the bankrupt and sickness in his family during the year after the adjudication may be a sufficient excuse,<sup>36</sup> an allegation that the bankrupt deferred filing his petition for a discharge until late in the year when sickness in the family prevented him from filing it has been held not to be warrant relief.<sup>37</sup>

An application for an extension of time within which to file an application for a discharge may be entertained not only ex parte, but in such summary and informal manner as may be proper and convenient. No notice to creditors is required.<sup>38</sup> The application may be made through an attorney,<sup>39</sup> and requires no answer.<sup>40</sup> It is the duty of the bankrupt to appear at the hearing of his application for an extension of time, and the burden is upon him to show that he has been unavoidably prevented from filing the petition within the statutory time. The ex parte averments of his petition are not admissible as evidence in support thereof.<sup>41</sup>

A creditor waives his objection to an order extending the time within which to file an application for discharge by filing specifications of objections to the discharge,<sup>42</sup> or by failing to move for a vacation of the order until after the eighteen-month

§ 1450. — Notice to creditors.

Prior to the amendment of 1910, a creditor was entitled merely to ten days' notice of the hearing upon the application for a discharge, and it was held that notice to creditors of the application for leave to apply for a discharge, or for an extension of time for such application was unnecessary ample notice of the hearing upon the application being insured them.<sup>45</sup> Under the amendment, however, creditors are entitled to at least thirty days' notice of the application for discharge.<sup>46</sup>

As they may examine the bankrupt to discover whether he has complied with the statute in order to entitle him to a discharge, to avoid extra expense and delay, the notice of application for discharge should contain a notice also of his examination, but only one such examination should be had.<sup>47</sup>

While the official form<sup>48</sup> requires copies of the petition and order to accompany the notice of application for discharge, it is not to be treated as a "certified copy of the record" for the purpose of fees.<sup>49</sup>

Where notice has been given to creditors they are regarded as consenting if they make no opposition.<sup>50</sup> It has been held that a court of bankruptcy has jurisdiction to grant a discharge, even though there may be creditors not regularly brought before it by the service of notice;<sup>51</sup> and that it is not necessary to give

jurisdiction to such court that creditors have actual notice, or personal service, and that the lack of it will not vitiate a discharge, if the requirements of the act were honestly complied with.<sup>52</sup> So it is held that a discharge is conclusive in the absence of fraud, and cannot be impeached collaterally by a creditor who had no notice.<sup>53</sup> Creditors are bound by the proceedings in distribution on notice by publication and mail, and when jurisdiction has attached and been exercised to that extent, the court has jurisdiction to make its decrees of discharge or otherwise, if sufficient opportunity to show cause to the contrary is afforded, or notice given in the same way.<sup>54</sup>

When the bankrupt furnishes a list of creditors but states that their addresses are unknown, before the discharge is granted, satisfactory proof should be adduced to show that the same cannot be produced after due search has been made.<sup>55</sup>

§ 1451. — Withdrawal.

The application for a discharge cannot be withdrawn after the opposing creditors have proceeded to a hearing thereon and practically closed their case.<sup>56</sup>

§ 1452. — Dismissal.

The dismissal of an application for a discharge is in effect the denial of a discharge.<sup>57</sup> Hence an application for a discharge will not be dismissed because of dilatory tactics used by the bankrupt in not bringing the issues raised by the creditor's specifications to a trial.<sup>58</sup>

§ 1453. — Effect of failure to apply.

The refusal of an application for discharge on the ground that it is not made within the prescribed period is not a bar to the filing of a new petition in bankruptcy,<sup>59</sup> and the filing of a new petition under such circumstances constitutes an abandonment of the first petition, so that the court will have jurisdiction, which is also conferred where the first petition is withdrawn.<sup>60</sup> In such subsequent proceedings a discharge may be granted as to new debts,<sup>61</sup> but not as to debts which were scheduled and provable in the former proceedings.<sup>62</sup> The fact that a creditor proves his claims in the second proceeding does not estop him to set up the fact that the bankrupt failed to apply for a discharge in a prior proceeding in which his claim was provable,<sup>63</sup> especially where in the later proceedings there are no assets and no benefit can possibly result to the creditor.<sup>64</sup>

The proper proceeding in such case is to restrain the bankrupt from applying for a discharge from the debts provable in the former proceedings.

but is in accord with the act of 1841, which was, in this respect, worded similarly to that of the act of 1898, since it referred to "other parties in interest," and under which it was held that creditors who had not proved their debts might oppose the discharge,<sup>69</sup> and even persons having contingent claims incapable of proof. It would seem that if such party in interest neglected to prove his objections, other creditors might do so.<sup>70</sup> An objection that a creditor is not entitled to oppose bankrupt's discharge because of acquiescence is immaterial, if the facts sustain such ground;<sup>71</sup> but a creditor who has without fraud assented in writing to the discharge of the bankrupt and thereby influenced others to assent cannot withdraw such assent, especially upon the day fixed for the hearing.<sup>71a</sup> The fact that a person has been scheduled by the bankrupt as a creditor is prima facie evidence of his right to oppose the discharge.<sup>72</sup>

A creditor whose claim will not be affected by the discharge is not a party in interest.<sup>73</sup>

An attorney at law admitted to practice in the United States district court who enters his appearance and files objections to the discharge, on behalf of a creditor, must be presumed to have authority to do so without any special written power of attorney to take such action.<sup>74</sup> It has been held, however, that power to attend and vote does not authorize the filing of objections to a discharge.<sup>75</sup>

By the amendment of 1910 the trustee is expressly authorized to oppose a discharge provided he is authorized to do so at a meeting of creditors called for that purpose,<sup>76</sup> by the court or referee.<sup>77</sup> Where such authority from the creditors exist, his right to oppose the discharge and to be given a reasonable opportunity to be heard is absolute, and conditions annexed to his right by the referee or court are unwarranted. The referee cannot impose a condition denying to the trustee reimbursement for his costs and reasonable expenses in exercising the authority given to him by the creditors,<sup>78</sup> or a condition that the order granting to the trustee authority to oppose the discharge shall not delay the final settlement of the estate more than sixty days.<sup>79</sup>

§ 1455. Specification of objections.

§ 1456. — Necessity.

Whenever the objections to the granting of a discharge rest on facts, there must be a specification in order that the bankrupt may be advised of what he is accused, the judge or referee know to what the testimony is to be directed and a trial of the fact be had,<sup>80</sup> but until the bankrupt has made a full and sufficient disclosure, the trustee or creditors cannot be required to specify objections or definitely abide by objections which have been specified.<sup>81</sup> When proper notice has been given to creditors, they are regarded as consenting to a discharge, if they make no opposition. Similarly, where it appears that the bankrupt has committed an act that, if properly pleaded, will bar a discharge, it has been held the court will not of its own motion refuse it.<sup>82</sup>

Where a creditor with a provable debt, who has notice of the application fails to appear at the hearing, his debt will be discharged though the bankrupt has in a prior proceeding in which the debt was scheduled been denied a discharge upon objection of the creditor.<sup>83</sup>

When the objection to a discharge is based on questions of law, or arising in the record, it has been held that no specification is necessary. A court will refuse a discharge where it appears, upon an inspection of the record, that the bankrupt is not entitled thereto, although there are no objections interposed by creditors,<sup>84</sup> but if all the modal prerequisites to a discharge have been complied with, a court will not seek out of its own motion grounds to refuse it.<sup>85</sup>

§ 1457. — Objections by partnership.

Where a partnership which is the only objecting creditor becomes dissolved the discharge will be granted unless all the partners join in continuing the objections.<sup>86</sup>

§ 1458. — Time of filing specifications.

General Order XXXII gives to the creditor the entire day upon which the creditors are required to show cause to enter his appearance in opposition to the discharge, and ten days thereafter in which to file his specifications of objections.<sup>87</sup> A failure of a creditor to enter an appearance on the return day of the order to show cause why the bankrupt shall not be granted a discharge precludes him from thereafter filing specifications of objections; even though they be filed within ten days,<sup>88</sup> but the court may, in its discretion and in a proper case, relieve a person from default if no laches appear,<sup>89</sup> or permit amended<sup>90</sup> specifications to be pleaded after the expiration of that time.<sup>91</sup> The failure to file the specification within ten days after the return day of the order to show cause would probably be cured by filing the same nunc pro tunc, provided notice of opposition to the

A specification in the language of the statute and covering non-keeping, concealment or destruction of books of account without specifying whether the charge is destruction, concealment, or a failure to keep books of account, is sufficient.<sup>13</sup> So, it is held that, though a specification which charges that the bankrupt has failed to keep books of account from which his true condition may be ascertained is too indefinite, it not appearing whether an utter failure to keep books, or merely an improper keeping thereof is intended to be charged, it will be held sufficient where the bankrupt testifies that he kept no books of account.<sup>14</sup> A specification alleging the cancellation of checks by the bankrupt with intent to conceal his financial condition is not insufficient because not alleging the date the same were drawn.<sup>15</sup> A specification which charges that books were kept with an intent to conceal the bankrupt's financial condition is insufficient to prevent a discharge for failure to keep any books whatever.<sup>16</sup>

A specification charging concealment, removal, alteration and destruction of books and papers without averring fraudulent intent, is insufficient.<sup>17</sup>

A specification relying on a false oath as an objection to the discharge should show wherein the bankrupt made a false oath.<sup>18</sup> A specification which merely alleges that he swore falsely that he was indebted to a creditor named in his schedule and did not disclose to his trustee that the claim was false and fictitious, without alleging that he knew the claim was false,<sup>19</sup> or that the bankrupt swore that the schedules contained a full and true list of the creditors and assets and that it appears bankrupt did not know whether the schedule was complete or not,<sup>20</sup> is insufficient.

ally false statement in writing should contain at least the substance of the alleged false statement,<sup>21</sup> and the names of the persons alleged to have been defrauded.<sup>22</sup> A general averment that a financial statement set forth in full in the specification is false, without alleging wherein it was false, presents no issuable fact.<sup>23</sup>

Property alleged to have been transferred, removed, destroyed and concealed should be specified.<sup>24</sup> A specification that the bankrupt has offered to surrender all his property and that he is withholding property from his creditors;<sup>25</sup> or that he has concealed part of his effects from the court, or has in contemplation of bankruptcy made payments, transfers and assignments preferring a creditor;<sup>26</sup> or that he has omitted property from his schedule willfully,<sup>27</sup> or with fraudulent intent;<sup>28</sup> or charging concealment of assets without alleging fraudulent intent,<sup>29</sup> is insufficient.

Although a specification shows concealment prior to the four-month period, if it is so drawn as to raise the question whether the offense is continuing, it is sufficient.<sup>30</sup>

In a case where no trustee was appointed a specification of objection that the bankrupt had concealed property "from his estate in bankruptcy" instead of "from his trustee," has been held insufficient.<sup>31</sup>

§ 1461. — Plea to specifications.

While no pleading by the bankrupt is necessary when specifications in opposition to his discharge are filed, the specifications not being confessed by failure to answer<sup>32</sup> but proof thereof being necessary.<sup>33</sup> Yet, if there is reason to do so, the bankrupt may demur, seek by motion or exception the relief desired, or answer.<sup>34</sup> Where the specification affirmatively shows that the party making the same is not a party in interest and will not be affected by the discharge,<sup>35</sup> or fails to allege any fact barring a discharge,<sup>36</sup> it will be disregarded though not excepted to by the bankrupt. The right to object to a defective specification is waived if the objection is not raised at the proper time.<sup>37</sup> If the objections to the specification be insufficient in law, they will be overruled.<sup>38</sup>

§ 1462. — Amendment.

If the specifications be insufficient they may be amended,<sup>39</sup> provided there be no laches,<sup>40</sup> though not after the evidence has been taken, to include a new charge,<sup>41</sup> nor unless the party can specify facts, and his failure to be specific is excusable.<sup>42</sup> An amendment presenting a new issue will not be allowed where the time for filing original specifications has expired,<sup>43</sup> though where the amendment merely amplifies, makes more definite,

A specification fairly indicating the statutory ground upon which it rests may be amended to conform with the words of the statute,<sup>45</sup> but amendments will not be allowed where they amount to more than an enlargement of the original specifications,<sup>46</sup> nor where the original specifications contain no statement of fact but are merely in the language of the statute.<sup>47</sup>

The application for leave to amend must be made to the judge and not to the referee,<sup>48</sup> and its grant rests in his sound discretion.<sup>49</sup>

§ 1463. — Signature and verification.

It is no objection to a specification that it carries the signatures of more than one creditor.<sup>50</sup>

The specifications should be verified as to facts alleged,<sup>51</sup> but this may be done by the attorney of the creditor.<sup>52</sup> If signed or verified by counsel the reason should be stated.<sup>53</sup> The affidavit need not be in the exact language of the official form,<sup>54</sup> and is sufficient if it states that the allegations are true to the best of the affiant's knowledge, information and belief.<sup>55</sup>

§ 1464. Hearing on application.

§ 1465. — Motion for hearing.

The bankrupt must move for a hearing a reasonable time after his application for a discharge is filed.<sup>58</sup>

§ 1466. — Powers and duties of referee or special master.

In matters relating to an application for a discharge,<sup>59</sup> the judge only has power to determine them finally,<sup>59</sup> but he may refer the application, or any issue thereon, on his own motion or upon the petition of the bankrupt, trustee, or creditors,<sup>60</sup> to the referee or a special master to ascertain and report the facts, and state his conclusions of law,<sup>61</sup> and before doing so should dispose of any technical objections. A referee cannot decide any questions relating to the right to a discharge until the matter has been referred to him by the judge,<sup>62</sup> and his report on the right to a discharge should not be made until the examination of the bankrupt made to discover assets is formally closed,<sup>63</sup> though it is held that the taking of testimony by the referee before returning the petition for a discharge and the specifications in opposition thereto to the court is an irregularity which may be waived.<sup>64</sup> charge, so as to prevent the necessity of sending the case back, if he is not upheld in his conclusions on particular charges.<sup>65</sup>

A referee or special master is authorized to rule upon the sufficiency of the specifications of objections and will not take evidence upon such as are clearly insufficient; but the application for discharge must be heard and finally determined by the court of bankruptcy.<sup>66</sup>

It is the duty of the special master to take and report the evidence in aid of the court, and return the same, together with the rulings as to its admissibility. He may reserve his decision as to the admissibility of testimony.<sup>67</sup>

The referee has no authority to dismiss the proceedings upon determining that the bankrupt is not entitled to a discharge.<sup>68</sup>

The referee may call a meeting of creditors to authorize the trustee to interpose objections to a discharge, but the notice of the hearing on such objections and the fixing of the date of the hearing should be upon order of the judge.<sup>69</sup> It is held that a referee cannot be granted the power to fix the date for the hearing of the application or to make an order requiring notice to be given to the creditors.<sup>70</sup>

§ 1467. — Attendance of bankrupt.

The bankrupt may be required to attend the hearings upon his application for a discharge.<sup>71</sup>

§ 1468. — Appearance of creditors.

A creditor cannot, as of right, appear and oppose a discharge after the return day, though there be an adjournment for some other purpose, but the court may permit opposition at any time prior to discharge.<sup>75</sup>

§ 1469. — Jury trial.

Any question of fact arising on specifications in opposition to discharge<sup>77</sup> may be referred to a jury in the discretion of the court. However, the findings of the jury upon which the adjudication in bankruptcy is based not only do not bind the special master, but should be disregarded, as it is his duty to exercise an independent judgment on the facts brought before him.<sup>78</sup>

§ 1470. — Reconsideration of claims.

Claims will not be reconsidered upon the hearing of an application for a discharge, where no objection was made by the bankrupt at the time they were allowed.<sup>79</sup>

§ 1471. — Presumptions and burden of proof.

The filing of specifications in opposition to a bankrupt's application for discharge does not make out a prima facie case against the bankrupt which he is bound to disprove, but the burden of proof is upon the creditors<sup>80</sup> and if the specifications are not sustained by proper proof, they will be dismissed.<sup>81</sup> If the evidence leaves in doubt the existence of a fraudulent intent,<sup>82</sup> it is not to be presumed, but must be proved, not necessarily by direct testimony, but it may be proved convincingly by circumstantial evidence.<sup>83</sup>

If the creditors have shown the existence of assets and their disappearance or large shrinkage within a short time before the bankruptcy, the burden<sup>84</sup> is then on the bankrupt<sup>85</sup> to account for the diminution of his estate; and a fraudulent concealment may be inferred, if the bankrupt does not satisfactorily explain.<sup>86</sup> The burden of proof does not shift merely because creditors show that, as between themselves and the bankrupt, there is property not scheduled.<sup>87</sup> The degree of proof required to establish objections which would prevent the granting of a discharge need not be beyond a reasonable doubt,<sup>88</sup> but there should

The making of a false oath need not be established by the same quantum of proof that would be necessary to sustain a conviction for perjury.<sup>91</sup>

§ 1472. — Admissibility of evidence.

Evidence cannot be introduced by objecting creditors without first having filed a specification of objections as required by law. If filed, the special master or referee should not disregard a specification, but should confine the evidence to the material facts alleged in them.<sup>92</sup> Furthermore, his authority is not limited to the taking and reporting of the testimony and ruling as to its admissibility, but he has authority to rule upon the sufficiency of specifications of objections and should not take evidence on such as are clearly insufficient.<sup>93</sup>

The testimony of the bankrupt given in his examination under section 21 of the statute, is admissible in support of the specifications in opposition to the discharge, but the evidence of creditors and others taken at examinations restricted to no issues and governed by no precise rules of evidence cannot be applied as proof to the exceedingly definite issues presented by specifications in opposition to a discharge, such examinations being largely for purpose of discovery, while the filing of specifications in opposition to a discharge is equivalent to the commencement of an action against the bankrupt by the objectors, and the principles of procedure must be logically applied to that fact.<sup>94</sup> Such evidence may be admitted, however, where there is an express stipulation in writing signed by the parties.<sup>95</sup>

It has been held that testimony given by the bankrupt on a hearing under a state insolvency law cannot be offered to prove that he swore falsely though his counsel had agreed that it might be used before the referee with the same force and effect as if taken before him, on the ground that the bankrupt took no oath before the referee that his former testimony was true, and that therefore he was not bound by his counsel's stipulation.<sup>96</sup>

Evidence tending to show a concealment of alleged exempt property is admissible on the question of knowledge and intent in the concealment of other assets.<sup>97</sup> The affidavit of a former partner of the bankrupt, contradicting the recitals in an agreement signed by the affiant, may be used to show that the recitals are designed to cover a fraudulent concealment by the bankrupt of an interest in his former business.<sup>98</sup>

It is inadmissible to introduce in opposition to a discharge as evidence of fraud the dying declarations of a fraudulent grantee in a proceeding to set aside a bankrupt's discharge.<sup>99</sup>

§ 1473. — Examination of witnesses.

specifications of objections to the bankrupt's discharge should be made to the federal court in the district where the witness resides. If the creditors do not desire to proceed in that court, a commissioner may be appointed to take the testimony of the witness.<sup>2</sup>

§ 1474. — Conclusiveness of findings or report.

The referee's or special master's determination upon the sufficiency of the evidence to support specifications of objections is entitled to weight<sup>3</sup> and will not be set aside unless it be clearly erroneous.<sup>4</sup> If exceptions thereto be filed, the errors must be specifically pointed out.<sup>5</sup> An order denying a discharge will be reversed where the findings of the referee recommending a discharge are amply supported by testimony.<sup>6</sup>

§ 1475. — Rehearing.

If no objections are filed to the referee's finding as to facts, and the court refuses a discharge, it will not grant a rehearing,<sup>7</sup> but where upon motion to confirm a report of a special master recommending the denial of a discharge, the court finds the proof of the commission of an offense insufficient it may send the matter back to the special master for further inquiry, or may conduct an independent investigation of its own.<sup>8</sup>

§ 1476. Adjournment of hearing—Stay of discharge.

The proceedings upon the order to show cause why the discharge shall not be granted can, on the return day of the order, be postponed by reason of the adjournment of the examination of the bankrupt, or for other good reason,<sup>9</sup> but should not be adjourned to await the result of protracted litigation, a speedy hearing and decision being desirable.

poned until creditors, who have agreed to be postponed to other creditors, and whom the bankrupt has therefore not listed as creditors, either release their claims, or consent to be scheduled nunc pro tunc so as to make the discharge effective as to them.<sup>10</sup>

The hearing should not be postponed to enable creditors to take proceedings to recover alleged assets, where the right of the creditors will be unaffected by the discharge,<sup>11</sup> but may properly be postponed to enable the trustee to commence an action to recover a surplus income to which the bankrupt is entitled under a will.<sup>12</sup>

The discharge may be postponed a reasonable time to enable a creditor holding a waiver of exemptions to assert his rights in a state court.<sup>13</sup> A creditor having a dischargeable claim seeking to reach exempt property should apply to the bankruptcy court for a withholding of the discharge until he has fastened a specific lien on the property. If he fails so to do and the bankrupt secures his discharge before the fastening of such a lien, the claim is barred.<sup>14</sup> In deciding whether a discharge should be withheld the district court cannot finally pass on the validity of the waiver of exemptions, but should merely decide whether a prima facie waiver exists.<sup>15</sup>

Proceedings for a discharge will not be stayed to enable a plaintiff in an action in the state court to proceed to judgment and to subject exempt property to the satisfaction of such judgment where it appears that the discharge, if granted, would not be a bar to the plaintiff's action.<sup>16</sup> Where a creditor holding a judgment enforceable against the bankrupt's exempt property has withdrawn his claim from the bankruptcy court for the express purpose of enforcing it in the state courts, the discharge will not be delayed to enable him to enforce his judgment against exempt property;<sup>17</sup> nor will a discharge be withheld pending a suit against the bankrupt for the conversion of a note containing a waiver of exemptions.<sup>18</sup>

A creditor suing and acquiring a lien by garnishment before the four-month period is entitled to have the discharge stayed for a reasonable time so as to enforce his rights against the garnishees and sureties on the garnishment bond,<sup>19</sup> but it is held that the granting of a discharge against the bankrupt, a contractor, will not be stayed to enable a lien claimant to obtain a personal judgment against the bankrupt and thereby perfect his lien against the owner of the property on which the labor and material was used.<sup>20</sup>

A decision by a bankruptcy court upon an application for discharge will not be stayed to await the result of a pending action in a state court by which creditors seek to set aside as fraudulent a transfer made before the adjudication of bankruptcy, although the same plaintiffs oppose the bankrupt's discharge on the same ground, since the decree of the state court would not necessarily determine the right of the bankrupt to be discharged.<sup>21</sup>

Where the bankrupt commits perjury in the proceedings for his discharge, the proceedings may be stayed until the determination of the contempt proceedings.<sup>22</sup>

that would justify an overthrow of its action.<sup>23</sup> By the provisions of the act a discharge may be refused when the bankrupt has committed an offense punishable by imprisonment, that is, with unlawful intent;<sup>24</sup> has knowingly and fraudulently<sup>25</sup> concealed, while a bankrupt, or after his discharge, from his trustee any of the property belonging to his estate in bankruptcy, or made a false oath or account in, or in relation to, any proceeding in bankruptcy; or if he has, with intent to conceal his true financial condition, destroyed, concealed, or failed to keep books of account, or records from which his true condition might be ascertained,<sup>26</sup> obtained property on false representations, concealed or removed property with intent to prefer, been granted a discharge in voluntary proceedings within six years, or refused to obey a lawful order of the court or answer a material question.<sup>27</sup>

The participation in an offense under the act committed by another is sufficient to bar a discharge.<sup>28</sup>

The only grounds upon which a discharge can be refused are those specified in section 14b,<sup>29</sup> hence a discharge cannot be refused because of the pendency of an application for discharge under the act of 1867;<sup>30</sup> or general dishonesty, or unfair and sharp dealing with creditors,<sup>31</sup> or the violation of a criminal law of the state,<sup>32</sup> or the omission of a debtor to have himself adjudged a voluntary bankrupt, when his property is attached at the suit of a hostile creditor;<sup>33</sup> or because of an adjudication of bankruptcy suffered by default;<sup>34</sup> or that money is offered certain creditors to vote for a composition;<sup>35</sup> or that the original

§ 1479. — Discretion of court.

A refusal to grant a discharge does not rest in the discretion of the judge; but the applicant is entitled to a discharge as a matter of right, unless proved guilty of one of the prescribed offenses, the sole duty of the judge being to decide after a due hearing if he is guilty.<sup>40</sup>

The decision of a court refusing a discharge being essentially one of fact, will not be reversed on appeal unless manifest error appears.<sup>41</sup>

§ 1480. — Statute not retroactive.

To constitute a valid objection to a discharge, the acts complained of must have taken place after the passage of the law and within the period prescribed by it, and the same principle applies to alleged dishonest disposition of assets;<sup>42</sup> or of a fraudulent conveyance or preference.<sup>43</sup>

§ 1481. — Irregularity of proceedings.

The provisions of the act must be strictly complied with and a discharge will be refused the bankrupt, if, upon examination, it appears that the requirements of the law entitling him thereto have not been complied with, or he has failed to do what he was required to do.<sup>44</sup> Accordingly, a discharge will be refused where it appears that the majority of creditors have received no notice either of the bankruptcy proceedings or of the application for a discharge, and in such case it is immaterial whether the proceedings are voluntary or involuntary since in either case it is the duty of the bankrupt to see that the creditors receive proper notice.<sup>45</sup> So a failure to hold the first meeting of creditors before the filing of the application for a discharge is a ground for refusing the discharge,<sup>46</sup> but an irregularity in the calling of the first meeting, such as a misspelling of the name of the bankrupt in the printed notice of the meeting, will not prejudice the right to a discharge.<sup>47</sup>

The application for a discharge is an independent proceeding incidental and subordinate to the distribution of property of the bankrupt,<sup>48</sup> and the validity of the adjudication, where not appealed from, reversed, or set aside, cannot be questioned, except by showing it was made by a court having no jurisdiction.<sup>49</sup> Objections going to the jurisdiction must be raised at the first or at least an early opportunity or they will be deemed to have been waived and a creditor, who appeared at the first meeting, nominated the trustee and examined the bankrupt, cannot, on application for discharge, for the first time urge that the court is without jurisdiction on the ground that the adjudication was made by the referee and not by the judge.<sup>50</sup>

A discharge will not be refused because the referee has failed to file a certificate showing that the bankrupt has conformed with the provisions of section 14,<sup>51</sup> nor because of failure to

If the entire proceedings be irregular and defective,<sup>55</sup> and if a prima facie case of fraud is made out, the discharge will be withheld until the prima facie case is overthrown.<sup>56</sup>

§ 1482. — Laches.

A discharge will not be refused because of the laches of the bankrupt in not bringing the issues raised by the creditor's objections to trial.<sup>57</sup>

Time for filing application, see ante, section 1449.

§ 1483. — Failure to pay costs.

If a bankrupt files an affidavit of inability to make a deposit on filing his petition in voluntary bankruptcy, there is no authority for withholding the discharge until the fees of the clerk and referee have been paid.<sup>58</sup> The law is clear and explicit as to the grounds for refusing a discharge and there is no authority for adding to its provisions.

§ 1484. — Buying off opposition to discharge.

Under the act of 1867, it was held that if the opposition of a creditor to the discharge of a bankrupt was bought off through the procurement of privity of the bankrupt, it was such fraud upon the law as would warrant the setting aside of the discharge, the fact itself being prima facie evidence that the bankrupt was not entitled to it,<sup>59</sup> though if the negotiations for the withdrawal of opposition were consummated without the actual or constructive knowledge of the bankrupt, it would not vitiate the discharge,<sup>60</sup> it being held that the suppression of such opposition should be condemned as at variance with the policy of a bankruptcy law, whether expressly prohibited or not.<sup>61</sup>

Under the law now in force the buying off of opposition not being one of the grounds specifically enumerated for opposing a discharge, and not being an offense, the rule prevailing under the act of 1867 would not now be a valid objection,<sup>62</sup> but the purchase of a claim for the purpose of preventing or reducing opposition to a discharge may constitute such fraud as will justify the revocation of a discharge under section 15.<sup>63</sup>

§ 1485. — Fraud in preventing proof of claim.

Fraud in preventing a creditor from proving his claim in proceedings against a firm of which the bankrupt was a member is no bar to a discharge.<sup>64</sup>

A false oath in any part of the bankruptcy proceedings is an offense and ordinarily a bar to a discharge,<sup>68</sup> though it is held that the bankrupt's perjury in the proceedings for his discharge is no ground for refusing same.<sup>69</sup> The provision<sup>70</sup> that no testimony given by bankrupt on his examination shall be offered in evidence against him in any criminal proceeding<sup>71</sup> does not prevent his being denied a discharge for making a false oath on such examination.<sup>72</sup> The making of a false oath by a bankrupt in a proceeding in bankruptcy, not against him, but against the corporation with which he was connected, is not ground for refusing his discharge.<sup>73</sup>

To sustain an objection to a discharge on the ground of false oath, the test is whether or not an indictment for perjury could be sustained on the alleged facts, which requires an intentional untruth in a matter material to an issue which is itself material.<sup>74</sup>

It is not material that the bankrupt subsequently corrects a false oath by telling the truth, except in so far as it throws light upon his intention when he made his first statement,<sup>75</sup> and the fact that the bankrupt correctly lists the property after the discovery of his false oath will not relieve him from the consequences of the same.<sup>76</sup> It is open to the bankrupt to show from the whole testimony that his testimony upon a particular point, if actually false, was not intended to mislead on a particular point.<sup>77</sup>

A discharge will be refused where the bankrupt falsely swears as to his inability to pay the court fees,<sup>78</sup> or that all his property

The verification by the bankrupt of his schedules from which he has omitted property fraudulently concealed or transferred is not such false oath as will bar his discharge,<sup>84</sup> nor will a discharge be denied because the bankrupt includes in his schedule property by advice of counsel which he afterwards swears was not his, and says that, though in his name, he considers it his wife's, who advanced the money for it and received the profits, he having been her agent;<sup>85</sup> or omits stock in his wife's name, purchased with money borrowed on their joint note,<sup>86</sup> or omits property transferred by the bankrupt as to which a receiver was appointed by a state court before the petition was filed.<sup>87</sup> The failure to schedule worthless securities or invalid claims does not render bankrupt guilty of false oath.<sup>88</sup> reasonable doubt.<sup>91</sup> It must be shown wherein the bankrupt made a false oath, and mere proof of contradictory statements at different stages of the proceedings without proof as to which was false is insufficient,<sup>92</sup> and where a bankrupt makes a statement not under oath, and afterwards contradicts that statement under oath, his statement under oath is not proved to be false by proof that he made the contradictory statement not under oath.<sup>93</sup> amendment it was necessary to prove both the intent and contemplation of bankruptcy. By the amendment the words "in contemplation of bankruptcy" were omitted. The effect of this is that the only point now to be passed upon by the court is whether the books were destroyed or concealed or were not kept "with intent to conceal his financial condition."<sup>97</sup> This avoids any possible question as to whether the term "in contemplation of bankruptcy" included involuntary proceedings and generally renders this regulation more easy of construction. The omission of the word "fraudulent" as qualifying the word "intent" does not vary the force of this regulation, since the destruction or concealment of books to conceal the financial condition exhibited by them, must of necessity be fraudulent.

It is immaterial that the bankrupt is or is not a merchant or trader, but a man's occupation and condition are to be considered in determining whether his failure to keep books should bar a discharge,<sup>98</sup> as his being a farmer,<sup>99</sup> or a large trader,<sup>1</sup> or a school teacher,<sup>2</sup> or a mine superintendent,<sup>3</sup> or a mining promoter.<sup>4</sup> of a voluntary application or of the commission of an act upon which an adjudication of the bankrupt in involuntary proceedings might be had; in other words, it meant in contemplation of proceedings in bankruptcy, and did not apply to something done long prior to the passage of a law not in existence, or to a condition of insolvency.<sup>6</sup> Consequently, if prior to the passage of the act of 1898, a bankrupt, with fraudulent intent to conceal his financial condition, destroyed, concealed or failed to keep books of account, his discharge could not be refused,<sup>7</sup> but if continued subsequent to its passage,<sup>8</sup> and it had to be so alleged,<sup>9</sup> it would bar a discharge, as where loans made to a bankrupt and not entered in his regular account book, were made before the bankruptcy act was passed, and were not entered after its passage.<sup>10</sup> Where for a year prior to his failure his condition was one of hopeless insolvency, his failure to keep requisite books of account will be deemed to have been in contemplation of bankruptcy.<sup>11</sup> In view of the amendment, whether the failure to keep books was in contemplation of bankruptcy, is immaterial, so far as cases instituted since such amendment are concerned.

ulent intent<sup>12</sup> and if this were not established the discharge would be granted.<sup>13</sup> The fraudulent intent must have been that of the bankrupt, so that, where the business of a married woman was conducted wholly by her husband and he, without her knowledge, failed to keep true books of account, with fraudulent intent, her discharge was not barred;<sup>14</sup> nor was the discharge of a member of a firm barred, if the failure to keep true books of account be entirely the fault of his partner,<sup>15</sup> and, on the same principle, such an act by an agent would not bar a principal's discharge, since such act of the agent is in excess of his authority, though where the bankrupt created a corporation for the sole purpose of conducting his individual business, the failure of the corporation to keep proper books has been held to bar the bankrupt's discharge, on the theory that the corporation was acting only as bankrupt's agent.<sup>16</sup> As already stated the word "fraudulent" has been omitted from before the word "intent," though the scope of the section does not seem to be thereby varied. necessarily show an intent to conceal where a memorandum was kept of such transaction.<sup>19</sup> The entry of an excessive credit in favor of one purchasing goods from the bankrupt for the purpose of deceiving general creditors into a belief that an ordinary sale of lumber had been made to an unsecured creditor is not sufficient to bar a discharge.<sup>20</sup>

Though the reasonable consequences of such conduct may be a concealment of one's financial condition, the mere keeping of imperfect books or the failure to keep any books will not bar a discharge unless it is shown that the bankrupt thereby intended to conceal his financial condition from his creditors,<sup>21</sup> and such intent will not be presumed, as a matter of law, from mere bad book-keeping or a failure to keep any books.<sup>22</sup> But where the bankrupt is in a business which ordinarily requires the keeping of accurate books, it is held that the intent may be presumed from the fact that he knew that he was insolvent and yet failed to keep books of account.<sup>23</sup> A fraudulent failure to keep books with intent to conceal his true condition would not exist when bankrupt is not a business man and is willing to give evidence as to the unrecorded transactions;<sup>24</sup> or where he had no business transactions;<sup>25</sup> or as to property of his wife;<sup>26</sup> or if there is a discrepancy or even a contradiction between his testimony and the facts as shown on the books where he alludes

The section as amended is intended to prevent a discharge if the bankrupt, whether in contemplation of bankruptcy or not, for any reason, whether fraudulent or not, has kept his books with intent to conceal his financial condition from any one, irrespective of his being a creditor. If the act be done wilfully it will bar a discharge though the purpose was to conceal a crime, and not to injure creditors,<sup>28</sup> or to conceal the bankrupt's financial condition from his confidential manager and not to defraud creditors.<sup>29</sup>

A bankrupt may be denied a discharge because of his partners failure to keep proper books of account unless he affirmatively shows his innocence or ignorance of the wrongdoing of his partner.<sup>30</sup>

§ 1492. — Concealment and destruction of books.

Concealment of books of account, as an objection to discharge, required three things to be proven prior to the amendment of 1903; (1) concealment of the books, (2) fraudulent intent to conceal bankrupt's condition, and (3) that the concealment was in contemplation of an act of bankruptcy or a voluntary application in bankruptcy, and not merely a state of insolvency. Since the passage of said amendment, it is not necessary to show fraudulent intent, nor that the concealment was committed in contemplation of an act of bankruptcy. The burden of proof is upon the attacking creditor, and he must make out a prima facie case before the burden shifts to the bankrupt.<sup>31</sup>

The mere destruction of books of account, without proof of the bankrupts intent to conceal his financial condition is not sufficient to bar a discharge.<sup>32</sup> An intent exists and a discharge will be refused where a bankrupt destroys vouchers while the papers in bankruptcy are being prepared, so that the disposition of his funds in bank cannot be shown, especially if no books of account are kept;<sup>33</sup> or if he destroys cancelled checks and stubs showing the purpose for which checks were paid and to whom payable,<sup>34</sup> or if an original book be concealed and a copy is substituted from which certain entries are omitted;<sup>35</sup> or if slips containing a correct record of goods sold and the amount of the sales are destroyed and no other books are kept;<sup>36</sup> or if books were kept prior to the passage of the act, and were concealed or destroyed after its passage;<sup>37</sup> or where he swears falsely that the books are correct, or that he does not know where they are.<sup>38</sup>

A discharge will not be refused if the books were partially destroyed by fire without the bankrupt's fault or connivance;<sup>39</sup> or if his ledger is mutilated, if not done by him or with his knowledge, and the entries on the missing pages are to be found repeated in other parts of the book.<sup>40</sup> Placing books deemed of little account in a barrel in a cellar has been held not conclusive on the question of intent to conceal.<sup>41</sup>

To sustain a charge of concealment of books, it must appear that the bankrupt, at or about the time of the filing of the petition, knew or might have ascertained where the old books were, and that he was, therefore, privy to their non-production, and the burden of proof falls upon the creditors.<sup>42</sup> The failure of a bankrupt to deliver his books to the trustee, make return of them in his schedules, or otherwise account for them, creates the presumption that he has them and is guilty of concealing them.<sup>43</sup>

§ 1493. — Books held proper.

Books of account must be such as will, at all times, exhibit the condition of the debtor, so that when placed before creditors for investigation they may at once ascertain his standing and property, and the result of his business, and whether everything has been fair and honest on his part.<sup>44</sup>

Books of account need not have been kept in the most scientific manner,<sup>45</sup> but may be of any form, provided a true condition of the bankrupt's affairs can be gathered from them, that is, they must show receipts, payments, assets, liabilities and the stock on hand.<sup>46</sup> A discharge will not be refused merely because the books have been so kept as to make it difficult, if not impossible, to get an exact financial condition, without further examination.<sup>47</sup> It is sufficient if a stock book, day book and ledger were kept,<sup>48</sup> or if the invoices were kept carefully together, without an invoice book, the other customary books being kept;<sup>49</sup> or if bank books were kept showing the amount received and books showing amounts and to whom paid, but no cash book;<sup>50</sup> or if a chattel mortgage or a promissory note, or a real estate transaction as entered in a blotter kept by a bankrupt as a trader, fully disclosing his indebtedness;<sup>51</sup> or a detached check may be admissible, together with the stub-book;<sup>52</sup> or a pass book is a necessary book of account.<sup>53</sup> Books of account in another business need not be kept.<sup>54</sup> Neither the accidental omission of entries in a trader's books of account,<sup>55</sup> nor the mutilation of such books, if satisfactorily explained,<sup>56</sup> nor even material erasures and alterations in the books, unless made with intent to conceal<sup>57</sup> the financial condition, would be ground for withholding a discharge. The books of account need not contain entries of debts previously contracted and owed at the time the bankrupt went into trade.<sup>58</sup>

The fact that accounts of a stockholder are kept under numbers instead of names of customers does not establish an intent to conceal the broker's financial condition, especially where the name of the customer can be ascertained from other records kept by the bankrupt.<sup>59</sup>

§ 1495. — Obtaining property on credit.

By the amendment of February 5, 1903, congress provided that a discharge shall be refused where the bankrupt has "obtained property on credit from any person upon a materially false statement in writing made to such person for the purpose of obtaining such property on credit." The provision has no counterpart in any of the prior bankruptcy laws of this country. This provision was changed in 1910, so as to read "obtained money or property on credit upon a materially false statement in writing, made by him to any person or his representative for the purpose of obtaining credit from such person."

The denial of a discharge on this ground will not be limited to the creditor from whom the credit was obtained, but any person in interest may make the objection.<sup>73</sup> The fact that the person from whom the credit was obtained had ceased to be a creditor at the time of the adjudication is immaterial,<sup>74</sup> though it is held that a creditor who has, for a valuable consideration, released the bankrupt from any claim on account of false statements made by him, cannot object to a discharge on the ground of such statements.<sup>75</sup>

The obtaining of property on a false statement before the passage of the amendatory act will bar a discharge in a proceeding commenced after the passage thereof.<sup>76</sup> While no specific time is fixed by the statute within which the statement must have been made and the property obtained, by analogy to other provisions of the law it is evident that congress intended that the property must have been obtained within four months of the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>77</sup> The fact that the statement was made prior to the four-month period makes no difference, however, if property was in fact obtained on the strength of it within the four-month period.<sup>78</sup> The provision certainly does not apply, without limit of time, to any obtaining of credit, however long before bankruptcy, and irrespective of intervening transactions with the creditor.<sup>79</sup>

The insertion of the word "money" in the amendment does not change the law, money having been held to be property within the meaning thereof.<sup>80</sup>

Under the original amendment of 1903, the relation of debtor and creditor must have existed between the bankrupt and the party from whom the property was obtained. Accordingly the obtaining of a surety or indemnity bond was held not an obtaining of credit within the meaning of the act.<sup>81</sup> Under the amendment of 1910, the bankrupt must have (1) "obtained money or property (2) on credit, (3) upon a materially false statement (4) in writing, (5) made by him (6) to any person or his representative, (7) for the purpose of obtaining credit (not money or property) from such person." Obviously the credit must be obtained from any person to whom the representations are made, and false statements made to a surety company whereby it is induced to execute an indemnity bond under the conditions of which money is advanced by a third person to the bankrupt, will be held to have been made "for the purpose of obtaining credit." <sup>82</sup>

The written statement need not be delivered by the bankrupt to the person extending credit; it is sufficient that the statement be delivered to an agent of the bankrupt and its contents communicated to the person extending credit,<sup>83</sup> or that the statement be prepared by an agent acting within the scope of his authority and delivered by him.<sup>84</sup>

Under the language of the section as it was prior to the amendment of 1910, the false statement had to be made with the intent of obtaining such credit as it was planned at the time to afford a basis for, and the objecting creditor was required to establish: first, that the bankrupt obtained property on credit, and, second, that he made to the person from whom he obtained it a materially false statement, in writing, for the purpose of obtaining the property.<sup>85</sup> The false statement must have been made to the creditor from whom the property was obtained or to his agent or to some person with the intent, purpose and expectation of its communication to the creditor from whom the property was obtained and with the purpose of acquiring the same. A statement made generally where it was not expected or was not the purpose that it should be communicated to the creditor was not such as would operate as to defeat the discharge. So, a false statement made in confidence to a commercial agency merely for the purpose of obtaining a favorable rating could not ordinarily be used as a bar to a discharge.<sup>86</sup>

Under the language as amended, the word "such" has been omitted and the section would seem to apply to any false statement which had to do with the extension of credit affecting the bankruptcy proceeding.<sup>87</sup>

The creditor must have relied upon the statement in extending credit, and the statement must have been the proximate cause of the extension of credit, and a discharge will not ordinarily be refused where the credit was extended long after the making thereof.<sup>88</sup> The statement need not, however, have been the sole inducing cause in obtaining the goods, it being sufficient that it had a material influence in securing goods, and that the creditor would not have made the sale but for it.<sup>89</sup> It is immaterial that an independent investigation to a certain extent was made with regard to the statement.<sup>90</sup> The statement to a commercial agency must be regarded as a continuing one, and unless recalled, is entitled for a reasonable time to be relied upon.<sup>91</sup>

It is immaterial that at the time of bankruptcy the amount owing the creditor was less than at the time the false statement was made, it appearing that payments were applied to purchases made before the making of the statement and that subsequent purchases were made on credit.<sup>92</sup> So, where the bankrupt gave the creditor a statement of financial condition which by express agreement, was to remain binding unless changed by written authority of the bankrupt, the fact that some sales made subsequently thereto had been paid in full, will not prevent the creditor from urging the falsity of such statement as a bar.<sup>93</sup>

The statement must have been knowingly and intentionally false, or made recklessly without an honest belief in its truth, and with a purpose to mislead or deceive, and thereby obtain property upon credit.<sup>94</sup> It is not necessary, however, that the entire statement be false. statement of the bankrupt's financial condition states that it is a mere matter of form cannot absolve the bankrupt from the consequences of making a false statement,<sup>96</sup> and if the intent in making a false statement of financial condition is fraudulent, it is immaterial that the loss occasioned to the creditor is small. suit against either of the members has been held to estop him from setting up the fraud as a bar.<sup>4</sup>

The fact that the bankrupt had on prior occasions drawn drafts on a bank when there were no funds to meet them, does not constitute a draft drawn by his agent without his knowledge or direction a false statement barring a discharge.<sup>5</sup>

While the burden is upon the objecting creditor in the first instance to prove the intent to deceive, yet, when it is shown that the bankrupt made a material statement which he knew was untrue, the burden shifts to the bankrupt to show that it was not made with intent to deceive.<sup>6</sup> The bankrupt's disclaimer of any intent to deceive is, in the absence of corroborating circumstances, entitled to little weight.<sup>7</sup> It will be presumed that the bankrupt knew his financial condition,<sup>8</sup> and that he had knowledge of the falsity of a statement prepared by his bookkeeper,<sup>9</sup> and the bankrupt's failure to disclose in a financial statement, an indebtedness owing to friends or relatives will be presumed to have been made with a fraudulent intent.<sup>10</sup>

§ 1496. — Transfer, destruction or concealment of assets.

By the amendment of February 5, 1903, congress has definitely enacted that a discharge will be refused if the bankrupt has "at any time subsequent to the first day of the four months immediately preceding the filing of the petition transferred, removed, destroyed, or concealed, or permitted to be removed, destroyed, or concealed, any of his property with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors." Prior to this amendment a concealment of assets has been held to be a sufficient ground for refusing a discharge. What amounts to a concealment of assets has been frequently passed upon by the courts to the following effect, and is held to include a transfer with intent to defraud creditors. The separation of some tangible thing, money or chose in action, from the body of an insolvent debtor's estate and its secretion from those who have a right to seize upon it for the payment of their debts, is, within the law, a concealment and continues such as long as the secretion remains. In such a case the property opened to creditors is decreased by just the amount thus secreted. On every occasion when it is properly the bankrupt's duty to disclose his assets, a failure knowingly to do so will be a concealment of them,<sup>11</sup> and this would be true whether the property was conveyed prior to the passage of the law or subsequent, if the bankrupt still retained a beneficial interest therein at the time of filing his petition, the concealment of title to property being as much a concealment of assets under the law as would be the actual hiding of the same.<sup>12</sup> The amount or value of the property concealed is immaterial.<sup>13</sup>

The transfer, destruction or concealment of assets prior to the four-month period is no bar to a discharge,<sup>14</sup> but the fact that the act of concealment in the first instance was more than four months prior to the petition is immaterial if the concealment is continued into the four-month period.

If a bankrupt has disposed of property belonging to him, prior to adjudication, and has the proceeds thereof in his possession or within his authority to use and appropriate subsequently, there is a continuing concealment for which he is amenable to the law, although the concealment by intent and purpose took place while he was not a bankrupt.<sup>15</sup>

There must be a concealment of assets from the trustee. A mere attempt to hinder and delay creditors is not sufficient to support the objection.<sup>16</sup>

assignment of property alleged to have been fraudulently conveyed, which will necessitate the trustee's bringing an action to determine the validity of the conveyance, relieve the bankrupt from the consequences of his acts, or be considered to negative his obvious intention to conceal his property.<sup>18</sup>

The concealment of property may occur by leaving out of the schedule that which was conveyed in fraud of creditors, the act of concealment being committed at the time of omission.<sup>19</sup> A fraudulent omission and concealment may consist of the failure to include as assets the stock of goods, fixtures and materials in a store, or money derived from an accident insurance policy, or money received from cash sales and unaccounted for, or money withdrawn from the business just previous to bankruptcy, or money in the bankrupt's possession shortly before bankruptcy, or a valuable estate in remainder under a will, or assets concealed by the mode of accounting adopted, or real and personal property transferred within four months prior to the filing of the petition, without consideration and with intent to defraud creditors, or property conveyed reserving a secret trust to bankrupt;<sup>20</sup> or if bankrupt, after failing, organized a corporation, and then filed an individual petition, the court may be justified in treating the corporation as a fiction, and the sums due to it as the assets of the bankrupt.<sup>21</sup>

A discharge will be refused, if the bankrupt puts into his schedule as due a debt which is false or fictitious.<sup>22</sup>

An honest unintentional mistake of a bankrupt in failing to schedule certain creditors and debts will not preclude his discharge against scheduled creditors and debts,<sup>23</sup> but will preclude his discharge against the omitted ones,<sup>24</sup> or mere omissions and inaccuracies, which may be corrected by amendment;<sup>25</sup> or if the omission or inaccuracy is not caused by a fraudulent intent to conceal the property from his trustee, but is the result of a mistake of law or of fact,<sup>26</sup> or of an honest, though erroneous, belief that he had no available interest in the property;<sup>27</sup> or unless bankrupt's contention that the property omitted was not his is proven false and that he knew it was false,<sup>28</sup> and this is true of an omission to include an advance of a sum of money by a bankrupt to his wife, when enjoying good credit, and the return of which he never exacted.<sup>29</sup> If it be doubtful whether a specific item should go to the estate, it is not for the bankrupt to constitute himself the judge, concealing the fact, but it is his duty to disclose the transaction, that the court may determine the right.<sup>30</sup>

a good objection that the bankrupt alleged certain assets scheduled to be worthless, for such statement does not affect their real value, and bankrupt's discharge would not prevent his trustee recovering such assets.<sup>44</sup>

The omission from the schedule of a complete statement of the property owned by the bankrupt is not in itself ground for refusing a discharge;<sup>45</sup> nor is the omission of names of creditors with their knowledge and consent;<sup>46</sup> nor the name of a creditor,<sup>47</sup> unless the omission is wilful and fraudulent;<sup>48</sup> and if the grounds are false swearing, attempting to conceal property, and transferring a portion with intent to prefer, a discharge will be granted if the bankrupt had no interest therein and the transfer was without fraud.<sup>49</sup> Where there has been concealment of assets, the discharge may be made conditional upon the bankrupt using all reasonable means to discover the concealed assets,<sup>50</sup> and a discharge will not be granted where bankrupt acted as administratrix of her husband and mingled his property with hers, until she has properly accounted for hers;<sup>51</sup> or where trustee accepts a homestead allotment made years before and the property has enhanced in value in excess of the amount allowed, until there is a re-allotment;<sup>52</sup> but a wife will not be refused a discharge because her husband, to whom she left the entire conduct of the business, has committed one of the acts preventing his discharge.<sup>53</sup> judicial discretion of the court.<sup>54</sup> The bankrupt's intent to hinder, delay and defraud his creditors may be inferred.<sup>55</sup>

In order to establish a fraudulent concealment it must appear that the property belonged to the bankrupt and that the transfer was merely a temporary expedient to place the property beyond the reach of the trustee, the title to be resumed by the bankrupt as soon as prudence would permit.<sup>56</sup> It is not sufficient to show merely bankrupt's former ownership of certain goods and that he is not now able to account for them, but there must be evidence of his present possession or control of such property, or of a secret trust for his benefit in such property.<sup>57</sup>

A mere discrepancy between the extent of the bankrupt's property as given in a statement of his financial condition shortly before bankruptcy and the extent thereof as shown by his schedules is not conclusive on the question of fraudulent concealment, but the bankrupt should be given an opportunity to account for the discrepancy,<sup>58</sup> but if there is a disappearance of substantial assets, which are unlisted and unaccounted for, the burden of proof devolves upon the bankrupt to account for their disappearance.<sup>59</sup> A bankrupt cannot overthrow a prima facie case of concealment of assets by his mere assertion that he acted as agent for another in dealing with the property alleged to have been concealed.<sup>60</sup>

The credibility and reasonableness of the bankrupt's explanation of the disappearance of assets shown to have recently been in his possession is addressed to the discretion of the judge.<sup>61</sup> An admission by him that at the time of the filing of his petition he had money in his possession which he did not include in his schedules is sufficient to sustain the objections in the absence of some explanation.<sup>62</sup> So, if a bankrupt, while insolvent, conveys property to a near relative without consideration, and fails to disclose such property in his schedules, he is prima facie guilty of concealing assets.<sup>63</sup> A decree dismissing a suit brought by the trustee seeking to charge property inherited by the bankrupt's wife with the cost of improvements made by the bankrupt has been held conclusive that the bankrupt was not guilty of concealment of assets in not scheduling a claim for such improvements.<sup>64</sup>

§ 1497. — Fraudulent conveyances.

A fraudulent conveyance by a bankrupt is not in itself a bar to his discharge,<sup>65</sup> unless it amounts to a fraudulent concealment of assets;<sup>66</sup> nor is the fact that the bankrupt caused and permitted loss, waste and destruction of his estate and effects, and misspent and misused the same, prior to filing the petition.<sup>67</sup>

To constitute a bar the transfer must have been made within four months and with intent to hinder, delay or defraud the entire body of creditors, not merely an individual creditor. So, the transfer by the bankrupt, a broker, of the stock of a customer is not a bar to a discharge though made with the intent to defraud the customer.<sup>68</sup> A fraudulent conveyance made more than four months prior to the filing of the petition but recorded within four months thereof may bar a discharge.<sup>69</sup> A transfer may be fraudulent so as to bar a discharge, regardless of the fact that the bankrupt thinks he has a right to make it.<sup>70</sup>

Where a transfer of property more than four months prior to bankruptcy is charged as a concealment of assets the question of the right to a discharge should be left undetermined until the validity of the transfer is determined in the state court.<sup>71</sup> A judgment in a suit by the trustee that a transfer of property by the bankrupt was bona fide or that the transfer was fraudulent is conclusive on the question of the concealment of such property.<sup>72</sup> While the right of creditors to oppose a bankrupt's discharge on the ground of an alleged fraudulent transaction does not depend on their having taken legal action to recover the property affected, if the evidence, on the application for discharge, is conflicting, the fact that no such effort has been made may be taken into consideration, and if the proof is evenly balanced, will warrant a decision in favor of the bankrupt.<sup>73</sup> The fraudulent nature of the conveyance must be affirmatively shown,<sup>74</sup> but when it exists it defeats his right to a discharge.<sup>75</sup>

A transfer of property in which the bankrupt merely has a special property, in the way of a lien upon it, will not bar a discharge.<sup>76</sup>

While the bankrupt's placing title to his property in his wife shortly before bankruptcy will ordinarily be held fraudulent,<sup>77</sup> the retention by the bankrupt of a secret trust in property conveyed to his wife will not be inferred alone from the fact that, since the conveyance, he has continued to live with her on the property conveyed.<sup>78</sup> An assignment by the bankrupt, acting as agent for his wife under an unrecorded power of attorney, to her of corporate stock has been held not fraudulent.<sup>79</sup>

§ 1498. — Preferential transfers.

§ 1499. — General assignments.

A general assignment made prior to proceedings in bankruptcy, is not a bar to a discharge.<sup>82</sup>

§ 1500. — Effect of advice of counsel.

While advice of counsel may be considered in determining whether an omission from schedules was fraudulent,<sup>83</sup> it cannot excuse violation of law, though it may mitigate the act, according to the character of the advice and circumstances under which it was given. To absolve the bankrupt from the charge of making a false oath or of designedly concealing his property, the facts must be fully and in good faith stated to counsel, and the act charged done innocently, and believing he had been correctly advised.<sup>84</sup>

If a bankrupt fairly presents a matter to his attorney relative to the scheduling of property and is advised that it is not such property as should properly be scheduled in bankruptcy, such advice, where honestly given, however erroneous, tends to deprive the false oath of its element of wilfulness and fraud, and the conviction of the bankrupt of the crime of perjury under such circumstances, could not be maintained.<sup>85</sup> Hence unless it

§ 1501. — Omission of non-dischargeable debts.

The fact that a debt which is not released by a discharge is not scheduled, would not operate as a bar to a discharge, as the right to a discharge and its effect when granted are different things.<sup>86</sup>

§ 1502. — Former discharge.

By the amendment of February 5, 1903, a discharge will be refused if the bankrupt has in a voluntary proceeding been granted a discharge in bankruptcy within six years. The amendment affects all pending proceedings,<sup>87</sup> and all proceedings commenced after its enactment, and is not unconstitutional because it may affect proceedings against one who had been adjudged a bankrupt in voluntary proceedings prior to its passage.<sup>88</sup>

The granting of a discharge in an involuntary proceeding will have no effect upon a subsequent discharge in either voluntary or involuntary proceedings.<sup>89</sup> While the effect of the amendment is to bar a discharge in either voluntary or involuntary proceedings if within six years prior thereto the bankrupt in a voluntary proceeding has been granted a discharge,<sup>90</sup> the fact that the bankrupt has been adjudged a voluntary bankrupt will not prevent voluntary or involuntary proceedings from being instituted at any time.<sup>91</sup>

The six-year period runs from the date of the discharge in the voluntary proceeding to the date of judicial action upon the application for the next discharge. There must accordingly be a full period of six years between the granting of the discharge in the voluntary proceeding and the date of the second discharge, whether in a voluntary or involuntary proceeding. The fact that the petition in bankruptcy in the second proceeding has been filed prior to the expiration of the six years would not bar the granting of the discharge if six years had elapsed at the time judicial action was taken on the discharge in the subsequent proceeding.<sup>92</sup> In one case, it has been held that the six-year period should be computed from the time of granting the first discharge to the filing of the application for the second discharge, rather than to the time of the judicial action thereon. This interpretation of the law would prevent a bankrupt from applying for a discharge within the six years, and then by delaying the hearing upon his second application nevertheless obtaining a discharge.<sup>93</sup>

Where in prior proceedings the discharge was not in form refused but the petition therefor was dismissed because of the bankrupt's failure to prosecute and appear for examination, the bankrupt may be granted a qualified discharge which is not to apply to debts provable in the prior proceedings.<sup>94</sup> Where a discharge is refused as to certain debts which were provable in a former proceeding in which no discharge was granted, the order of discharge may be so drawn as to except from its operation such debts.<sup>95</sup>

§ 1503. — Contumacy.

By the amendment of February 5, 1903, a discharge will be refused if "in the course of the proceedings in bankruptcy, the bankrupt refuses to obey any lawful order of or to answer any material question approved by the court." Section 7 defines the duties of the bankrupt. The purpose of this provision is intended to effect a compliance with the requirements and duties imposed upon him, and where he has been guilty of disobedience, a discharge will be refused. His refusal must, however, have been either to obey a direct order of the court or to answer a material question approved by the court; that is, the order must emanate from the court and the materiality of the question he refuses to answer must have been passed upon and approved by the court.<sup>98</sup> This of course would apply to an order of the referee as well as of the court of bankruptcy itself. While it is true that the bankrupt may decline to answer any lawful question which may have a tendency to incriminate him, without subjecting himself to punishment, congress doubtless intended by this provision to provide for such contingency. In order, therefore, to avail himself of the privileges of a discharge as given by the statute, the bankrupt must have answered any material question propounded and if he claims his constitutional privilege to decline to answer because it might have a tendency to incriminate him, it would nevertheless operate as a bar to his discharge.<sup>99</sup> The bankrupt may be denied a discharge because of his refusal to answer questions on his examination though the referee has not certified the objections to the questions to the court,<sup>1</sup> and though at a subse-

The mere fact that testimony is evasive or disingenuous or disrespectful is not a ground for barring a discharge<sup>4</sup> but it is a material consideration in determining his credibility when testifying as to what became of certain property.<sup>5</sup>

§ 1504. — Res adjudicata.

An order refusing to confirm a composition on the ground that it is not for the best interests of creditors is not res adjudicata as to right to a subsequent discharge.<sup>6</sup>

§ 1505. Refusal of discharge—Effect.

An order dismissing an application for a discharge is in substance an order denying discharge, and cannot be questioned except by an appeal.<sup>7</sup>

A judgment refusing discharge may award costs to the objecting creditors.<sup>8</sup>

After a discharge has been refused a creditor may institute and prosecute any action against the bankrupt as to after-acquired property which he might have instituted and prosecuted but for the adjudication in bankruptcy.<sup>9</sup>

§ 1506. Application for rehearing.

In view of the provisions of the act<sup>10</sup> for the revocation of a discharge, it is questionable if any other attack can be made on it, if once granted; but, in case of refusal to grant a discharge, an application to rehear may be made, but, if no new questions of fact or law be presented, and it appears the refusal was justified by the showing of concealment of assets, the application will be denied.<sup>11</sup> A creditor's petition to reopen the case because of the discovery of additional proofs will be denied where not seasonably made.<sup>12</sup>

§ 1507. Amendment of decree.

A decree granting a discharge will not be amended where over a year has elapsed since the entry thereof and no actual fraud of the bankrupt is shown.<sup>13</sup> The order for a discharge may be amended so as to discharge a bankrupt from his liabilities as a partner, as well as from his individual debts.<sup>14</sup>

§ 1508. Revocation and impeachment of a discharge.*§ 1509. — Jurisdiction.

The court of bankruptcy has power to recall a final decree granting a discharge on application,<sup>15</sup> and its jurisdiction in this respect is exclusive.<sup>16</sup> The effect of this is to prevent the validity of a discharge being called into question in suits brought against the bankrupt, causing unnecessary labor and offering opportunity for different decisions on the same point.

A discharge cannot be revoked in a suit brought in the district court under its general equitable jurisdiction and not under the bankruptcy act.<sup>17</sup>

§ 1510. — Grounds.

The act of 1898 provides that a discharge may be revoked "if it shall be made to appear that it was obtained through the fraud of the bankrupt, and that the knowledge of the fraud has come to the petitioners since the granting of the discharge, and that the actual facts did not warrant the discharge."<sup>18</sup> Not-

That any creditor or creditors of said bankrupt, whose debt was proved or provable against the estate in bankruptcy, who shall see fit to contest the validity of said discharge on the ground that it was fraudulently obtained, may, at any time within two years after the date thereof, apply to the court which granted it to set aside and annul the same. Said application shall be in writing, shall specify which, in particular, of the several acts mentioned in section twenty-nine it is intended to give evidence of against the bankrupt, setting forth the grounds of avoidance, and no evidence shall be admitted as to any other withstanding the difference in the phraseology of the present act and that of 1867, the meaning of the two are practically the same. While fraud is the only ground for revoking a discharge under section 15,<sup>19</sup> courts of bankruptcy are not deprived of their usual control of their judgments by that section but may still correct their records to make them conform to the facts,<sup>20</sup> and recall a discharge granted by accident or mistake, or obtained by a fraud in the court, though such relief should be sought promptly and before others' rights intervene.<sup>21</sup> If the court overlooks specifications properly filed and grants a discharge, a motion to recall the discharge and consider the specifications may be made, and, if denied, a review may be had in the appellate court;<sup>22</sup> and, if a creditor wishes to attack a discharge, because of the fraudulent omission of his claim, he must do so on the ground of fraud in the court of bankruptcy.<sup>23</sup>

Fraud, as used in section 15, is synonymous with bad faith, and means fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude, or intentional wrong,<sup>24</sup> and, under the present act, as under the act of 1867, it must have been such as would have originally prevented the discharge had it been known in time and presented in the form of objections to the allowance of a discharge.<sup>25</sup> The fraud

If, upon the hearing of said parties, the court shall find that the fraudulent acts, or any of them, set forth as aforesaid by said creditor or creditors against the bankrupt, are proved, and that said creditor or creditors had no knowledge of the same until after the granting of said discharge, judgment shall be given in favor of said creditor or creditors, and the discharge of said bankrupt shall be set aside and annulled. by which the discharge was obtained must have related to fraud theretofore knowingly practiced by the bankrupt. It must have been an actual fraud, such as could have been urged against the granting of the discharge.<sup>26</sup> Thus in bankrupt's application for discharge<sup>27</sup> he is required to state that he has wholly surrendered all his property and rights of property and fully complied with all the requirements of the act, which, if not true and there are grounds for refusing him a discharge, constitute a fraud in obtaining his discharge.<sup>28</sup>

If it is made to appear to the court of bankruptcy that testimony of the bankrupt in subsequent proceedings tends to show that, at the time of the bankruptcy, he had considerable property, though his verified petition stated no assets and no trustee was appointed, a hearing should be had on the question whether the discharge should not be revoked;<sup>29</sup> or if the opposition of a creditor was bought off through the procurement or privity of the bankrupt;<sup>30</sup> or, if by wilfully and fraudulently making a false schedule or affidavit, the bankrupt prevented notice to a creditor and such creditor had no actual knowledge of the proceedings;<sup>31</sup> or if credit was procured on the faith of bankrupt's ownership of property, deeds of which, through a third person to bankrupt's wife without consideration were alleged to have been burned, such deeds being afterwards recorded and the property omitted from the schedules.<sup>32</sup> Where a discharge is granted upon a hearing in which the principal creditor, who had successfully contested the right to a discharge in a former proceeding, failed to appear, the discharge may be set aside though such creditor's attorney of record had received notice of the hearing,

§ 1511. — Who may apply.

The expression "parties in interest" employed in this section includes all persons whose interests are affected by the discharge. One who acquires rights after the discharge would not be included,<sup>46</sup> nor would one whose claim is not affected by the discharge,<sup>47</sup> nor a creditor fraudulently omitted from the schedule, since his debt is not released by the discharge. It was held under the former law that a creditor, who neglected to file objections in due time and subsequently discovered fraud, might require bankrupt to take his discharge and then apply to set it aside; the knowledge of the fraud barring the right to make such application must have been available in time to present objections to the discharge.<sup>48</sup>

§ 1512. — Time for applying.

A discharge cannot be revoked after one year, which year begins to run from the date of the discharge and not from the discovery of the fraud upon which the revocation is sought,<sup>49</sup> and it is immaterial that the fraud is not discovered until after the expiration of that period. Furthermore, although the year has not expired, if the creditor has been guilty of undue laches, the discharge will not be revoked.<sup>50</sup> The court cannot set aside a discharge, in order to permit an addition of a creditor to the bankrupt's schedule, more than a year after the adjudication,<sup>51</sup> and a motion to vacate a discharge as inadvertently granted after the time allowed by rule of court for such motion, will be denied.<sup>52</sup> After a year has elapsed from the date of the discharge, a bankrupt cannot be compelled to submit to an examination for the purpose of instituting or aiding a proceeding to vacate it, nor can the application be amended to add new grounds or acts.<sup>53</sup>

As to what constitutes laches depends upon the circumstances of each case, and it has been held in one case that one month constituted laches;<sup>54</sup> in another eight months,<sup>55</sup> and in another five months,<sup>56</sup> where the court overlooked specifications filed in opposition to the discharge and no proceedings for a review were taken within the time prescribed, the bankrupt having in the meantime acted upon his discharge.<sup>57</sup> It must be made clear that there has been no laches, and this cannot be done by general averments.<sup>58</sup>

An application to revoke a discharge, which though filed immediately after the discharge, is not brought on for hearing within a reasonable time, will not be allowed.<sup>59</sup>

§ 1513. — The application.

It has been held that the power to revoke a discharge is limited and that it can only be exercised upon a petition filed, complying with the provisions of section 15a.<sup>60</sup> It would seem, however, that if the application is addressed to the court of bankruptcy in the exercise of its general powers as a court to control its own records and make them conform to the facts, or correct anything done through inadvertence or mistake or procured through fraud practiced on the court, the application might be by motion, supported, in case facts outside of the record are relied on, by affidavits. Such motion must be made within the time prescribed by the rules of court and otherwise conform thereto.

If the application is made under section 15 of the act, it must allege all jurisdictional facts.<sup>61</sup> It should allege facts showing that the petitioners are parties in interest and had provable debts against the bankrupt which were affected by the dis-

Conveyances made by a bankrupt and alleged to be fraudulent, or any other acts of a bankrupt, cannot be shown in evidence, unless charged in the petition to set aside the discharge, except to show the intent of certain acts specified in such petition.<sup>71</sup>

§ 1519. — Examination of bankrupt.

The bankrupt may be examined after a discharge and at any time within a year of its granting for the purpose of discovering if there is reason to apply to have such discharge revoked under this section,<sup>72</sup> but not after the year has expired.<sup>73</sup>

§ 1520. — Effect of revocation.

The object of section 15 is to secure the utmost good faith in the procuring of a discharge. Persons acting on the faith of a discharge are protected, in case of its revocation, by applying the property acquired by the bankrupt, in addition to his estate at the time of adjudication, to the payment in full of the claims of creditors for property sold to him on credit, in good faith, while such discharge was in force, and the residue, if any, to the payment of the debts owing at the time of adjudication.<sup>74</sup> A trustee, on his appointment and qualification after a discharge is revoked, is vested with the title to all of the bankrupt's property as of the date of the final decree revoking the discharge.<sup>75</sup>

PART II

THE EFFECT OF A DISCHARGE

§ 1521. In general.

The right to a discharge and the effect of a discharge on a claim are wholly distinct propositions.<sup>76</sup> The proper time and place for the determination of the effect of a discharge is when the same is pleaded or relied upon by the debtor as a defense to the enforcement of a particular claim. The issue upon the effect of a discharge cannot properly arise or be considered in determining the right to a discharge.<sup>77</sup>

A discharge when granted relates back to the time of the filing of the petition.<sup>78</sup> It has the same effect as the return of an execution wholly or partly unsatisfied.<sup>79</sup>

If a discharge be refused, and a second petition be filed and a discharge thereunder be obtained, the latter will be made gen-

R. 580; this distinction seems to have been overlooked by the Supreme Court in the case of Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 575, 45 L. ed. 1009, 5 A. B. R. 829.

eral, leaving its effect as to debts proved under the first petition, but not under the second, to be determined as occasion may arise.<sup>80</sup>

A discharge protects the bankrupt from the imposition of fines and penalties, or deprivation of office, place or position, by tribunals of a state, for nonpayment of debts which have been discharged.<sup>81</sup>

§ 1522. Discharge is personal.

A discharge is a personal privilege given the bankrupt in consideration of his surrendering his property; a bankruptcy proceeding is a proceeding in rem and all persons interested are regarded as parties to the proceedings, including the bankrupt and trustee, as well as the creditors, secured and unsecured, and an injunction may issue after discharge.<sup>82</sup> The discharge does not release the fraudulent grantees of the bankrupt from liability for the fraud committed by them,<sup>83</sup> but it is held that a widow of a bankrupt to whom his property has been transferred may avail herself of his discharge and plead it in her own defense.<sup>84</sup>

§ 1523. Effect upon bankruptcy proceedings.

The summary jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court over the bankrupt continues during the pendency of the proceedings, and during the year in which a discharge may be revoked, and he may be examined, notwithstanding the discharge.<sup>85</sup> The granting of the discharge does not oust the referee of his jurisdiction of the cause, it being a mere incident in the proceedings; and the cause proceeds before him until the court finally discharges the trustee.<sup>86</sup>

provable in bankruptcy, the dismissal of the suit does not prejudice proceedings on it under the bankruptcy law.<sup>87</sup>

§ 1524. Collateral attack.

The judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction cannot be collaterally attacked, but is conclusive between the parties; so a discharge in bankruptcy, until set aside or reversed, in a direct proceeding, is conclusive upon all parties to the proceeding, and cannot be attacked collaterally;<sup>88</sup> and cannot therefore be impeached, if pleaded in bar in an action for a dischargeable debt in a state court.<sup>89</sup> Opportunity is offered to contest the discharge, and, if not availed of in the mode and within the time allowed, all remedy to annul it is cut off;<sup>90</sup> but the distinction between attacking the discharge and showing that it does not affect the debt sued on, or other matter, in bar of which it is pleaded, must be kept in mind, as the latter can always be done.<sup>91</sup>

§ 1525. Order granting discharge as res adjudicata.

An order confirming a composition or granting a discharge which recites that the bankrupt has not been guilty of any of the acts which would be a bar to his discharge, is not res adjudicata in an action by a creditor who has opposed such order, seeking to enforce a claim for damages based on the acts of the bankrupt which such creditor urged as a bar to the confirmation of the composition or the discharge. So a discharge granted against the objection of a creditor urging as an objection thereto that the bankrupt obtained property by means of a materially false statement in writing is not a bar to an action of deceit based upon such false statement.<sup>92</sup>

§ 1526. Effect of foreign discharge.

While a discharge is as much a release of a debt due an alien as of one due a citizen of the United States whether the alien was a party to the proceedings or not,<sup>93</sup> a bankrupt's discharge in a foreign country under a foreign bankruptcy law does not discharge a debt made in, and with reference to the laws of this country, nor bar an action on a contract made in this country.<sup>94</sup>

§ 1527. Effect upon property or wages of bankrupt.

§ 1528. — In general.

The discharge when granted relates back to the date of the filing of the petition, and property acquired by the bankrupt, intervening the filing thereof and the granting of the discharge, cannot be appropriated to the payment of his debts.<sup>95</sup> So, an assignment of future wages executed prior to bankruptcy cannot be enforced after a discharge of the debtor, against wages earned subsequent to the filing of the petition, notwithstanding the assignment may so provide,<sup>96</sup> and where an assignment of future wages is void because in violation of statute, the fact that the bankrupt obtained the loan upon which it was based by false pretenses, will not affect his right to wages earned after the adjudication.<sup>97</sup> An employer of the bankrupt may urge the latter's discharge in an action to enforce an assignment of wages.<sup>98</sup>

The fact that under a state law a judgment for a debt which is dischargeable in bankruptcy cannot be cancelled of record until a period of one year has expired from the granting of the discharge does not entitle the creditor to enforce his judgment against property acquired or wages earned by the bankrupt subsequent to his adjudication, though the judgment has not been cancelled of record.<sup>99</sup>

The discharge of a debtor in bankruptcy in no way precludes the trustee from recovering property of the bankrupt's estate which has been fraudulently conveyed.<sup>1</sup> Title to concealed and non-scheduled property does not revest in the bankrupt upon his discharge so as to deprive the court of jurisdiction thereof upon the reopening of the estate.<sup>2</sup>

§ 1529. — Contracts.

The bankrupt law discharges the contract, as distinguished from insolvent laws, which only liberate the person; but, while it discharges him from certain pecuniary liabilities, it does not assume to relieve him of contractual relations as such. There is nothing in the letter or policy of the law which gives to an adjudication in bankruptcy the effect of discharging executory contracts, which have not resulted in the creation of any present pecuniary liability on the part of the bankrupt.<sup>3</sup>

§ 1530. — Leases.

An adjudication or discharge in bankruptcy does not terminate a lease nor change the legal relation of landlord and tenant, unless the landlord re-enters or the trustee assumes the lease, in which case the adjudication or discharge acts like any other assignment and all liability of the tenant ceases.<sup>4</sup>

§ 1531. — Good will of bankrupt.

§ 1532. — Liens.

The bankruptcy act does not continue a dischargeable debt for the purpose of permitting a lien to be created after the adjudication, but only to preserve and enforce a lien in existence at the date of the adjudication. As against dischargeable debts, the bankrupt is to be protected in the enjoyment of property acquired after the adjudication unless it is affected with a lien at the time of the adjudication. Valid and existing liens on specific property or trusts therein securing a debt are not impaired by the discharge.<sup>6</sup>

A discharge in bankruptcy releases the bankrupt from a provable debt not within the excepted classes and takes away the creditor's right to proceed against him in personam, but it does not affect a lien on his property acquired more than four months before the filing of the petition provided it is otherwise valid;<sup>7</sup> or liens excepted from the operation of the act,<sup>8</sup> as a lien for wages created and preserved according to statute;<sup>9</sup> or where bank stock is delivered as security for a loan, the only thing remaining to be done being the transfer of the stock on the books of the bank issuing the stock;<sup>10</sup> or a vendor's lien where such lien is recognized by state laws;<sup>11</sup> or a mortgage lien, if the trustee fails to redeem the property, or agree with the creditors as to its value, or have it ascertained by a sale under direction of the court of bankruptcy;<sup>12</sup> or if the incumbered property does not form part of the assets in bankruptcy, though, if it afterwards comes into the possession of bankrupt, the court of bankruptcy may enforce the lien.<sup>13</sup> However, the lien of a mortgage given his wife for money forming part of her paraphernal estate, which mortgage was recorded prior to the husband's discharge as a bankrupt, is released by the discharge as far as concerns his after-acquired property and the discharge can be urged by a mortgagee of such property;<sup>14</sup> and the same is true where the lien is acquired within the prohibited four months.<sup>15</sup>

A creditor, who brought an action and issued an attachment more than four months before the bankruptcy may have a special judgment against the property notwithstanding the discharge.<sup>16</sup>

§ 1533. Effect upon stockholders' or directors' liability.

By the amendatory act of February 5, 1903, it is provided that the bankruptcy of a corporation does not release its officers, directors or stockholders, as such, from any liability under the laws of a state or territory of the United States.<sup>17</sup> The discharge in bankruptcy of a corporation renders compliance with a statute requiring a judgment, against the corporation and an execution returned unsatisfied before the stockholders' liability can be enforced, unnecessary.<sup>18</sup> Notwithstanding the discharge of the corporation, a creditor may take judgment in a state court against it, in such limited form as will enable him to reap the benefit of the directors' liability, the rendering of such a judgment depending upon the authority of the state court under the local law. In such case the judgment will not be against the person or property of the bankrupt and has no other effect than to enable the plaintiff to charge the directors in accordance with the state statute.<sup>19</sup>

A stock subscriber's liability to calls on the bankruptcy of a corporation becomes a contingent liability of undetermined amount, payable when a call is made, and if such subscriber subsequently becomes bankrupt and receives a discharge he is released from such liability though the call is not made until after the discharge;<sup>20</sup> and so a shareholder in a national bank is released from his statutory individual liability to the bank's creditors, if, at the time of his discharge, their claims were provable and not merely contingent.<sup>21</sup>

§1534. Effect upon suits against bankrupt.

A suit to collect a debt, claim or liability from a bankrupt may be restrained until the application for a discharge has been determined, if made and prosecuted with reasonable diligence, and where the discharge would be a bar to such a suit, the creditor must go into the bankruptcy court and oppose the discharge,<sup>23</sup> and, on the application for stay, based upon the discharge, jurisdiction will be presumed, though the record is silent in this respect.<sup>24</sup> A bankrupt defendant may file a bond to dissolve an attachment, though issued more than four months before bankruptcy, and have the case continued to await his discharge.<sup>25</sup> It is obvious, however, that where a judgment is not such an one as is affected by discharge in bankruptcy, no satisfaction of the judgment will be entered on the production of the discharge, an instance of this being an attachment upon exempt property.<sup>26</sup>

In New York, a judgment against a bankrupt entered within a year after his discharge in bankruptcy upon a debt scheduled in the bankruptcy proceedings may be cancelled and discharged of record,<sup>27</sup> and this though leave to set up the discharge as a defense to the action was granted the defendant.<sup>28</sup>

Proceedings to remove a city fireman for nonpayment of debts from which he had been discharged, have been restrained.<sup>29</sup>

The disqualification of the bankrupt to testify in a suit to which he is a party as to a transaction with a deceased party is removed upon his discharge, where the debt which is the basis of the suit has been discharged thereby.<sup>30</sup>

§ 1535. Effect upon contempt proceedings.

Contempt proceedings may be taken to punish the willful disobedience of a lawful order of the court or to secure the result that obedience of the order would have brought but for the bankrupt's disobedience, or both;<sup>31</sup> and, if they are for the failure to obey an order requiring the payment of money and the discharge will release the liability to pay the money, the bankrupt is entitled to be released.<sup>32</sup> The same rule applies in the case of fines and costs inuring to the benefit of the prosecutor;<sup>33</sup> but, if for the enforcement of an order requiring the performance of some act or duty, not affected by the discharge, he is not entitled to release;<sup>34</sup> and, of course, not, if it is to punish him, a pardon being the only relief in that case, unless release is secured under the provision as to poor debtors, the state laws relating thereto being adopted by the United States.<sup>35</sup>

§ 1536. Release from arrest.

A debtor arrested in a civil action prior to commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy is not entitled to be released from such arrest, upon being adjudged a bankrupt, but if the debt for which he is arrested is one affected by a discharge, he is entitled to a release from arrest.<sup>36</sup>

§ 1537. Discovery of assets after discharge.

Where, after his discharge and after the period when a petition to reopen or revoke the discharge had elapsed, the bankrupt discovered assets that should have been scheduled and petitions to be allowed to schedule them, only creditors who proved their claims according to the act can participate in such assets.<sup>37</sup>

§ 1538. Revival of debt after discharge.

The only effect of a discharge is to suspend the right of action for a debt against the debtor personally. It does not annul the original debt or liability of the debtor. The remedy upon the debt, and the legal, but not the moral, obligation to pay is at an end. The obligation itself is not cancelled.<sup>38</sup>

Since the discharge is personal to the bankrupt he may waive it and, since it does not destroy the debt but merely releases him from liability, that is, removes the legal obligation to pay the debt, leaving the moral obligation unaffected, such moral obligation is a sufficient consideration to support a new promise<sup>39</sup> and, if the debtor makes such promise, it may be made the foundation of a suit. The plaintiff should declare on the original promise, or debt, the new promise being a defense to a plea of discharge; otherwise, there would be no consideration to support the new promise, if the original debt was destroyed by the discharge.<sup>40</sup> A new promise is said to revive the debt,<sup>41</sup> though judgments confessed by bankrupt subsequent to his discharge for debts owing prior to the discharge have been held sufficiently supported by the old debts not to revive them but to create new ones.<sup>42</sup>

The sufficiency of a new promise to revive the debt must be determined by the local laws.<sup>43</sup> The new promise need not be in writing unless required by state law,<sup>44</sup> but it must be clear, distinct, express and unequivocal;<sup>45</sup> and not in consideration of the creditor's withdrawing his opposition to the discharge.<sup>46</sup> If the promise is based upon a condition it must be shown that the condition has been complied with.<sup>47</sup> It may be made any time after bankruptcy before or after discharge.<sup>48</sup> Unlike debts barred by the statute of limitations, debts discharged in bankruptcy are not revived by a new promise which amounts merely to an acknowledgment, but it must be an express statement of intention to pay;<sup>49</sup> thought it may be conditional;<sup>50</sup> and the following have been held sufficient: "I will pay;" "I will settle;" "I will see that you are no loser by me;" "She shall have her pay;" "I am able and willing to pay."<sup>51</sup>

Section 16a of the act provides that: "The liability of a person who is a co-debtor with, or guarantor or in any manner a surety for, a bankrupt shall not be altered by the discharge of such bankrupt."

This section is merely declaratory of existing law, it being a general rule that, while a voluntary release of one co-debtor releases the other, a release by operation of law does not do so.<sup>54</sup> A discharge in bankruptcy releases the bankrupt but does not release, discharge or affect any person liable for the same debt, or with the bankrupt, as partner, joint contractor, indorser, surety or otherwise;<sup>55</sup> but the bankrupt continues to be a necessary party in legal proceedings to enforce the liability of such others, because, unless he pleads the discharge, judgment can be taken against him.<sup>56</sup> A creditor is not required to collect what he can from bankrupt's estate, nor urge objections to discharge, although he may not assent to it.<sup>57</sup> The liability of such co-debtor, surety or guarantor, while it is not released by the discharge of the principal, will be released in proceedings in bankruptcy instituted by such co-debtor, surety or guarantor.

The discharge of a joint debtor does not prevent judgment for the full amount being taken against his co-debtor;<sup>58</sup> nor does the discharge of a joint judgment debtor prevent execution against the other judgment debtor;<sup>59</sup> nor interfere with the prosecution of proceedings supplementary to execution against such other.<sup>60</sup>

§ 1541. — Indorsers.

An indorser is not affected by the discharge, even if the holder of the note has proved his debt in bankruptcy against the maker for the full amount as an unsecured claim, though the holder, by so doing, releases all his right to a mortgage indemnifying the indorser;<sup>61</sup> or if the holder of an accommodation note, knowing it to be such, signs a composition;<sup>62</sup> or if the holder fails to prove the note of his own motion;<sup>63</sup> but the indorser is released if the holder of a note gives an extension of time to the principal for a valuable consideration without the indorser's assent;<sup>64</sup> or if a demand note is not presented for payment for several years.<sup>65</sup>

§ 1542. — Guarantors.

§ 1543. — Sureties on bonds.

A surety who discharges the principal's debt, does not thereby relieve the principal from liability to pay it, but he thereby becomes subrogated to the rights of the former owner of the claim.<sup>67</sup> A discharge in bankruptcy of the principal does not release, discharge or affect a surety,<sup>68</sup> unless it prevents the happening of the event on which the surety's liability depends, in which case he would never become liable rather than be released; as in bonds in attachment suits begun within four months of the bankruptcy;<sup>69</sup> but if the attachment was begun more than four months prior to bankruptcy, suit may be prosecuted to a special judgment to charge the sureties.<sup>70</sup>

A surety on an appeal bond will be released if the bankrupt's discharge can be brought to the attention of the appellate court and prevent judgment,<sup>71</sup> but not after the judgment,<sup>72</sup> or if only what was before the lower court is cognizable above.<sup>73</sup>

A surety on a bond conditioned on a surrender of the principal before a breach, will be released if no breach has occurred, though not after breach;<sup>74</sup> or on bonds in replevin when the trustee has the replevied articles, judgment being still obtainable to fix the sureties' liability.<sup>75</sup> If prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy a judgment has been rendered against a garnishee, a subsequent discharge of the principal debtor does not operate to discharge the garnishee.<sup>76</sup>

A discharge in bankruptcy releases a surety on a guardian's bond from liability for defaults of the guardian which occurred prior to the commencement of proceedings against the surety;<sup>77</sup> and the discharge of a co-surety releases him from the liability to contribute to his co-sureties.

In the absence of specific provision to the contrary, it has been uniformly held that debts due the sovereign are not released by a discharge in bankruptcy;<sup>78</sup> nor are they in any wise affected by a bankruptcy law;<sup>79</sup> consequently sureties on the bonds of public officers or other bonds to the United States are not released.<sup>80</sup>

§ 1545. Debts affected by discharge.

§ 1546. — In general.

A state court has jurisdiction to decide whether or not the debt is released by the discharge.<sup>86</sup>

Debts which by their nature are provable, with the exceptions noted in section 17, are released by a discharge in bankruptcy,<sup>87</sup> without regard to whether they could in fact be proved or not,<sup>88</sup> or whether by reason of the inadvertent giving of wrong addresses, the creditors received no notice and had no knowledge of the proceedings;<sup>89</sup> and a discharge is a complete bar to suit thereon, though the dismissal of such suit will not prejudice proof of the claim under the bankrupt law.<sup>90</sup> The operation of a discharge cannot be avoided on the ground that the debt due the creditor was not proved in the bankruptcy proceedings, but was proved in previous insolvency proceedings, where a discharge was refused.<sup>91</sup>

There is a distinction between provable and allowable debts. A debt may be provable without being allowable, since allowability implies both provability and validity. If for any reason the claim is improper or if there be a good defense to it, it is not allowable, although it may be provable.<sup>92</sup> Debts not provable are in no wise affected by the discharge.<sup>93</sup> Debts which may be proved are discussed in another chapter<sup>94</sup> to which reference should be made.

All liabilities other than those expressly excepted by the act are released.<sup>95</sup> Hence, after it is determined whether the debt is provable, it should be ascertained if it comes within either of the exceptions mentioned in this section; and, if it does not, it is released. The exceptions are therefore to be carefully examined and their scope noted.

Debts existing under the act of 1867 and kept alive by subsequent judgments, or in fact any existing judgment, are not excepted from the operation of the present act, but will be discharged.<sup>96</sup> State statutes providing for the cancellation of released judgments on the records do not affect the operation of the discharge as a release. Failure to comply with same does not revive the judgments.<sup>97</sup>

§ 1547. — Effect of proof of claim.

Until a discharge is granted, the fact that a claim is provable, or has been proved, does not prevent its enforcement by other means and a suit may be brought on a provable claim, or prosecuted to judgment, notwithstanding the pendency of bankruptcy proceedings, in which a discharge may be granted which will release it, unless stayed by the court of bankruptcy, or the court in which it is brought; and, if no discharge is granted, a suit may be brought for the balance after the distribution of the bankrupt's estate pro rata.<sup>98</sup> A creditor is not estopped from prosecuting an action on a claim not discharged in bankruptcy, by electing to prove his claim in bankruptcy, but may receive a dividend and then sue for so much as remains unsatisfied.<sup>99</sup>

A creditor whose claim is such that he may enforce it as an obligation arising on contract, or as one in tort, is not estopped, by proving his claim in the bankruptcy proceedings as one founded on contract, from recovering damages for the tort sub-

By proving his claim a creditor waives any personal exemption he may have, as being out of the jurisdiction, omitted from the proceedings and without knowledge thereof or the like.<sup>2</sup>

§ 1548. — Determination of character of debt.

Prior to the amendment of 1903 the question frequently arose as to the nature of the debt as evidenced by the judgment, and while it was frequently held that the nature of the action whether for fraud or not was determined by the record, and not by any allegation or proof outside of it,<sup>3</sup> and would be conclusive as to matters before the state court for decision,<sup>4</sup> yet if it did not appear from the judgment itself, it would be sufficient if it appeared from the record of the case, and it has been held that a judgment may always be examined into to see if the fraud is such as is mentioned.<sup>5</sup>

The character of the liability as that word is used in section 17a (2) is not changed by the fact that the liability is reduced to judgment,<sup>6</sup> and for the purpose of showing that a debt upon which a judgment is based was not discharged by the bankruptcy, the plaintiff in an action on the judgment may go behind it and show the record upon which it was based.<sup>7</sup> The cause of action does not become merged in the judgment thereon, to the extent of precluding the plaintiff from showing the nature of the original debt.<sup>8</sup>

§ 1549. — Form of action.

The form of action, tort or contract, is now immaterial and the court will look behind the form to the substance and if the debt is not within the exceptions a discharge will bar the action.<sup>9</sup> It is not necessary that an action of tort be brought on a debt created by fraud, for an action of assumpsit may be brought on the debt and if the discharge be pleaded the plaintiff may reply that the debt mentioned in the judgment was created by fraud, misrepresentation, false pretenses or the like and was therefore not released, and thus show the existence of the fraud.<sup>10</sup> The burden of proving that the debt was created by false pretenses or false representations, would be on the plaintiff in such case.<sup>11</sup>

Where one by an election of remedies abandons his claim of fraud, a debt created by fraud is released.<sup>12</sup> A discharge in bankruptcy cannot be set up as a defense in an action in trover, since the issue is one of title, and not of debt. This is true, although the defendant elects to take a money verdict for damages alleged to have been sustained.<sup>13</sup>

§ 1550. — Debts created or judgments recovered after bankruptcy.

The discharge relates back to the date of the filing of the petition, and debts contracted thereafter are not released.<sup>14</sup>

§ 1551. — Debts and taxes due the government.

In the absence of specific provision to the contrary, it has been uniformly held that debts due the sovereign are not released by a discharge in bankruptcy;<sup>17</sup> nor is it anyway bound by a bankruptcy law.<sup>18</sup> It is a general rule of interpretation that if the legislature intends to divest the sovereign power of any right, privilege, title or interest, it should so appear in express words, and where an act contains no words to express such an intent, it will be presumed that the intent does not exist.<sup>19</sup> Under the act of 1867, a claimant who gave bond for the delivery to him of property seized by the government and, on a decree in favor of the government, set up a discharge in bankruptcy, was held out released;<sup>20</sup> but under the act of 1841 a discharge was held to release a debt due the United States for customs dues.<sup>21</sup> While there is some dissimilarity between the act of 1867 and the present one with reference to the debts not affected by a discharge, and it might be argued under this general rule of interpretation, and following the decisions under the act of 1867, that debts due the United States are not released by the discharge, although the same may only be a liability as surety for the faithful performance of duty by a public officer,<sup>22</sup> yet under that equally well known maxim expressio unius est exclusio alterius, the fact that congress specifically provided that debts due the United States as a tax only, would not be discharged, would indicate that debts of all other character are released by the discharge.<sup>23</sup> Taxes due the United States, state, county, district or municipality in which the bankrupt resides are not released, but must be paid in advance of dividends to creditors.<sup>24</sup> This accords with the general rule that governmental revenues are not allowed to be tampered with lest it interfere with the performance of the important public duties with which such governing body is charged; but it should be noted that the taxes included within the exception of this section are confined to the state, county, district and municipality in which bankrupt resides. This is not to be considered, however, as limiting the general lien for taxes on property wherever situated, and which is borne out by section 64a, which makes all taxes payable in advance of dividends. Whether or not any tax or assessment in the nature of a tax is within the meaning of the word "taxes" as used in this section is to be determined by the laws imposing the same, and where, for instance, the highest court in a state has held that the "mulet tax" is not a tax though the legislature called it so in the statute, such decision must be followed.<sup>25</sup>

§ 1552. — Alimony and support.

Prior to the amendment of February 5, 1903, much diversity of opinion existed with relation to the dischargeability of alimony which had accrued prior to the filing of the petition. Some courts held that where the liability might be modified by the court which decreed the alimony, it was not released,<sup>26</sup> while others took the position that where it was fixed, certain and determined and in the nature of a judgment, it would be released.<sup>27</sup> The supreme court has held, however, that the amendment of 1903 excepting all liabilities for alimony due or to become due, or for maintenance or support of wife or child from the operation of a discharge was merely declaratory of the law as it existed theretofore, and that a liability for arrears for alimony or support was not discharged although the decree granting it could not be modified by the court rendering it.<sup>28</sup> The amendment settles all doubt and provides that alimony whether due or to become due is not released by the discharge.<sup>29</sup>

A judgment based upon a foreign judgment of divorce under which alimony is due is more than a mere money judgment, and is to be treated as an ordinary judgment for alimony.<sup>30</sup>

The provision exempting liabilities for maintenance or support of wife or child refers only to the common-law liability and liability under bonds given for such support. It does not refer to liabilities for goods purchased by the bankrupt and used by his wife or child,<sup>31</sup> or to a debt incurred for services rendered by a physician to the bankrupt's wife or children while the normal relation of husband and wife existed.<sup>32</sup>

A judgment for costs awarded a defendant in an action for slander has been held not released.<sup>46</sup>

§ 1556. — Executory contracts.—Covenants.

A discharge in bankruptcy does not affect the bankrupt's contractual liabilities beyond releasing him from personal liability for such as had accrued prior to the bankruptcy, or if the trustee deems such contract to be beneficial to the estate and assumes it, in which case he assumes liability and the bankrupt is released, but otherwise not.<sup>47</sup> The bankrupt is released by his discharge from the breach of a covenant which occurred prior to his discharge, if the same result in a provable liability,<sup>48</sup> but if he sells land prior to his bankruptcy with a covenant of title, he remains liable therein after the discharge,<sup>49</sup> but in the case where there is an unrelinquished dower right, and the husband of the person having the inchoate right of dower is living, there is no provable claim and it is not released.<sup>50</sup>

Liability under an agreement to purchase stock at a date subsequent to the adjudication is not provable and hence not discharged,<sup>51</sup> and a claim against bankrupt for refusing to deliver a certificate of its stock has been held not dischargeable, the claimant having delivered a certificate of stock to it with a request that it issue a new one.<sup>52</sup>

§ 1557. — Fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation, and defalcation.

By the act of 1898 judgments in actions for fraud or obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations were not released by the discharge. By the amendment of 1903 both the terms "judgment" and "fraud" are omitted so that unless the fraudulently contracted liability grows out of a fraud committed by the bankrupt while acting as an officer or as a fiduciary, or is a liability for obtaining property by false pretenses or false representation, it is discharged whether reduced to judgment or not.<sup>53</sup>

To bring a debt within the exception as to debts created by the bankrupt's fraud, embezzlement or defalcation while acting as an officer or in any fiduciary capacity, the fraud must be positive fraud, or fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong, and not implied fraud, or fraud in law, which may exist without bad faith or immorality;<sup>54</sup> and must occur against the party toward whom the bankrupt held the fiduciary relation,<sup>55</sup> and must exist in the creation of the debt, as subsequent fraudulent conduct is insufficient.<sup>56</sup> If the debt be created in fraud, it is immaterial, for instance, that the fraud consists in false statements by only one member of a firm, especially if the firm reaps the benefit.<sup>57</sup> If the original debt arose in contract and the fraud was but an incident of the debt and not its creative power, the debt is merged in the judgment and the bankrupt released thereafter.<sup>58</sup>

The exemption of debts created by bankrupt's fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation or defalcation while acting as an officer or in any fiduciary capacity applies only to a person who was already an officer or a fiduciary when the debt was created, and not to one created under circumstances in which trust or confidence is reposed in the debtor in the popular sense of those terms;<sup>59</sup> that is, only technical or special trusts, as contradistinguished from those which the law implies from the contract, are within the exception.<sup>60</sup> The terms "fraud," "embezzlement," "misappropriation," or "defalcation," relate and are limited to one acting as an officer or holding a fiduciary position, and it is not the defalcation only of such a person that is referred to, but it is any act of fraud, embezzlement or misappropriation as well as defalcation on his part that is not released.<sup>61</sup>

The good of the community and public policy forbid the discharge of the bankrupt from a debt incurred through fraud while acting as an officer or in a fiduciary capacity, and a debt so created, whether reduced to judgment or not, is not to be discharged in bankruptcy;<sup>62</sup> but it may be proved and dividends received on it.<sup>63</sup>

A naked bailee under an express agreement to keep safely the money bailed and pay it over on request,<sup>64</sup> or a pledgor holding goods as a bailee,<sup>65</sup> is not acting in a fiduciary capacity. So a creditor who holds collateral for his own security, is not a trustee, and, a failure to deliver it up being a breach of contract and not a breach of trust, a discharge releases the claim arising from his appropriation to his own use of such securities.<sup>66</sup>

The implied trust relation existing between partners, under which their liabilities to each other must be determined, does not bring their affairs within the definition of the excepted term "fiduciary,"<sup>67</sup> but a surviving partner, with whom his deceased partner has deposited his share of the capital of the partnership, holds such sum as a fiduciary within the meaning of the act.<sup>68</sup>

The relation between a stock broker and a customer on an open account, is not fiduciary and the former's liability for conversion of the latter's stock is released,<sup>69</sup> unless the conversion is deliberate and intentional under circumstances amounting to larceny.<sup>70</sup>

A debt is within the exception where the bankrupt while acting as agent for the creditor converted to his own use money of the creditor received as agent;<sup>71</sup> but is a debt created by an agent's failure to pay over moneys entrusted to him to loan and to receive the interest and principal of such loans and remit the same to the lender is not;<sup>72</sup> though if he takes mortgages to himself or his partner, in which latter case he caused foreclosure proceedings and purchases the property himself, it would be.<sup>73</sup> The fiduciary relation does not exist where the agent is to share in the profits, acting with the knowledge of the principal and more as a partner than an agent; or where a limited partnership is formed and one member becomes indebted to another.<sup>74</sup> A ticket agent of a railroad company is not a fiduciary and his liability for conversion of the company's money is released.<sup>75</sup>

A debt due by a bankrupt in the character of a factor or commission merchant, arising out of his failure to account for the value of goods consigned to him for sale on commission and sold by him before a demand for their return is not within the exception but will be released by a discharge;<sup>76</sup> and if such debtor is arrested under a state statute he will be released on application to the court of bankruptcy,<sup>77</sup> but a factor's liability for goods unsold at the time of a demand for their return or for the proceeds thereof if they are sold subsequent to such demand is not dischargeable.<sup>78</sup> Where a produce dealer, as an accommodation, collects moneys and without fraudulent intent deposits the proceeds with his own funds and before payment is thrown into bankruptcy, such debt is not within the exception.<sup>79</sup>

An attorney who professionally collects a debt for his client is undoubtedly acting in a fiduciary capacity;<sup>85</sup> but, if he does not act in his professional capacity, it is otherwise.<sup>86</sup>

charge,<sup>91</sup> though prior to the amendment of 1903 this was only true when such liability had been reduced to judgment.<sup>92</sup> The representation need not be in writing,<sup>93</sup> but must have been as to a fact made knowingly, falsely and fraudulently, for the purpose of obtaining money or property from another and by means of which such money or property is obtained; in which event the debt is created by means of a fraud involving moral turpitude and intentional wrong.<sup>94</sup> Thus, where one obtains goods, money or property from another with a preconceived intent of not paying for them according to the terms of the agreement, and ships them at once beyond the state or transfers them beyond his control, with the intent to defraud, the liability is one which will not be discharged,<sup>95</sup> and the same is true where one obtains advances of money or goods by false and fraudulent representations, such representations not being the sole consideration, but being material and the credit not otherwise obtained.<sup>96</sup>

To bring the statute into operation it should be made to appear that property of some kind tangible or intangible was obtained by the bankrupt. The mere fact that the liability arose in consequence of his fraud is not alone sufficient; the fraud must be followed and result in a loss of property to the creditor.<sup>97</sup> Merely obtaining goods with intent not to pay for them without any representations as to ability to pay, or representations of a fact tending to induce the sale, does not constitute fraud, and in the absence of any acts or conduct tending to avoid inquiry into financial condition, does not create a liability for obtaining property by false pretenses.<sup>98</sup> A false representation by one partner by means of which property was obtained by the partnership will be imputed to the other partners to the extent of preventing a discharge of their liability as to such debt.<sup>99</sup>

Where the representation or statement is made direct to the creditor or his agent, with the purpose and intent of influencing the creditor in extending credit, which representation or statement proves to be false, the debt is not released, though it is a doubtful question whether a statement made to a commercial agency for use of its subscribers, which is acted upon by the creditor as a basis for extending credit, would be such a representation if proven false as would warrant the court in holding that the debt was not released. While congress may have intended this to be the case, in the absence of an express statement to that effect, it is not believed that the debt would come within the exception, if the false representation consists merely that made to the agency, unless it be shown that the representation was with the purpose of obtaining the property out of which the liability grows.<sup>1</sup>

The liability of the bankrupt to a guarantor or surety whose signature to a note or bond was obtained through fraudulent representations, has been held not to be affected by the discharge.<sup>2</sup> Services rendered by an attorney are not property within the meaning of the section and a debt for such services is released by a discharge though fraudulently obtained.<sup>3</sup>

action and basis of the recovery was the willful and malicious injury to the person or property of the creditor. By the amendment of 1903, the mere liability for such injuries, whether reduced to judgment or not, are excepted. "Willful and malicious injury" does not necessarily involve hatred or ill will as a state of mind, but arises when the act producing the injury to person or property was wrongful, intentional, and done without just cause or excuse, under circumstances from which the law will imply malice.<sup>6</sup> The exception relates to torts and not to breaches of contract.<sup>7</sup>

A judgment of damages for negligence,<sup>8</sup> assault and battery, false imprisonment, or malicious prosecution, or the like,<sup>9</sup> is ordinarily released, but a judgment for forcible entry and detainer,<sup>10</sup> or a judgment or liability for false and malicious libel<sup>11</sup> is not. A judgment against the bankrupt for personal injuries inflicted by a dog owned by his tenant is released.<sup>12</sup>

A claim against a physician for malpractice is released unless the injury was willful. If willful in the sense of being intentional, the claim is not released.<sup>13</sup> A judgment for personal injury resulting from negligence of a druggist in selling a customer pure instead of diluted carbolic acid has been held not affected by the discharge.<sup>14</sup> On the other hand, a judgment in an action for death by wrongful act, has been held discharged where the death was caused either by the administration of

A deliberate and intentional conversion of stock or its proceeds under circumstances amounting to larceny thereof is a willful injury to property<sup>16</sup> as is the wrongful and fraudulent appropriation of the money of another,<sup>17</sup> and a liability therefor is not discharged.

A liability growing out of a breach of contract to marry does not come within the excepted class of "willful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another," but is released by the discharge, even though seduction be pleaded and proven.<sup>18</sup> It has been held that a judgment for alienation of affections would not be released.<sup>19</sup>

A partner is not released by a discharge from the consequence of a willful and malicious injury to the property of another by his firm, though he did not participate in the acts causing the injury.<sup>20</sup>

§ 1561. — Seduction and criminal conversation.

Under the act of 1898, considerable question arose as to whether claims of this character came within the excepted class, but in no case was it excepted unless reduced to judgment. Thus it was held that a judgment recovered by an unmarried woman for her own seduction,<sup>21</sup> or by a father for the seduction of his child,<sup>22</sup> was one for a willful and malicious injury and not discharged, and a judgment for criminal conversation was held not to be discharged.<sup>23</sup>

By the amendment of February 5, 1903, all liabilities for maintenance or support of wife or child, or for the seduction of an unmarried female or for criminal conversation, whether reduced to judgment or not, are now excepted from the effects of the discharge.<sup>24</sup> Substantial damages awarded in an action for breach of promise and seduction will be presumed to have been awarded for the seduction in the absence of a contrary showing.<sup>25</sup>

§ 1562. — Debts barred by limitations.

Since all debts provable by nature, not within the excepted classes, are released by a discharge in bankruptcy, the fact that such a debt cannot in fact be proved because barred by the statutes of limitation does not affect the question of its release.<sup>26</sup>

Revival of debt after discharge, see ante, section 1538.

§ 1564. — Rent.

Each sum of rent is a distinct debt, there being no provision in the present act for the apportionment of rent, so that, no matter how large a portion of the installment period has transpired when the petition in bankruptcy is filed, only those installments which have become due and payable at the time of such filing are provable and released by the discharge.<sup>27</sup> The obligation to pay rent is not discharged as to the future unless the trustee elects to retain the lease as an asset,<sup>28</sup> and a landlord is entitled to collect rent from the bankrupt accruing after the adjudication.<sup>29</sup> Rent as such is an incident to and grows out of

A discharge will not release a bankrupt from liability as surety where no cause of action arose until after such discharge;<sup>31</sup> nor as surety for the faithful performance of a duty as a public officer;<sup>32</sup> but, where a surety on a guardian's bond receives a discharge in bankruptcy, he is released from liability for defaults of the guardian prior to his bankruptcy;<sup>33</sup> or if one enters an appeal and becomes a bankrupt and is discharged prior to the affirmance of the judgment, his surety on the appeal is discharged in those states where the discharge can be called to the attention of the appellate court.<sup>34</sup> discharge in bankruptcy will not affect the liability of the bankrupt to his surety who, after the discharge, makes a payment to the obligee in the bond, even though there was a default, where the default occurred prior to bankruptcy.<sup>36</sup>

§ 1568. — Unliquidated damages.

The act expressly provides that unliquidated claims against the bankrupt may, pursuant to application to the court, be liquidated in such manner as it shall direct, and may thereafter be proved and allowed against his estate,<sup>37</sup> and accordingly would be released by a discharge. It is held, however, that a claim for unliquidated damages founded in tort, unaccompanied with contractual liability is not provable and therefore not discharged.<sup>38</sup>

§ 1569. — Unproved and unscheduled claims.

Under the act of 1867, if the court of bankruptcy had jurisdiction of the bankrupt and the subject matter, in the absence of fraud, the omission of a claim from the schedule, if not willful, and the consequent lack of notice to the creditor would not prevent the discharge barring such claim.<sup>39</sup> The present act expressly excepts from the discharge debts which have not been duly scheduled in time for proof and allowance, with the name of the creditor if known to the bankrupt, unless such creditor had notice or actual knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy, whether the omission be fraudulent or otherwise.<sup>40</sup> If the creditor had knowledge of the proceedings although not scheduled or scheduled under the wrong name or address, the debt will be discharged,<sup>41</sup> though if such knowledge did not come to the cred-

Extreme exactness must be used in scheduling claims according to the official forms. To warrant a release the name and address of the creditor must have been stated with sufficient exactness to reasonably insure to him notice of the proceedings.<sup>45</sup> A statement of the creditor's residence in the schedules is necessary,<sup>46</sup> the giving of his office or business address being insufficient.<sup>47</sup> Where he resides in a populous city, the name of the city and street, as well as the street number, should be given.<sup>48</sup>

out.<sup>49</sup> A debt will not be discharged where the creditor's address is stated as unknown, though actually known, if the creditor is without actual notice of the proceedings.<sup>50</sup>

The erroneous spelling of a creditor's name is sufficient to prevent a release of the creditor's claim.<sup>51</sup>

An assigned claim will be discharged though scheduled in the name of the assignor, the bankrupt having no actual notice of the assignment,<sup>52</sup> but a bankrupt who schedules the name of the original payee of a note, but fails to list the name of the transferee notwithstanding he had knowledge of the fact after transfer and knew the name of the holder, would still be liable on the note, if such transferee had no knowledge of the proceedings.<sup>53</sup> Where the creditor is a partnership and the same is dissolved by the death of one of the partners, the surviving partner may be described in the schedules as the creditor.<sup>54</sup> A judgment recovered on a partnership obligation is property scheduled as a debt against an individual bankrupt partner.<sup>55</sup>

After a discharge has been granted, the proceedings cannot be re-opened, after expiration of a year from the adjudication, to allow the bankrupt to schedule a claim which has not been discharged, and to permit the creditor to prove his claim and so obtain a discharge therefrom.<sup>60</sup>

§ 1571. — Wife's debts.

The question of the effect of the husband's discharge on the wife's debts is an interesting one and turns on the point whether he is liable for them individually, or jointly with her, or whether she alone is liable. This is a question of local law. At common law the husband, at marriage, became liable for the wife's ante-nuptial debts and such as she might contract for necessities, etc., and in such case his discharge would release such debts,<sup>62</sup> but the question was raised if they were not merely suspended and would revive on her surviving him.<sup>63</sup> Where the wife has been made responsible for her debts, she remains equally so after his discharge;<sup>64</sup> and, if they can contract directly with each other, a discharge of the husband releases debts due from him to his wife, and vice versa.<sup>65</sup> The husband's discharge will not affect the wife's liability, to have her separate estate charged in equity;<sup>66</sup> and, if the wife have separate property, a court will not release her if charged in execution because of the husband's discharge.<sup>67</sup> The bankrupt's wife cannot plead his discharge in an action for her half of community debts, where she has accepted the community.<sup>68</sup>

§ 1572. Waiver of discharge.

The discharge, as stated, merely releases the bankrupt from personal liability and must be pleaded and consequently may be waived and, if waived, cannot afterwards be relied on.<sup>69</sup>

§ 1573. Discharge must be pleaded.

A discharge must be pleaded,<sup>70</sup> and a failure so to do operates as a waiver of its benefits and renders any property in the bankrupt's possession liable to a judgment, since a court will not take judicial knowledge of a discharge, whether in a proceeding by scire facias to revive a judgment, or in an original suit.<sup>71</sup>

The question whether a judgment against one who is thereafter adjudged a bankrupt is thereby discharged is properly raised by pleading the discharge in a proceeding to enforce the judgment.<sup>72</sup> An allegation that plaintiff's claim is not one of those excepted from the effect of a discharge is a conclusion of law.<sup>73</sup>

While a discharge may be pleaded after the filing of an answer,<sup>74</sup> a delay of a year in asking for leave to plead a discharge in bar of an action commenced prior to the adjudication is sufficient cause to refuse the request, since the plea is a legal and not an equitable one.<sup>75</sup> A widow of a bankrupt to whom his property has been transferred may avail herself of his discharge and plead it in her own defense.<sup>76</sup>

A plea in abatement setting up a discharge must be sworn to,

and must set forth a copy, but, if defective, may be amended; and, if the plea is in bar, it is insufficient when the notes and bonds sued upon were given after bankruptcy.<sup>77</sup>

§ 1574. Discharge not pleadable.

Contrasted with those cases, wherein a failure to plead a discharge waives the benefits, are those where the discharge cannot be pleaded, as where it is obtained pending an appeal, and the appellate court will consider nothing but the record;<sup>78</sup> neither can it be set up by supplemental answer where an attachment issued more than four months prior to the institution of bankruptcy proceedings was dissolved by filing a bond,<sup>79</sup> nor in a creditor's suit commenced more than four months prior to the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings, and which pertains to land never brought within the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court.<sup>80</sup>

A complaint which alleges that the defendant did wrongfully and fraudulently embezzle and misappropriate the plaintiff's money, but does not allege that the defendant became possessed thereof in a fiduciary capacity, is sufficient to state a cause of action though the answer sets up a discharge in bankruptcy.<sup>81</sup>

§ 1575. Replication to plea of discharge.

A special provision having been made for the revocation of a discharge, the form, the mode of attack, and the ground of fraud coming to petitioner's knowledge after the discharge was granted and that the discharge was not warranted, are exclusive; and, on a plea of a discharge in bankruptcy in bar of an action, the replication can only deny the existence of such discharge, or the identity of the person, or one of the other grounds pleadable against the judgment of a court of record.<sup>82</sup>

§ 1576. Proof of discharge.

A certificate of discharge in bankruptcy, signed by the judge, and attested by the clerk under the seal of the court, is the means by which the bankrupt is to prove and have the benefit of his discharge; and is conclusive evidence of the jurisdiction of the court, the regularity of the proceedings, and of the fact that the order was made, but, being personal to the bankrupt, is not conclusive evidence in favor of other parties seeking to use it.<sup>84</sup> Since it is conclusive of the regularity of the proceedings, it can only be attacked in the court granting it upon proper proceedings.<sup>85</sup> Such certified copy will not be issued until the time granted for appeal has expired.<sup>86</sup>

It has been uniformly held that a contempt of court or its orders is an offense against the United States <sup>1</sup> within no limited or restricted sense, but in the general sense of a crime.<sup>2</sup> Even when a charge of contempt of court does not involve facts constituting another criminal offense, it is, nevertheless, criminal rather than civil in its nature.<sup>3</sup>

Contempt may be said to be of two classes—civil and criminal. Civil contempts are those quasi contempts which consist in failing to do that which the contemnor is ordered by the court to do for the advantage or benefit of another party to the proceeding before the court; while criminal contempts are all those acts in disrespect of the court, or of its process, or which disturb the administration of justice, or tend to bring the court in disrepute, such as disorderly conduct, insulting behavior in the presence, or immediate vicinity, of the court, or acts of violence which interrupt its proceedings, also disobedience or resistance of the process of the court, the interference with property in the custody of the law, misconduct of officers of the court, and the like.<sup>4</sup>

As was said in the case of Indianapolis Water Company v. American Strawboard Company,<sup>5</sup> that broadly considered, contempts may be classified as “direct” and “constructive.” Those which are committed within the presence of the court, while sitting judicially, or so near as to interfere with or interrupt its orderly course of procedure, are direct contempts, which are usually punished in a summary manner, without evidence, upon view and personal knowledge of the deciding judge.<sup>6</sup> Contempts are constructive when they are committed not in the presence of the court, but tend by their operation to interrupt, obstruct, embarrass, or prevent the due and orderly administration of justice. Constructive contempts may be distributed into two general classes, namely: First, those wherein the contemptuous acts primarily affect public rights or the due administration of public justice; and, second, those which primarily affect private rights, and only remotely and incidentally affect public rights or public justice. When the contempt consists in the failure or refusal of the party to do or refrain from doing something which he is ordered to do, or refrain from doing for the benefit or advantage of the opposite party, the proceeding is not criminal, but is civil and remedial in its nature. And in this sort of contempt the intention with which the act is committed is immaterial, except in fixing the proper nature of the punishment. The injury suffered by the complaining party is neither increased nor diminished, nor in anywise affected by the state of mind towards the court of the party doing the forbidden act. The breach consists in doing or failing to do the thing commanded, and not in the intention with which the act was done.<sup>7</sup> The exercise, therefore, of this power to punish for contempt, has a two-fold aspect, namely: First, the proper punishment of the guilty party for his disrespect to the court or its order; and second, to compel his performance of some act or duty required of him by the court which he refuses to perform.<sup>8</sup>

§ 1578. Jurisdiction over contempts.

The power to punish for contempt is inherent in all courts; its existence is essential to the preservation of order in judicial proceedings, and to the enforcement of the judgments, orders and writs of the courts, and consequently to the due administration of justice. The moment the courts of the United States were called into existence and invested with jurisdiction over any subject, they became possessed of this power.<sup>9</sup> The authority, however, to inflict summary punishment for contempts was subsequently limited<sup>10</sup> to the cases of misbehavior in the presence of the courts, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice, the misbehavior of any of the officers of the court in their official transactions and the disobedience or resistance by any such officer or by any party, juror, witness or other person to any lawful writ, process, rule, decree or command of the courts.<sup>11</sup>

The provisions in the present law specifically empowering courts of bankruptcy to "enforce obedience by the bankrupts, officers and other persons to all lawful orders, by a fine or imprisonment, or fine and imprisonment," and to punish persons for contempts before referees,<sup>12</sup> may be regarded as merely declaratory of the necessarily inherent powers already possessed by them,<sup>13</sup> and do not create a new or enlarged jurisdiction over contempts, nor confer a power to impose a punishment which might not rightly and lawfully be imposed on a similar state of facts by any other United States court.<sup>14</sup>

The power to punish contempts against the bankruptcy court, is vested solely in the judge. The referee has no jurisdiction.<sup>15</sup>

Unless regularly made parties to the proceedings and given proper notice, persons are not subject to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, and will not therefore be deemed guilty of contempt of its orders unless it be shown that they have notice of such proceedings.<sup>16</sup> This is particularly true of parties in proceedings in a state court.

§ 1579. Lawful order necessary.

A bankrupt cannot be adjudged in contempt where the order, writ, or process which is disobeyed is unlawful.<sup>17</sup>

§ 1580. Violation of referee's orders.

It is not to be inferred that for a wilful disobedience of a lawful order of a referee, there is no power of punishment, and that the only course is to obtain a re-enactment of the order from the judge, for a violation of which second order, a punishment may be inflicted. The statute, which places so large a part of the details of settlement of estates in the referee's hands, evidently intended his lawful orders to have the force of orders of the judge; and the courts will enforce such orders by contempt proceedings instituted directly on failure to obey them.<sup>18</sup>

The referee is included within the meaning of the word "court" as used in the act<sup>19</sup> and exercises the same power in a case before him as a court of bankruptcy except in matters relating to compositions and discharges<sup>20</sup> as to which he has authority to do only what the order referring the matter to him prescribes.<sup>21</sup> As has been well said, referees, within the scope of their authority, act in lieu of the court of bankruptcy and their orders are in effect the orders of the court and a violation of such orders will subject the offender to punishment as for a violation of an order of the court of bankruptcy.<sup>22</sup>

§ 1581. Failure to turn over property.

§ 1582. — In general.

A court of bankruptcy has power to order the bankrupt to pay over to his trustee money or other property belonging to his estate and found in his possession or control,<sup>23</sup> or in the possession of a third person holding as a mere bailee, or agent, of bankrupt,<sup>24</sup> while the amendment to the law extends this power even to the case of a third party holding property under an adverse claim. If he fails to obey such order, the court will punish him as for a contempt, but since the failure to obey may be followed by imprisonment, the power should be exercised with great caution, and before an order is made evidence should be required such as would convince an unprejudiced mind beyond a reasonable doubt that the bankrupt is able to comply therewith, if made.<sup>25</sup>

A delivery of property in the bankrupt's possession at the time of the filing of the petition to a person whom he asserts is his bailor, renders the bankrupt guilty,<sup>26</sup> but the failure to deliver property to an agent of the receiver who fails to show his authority does not establish such wilful defiance of the authority of the court as will justify a commitment for contempt.<sup>27</sup> A bankrupt may be punished for contempt for wilfully concealing assets,<sup>28</sup> or for neglecting to pay the trustee a sum described in his inventory as "cash on hand."<sup>29</sup>

An agent or bailee of the bankrupt who fails to deliver property of the bankrupt in his possession to the trustee may be adjudged guilty of contempt.<sup>30</sup> The power to punish for contempt will not, however, be used to punish for frauds committed by bankrupt against the law nor to coerce him or transferees to make restitution of money or property previously transferred in fraud of the law,<sup>31</sup> though the bankrupt's failure to turn over to the trustee property which was delivered to his wife on the eve of bankruptcy has been held to constitute contempt.<sup>32</sup>

The misappropriation and dissipation by the bankrupt of funds properly belonging to the estate, but which he has not been ordered to turn over, is not a contempt of court, within the meaning of Revised Statutes, section 725.<sup>33</sup>

§ 1583. — Ability to comply.

The bankrupt cannot be committed for contempt where he is unable to comply with the order requiring him to turn over assets to the trustee.<sup>34</sup> So, it has been held that irrespective of a constitutional prohibition against imprisonment for debt and of the fact that statutory methods for enforcing decrees for the payment of money have been provided, a failure to pay through absolute inability lacks the essential element of a contempt.<sup>35</sup> But the fact that the party is disabled from obeying the order is no defense, where such disability is the result of some voluntary act of his own.<sup>36</sup> The ability to comply with the order to turn over assets should be clearly and affirmatively established<sup>37</sup> by evidence removing all reasonable doubt.<sup>38</sup> Notwithstanding the fact that the bankrupt was in possession of a large amount of property shortly before bankruptcy and at the time of the adjudication is found with but a small amount, contempt proceedings are not justified unless the particular property claimed to be concealed is specifically pointed out.<sup>39</sup>

The property of the bankrupt estate, traced to the recent control or possession of the bankrupt, is presumed to remain there until he satisfactorily accounts for its disposition or disappearance. He cannot escape punishment for contempt by merely denying under oath that he has possession of the property.<sup>40</sup> The presumption arising from recent possession does not, however, dispense with the necessity of showing affirmatively the ability to comply.<sup>41</sup> Admissions of the receipt of property shortly before bankruptcy is admissible as a basis of calculating what should have been on hand at the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>42</sup> Testimony upon which the order to turn over was granted may also be considered in contempt proceedings.<sup>43</sup>

Upon the question whether the finding and order of the referee is conclusive as to ability to comply with the order at the time of its issuance, the decisions are at variance. In one line are the courts which hold that upon a motion to punish the bankrupt for contempt in failing to comply with an order to turn over assets the only questions are whether the order was made, whether the bankrupt has disobeyed same, and whether he has the present ability to comply with it and that the order itself, the time for review having expired, estops the bankrupt from denying his possession of the assets at the time the same was made.<sup>44</sup> In the other line are the courts which hold in substance that in proceedings against the bankrupt for contempt for failure to obey an order of the referee to turn over money or property, such order may be referred to and given the weight it is entitled to under all the circumstances, but the court should make a new and independent investigation, and should consider all material evidence relating to what preceded as well as what followed the referee's report, and, from such investigation and such evidence, determine whether the order of the referee was justified, whether the bankrupt's disobedience thereof was wilful and contumacious and whether he has the present ability to comply therewith.<sup>45</sup>

In a recent well-considered opinion of Circuit Judge McPherson,<sup>46</sup> he outlines the method of inquiring into a bankrupt's failure to account for assets, and of punishing such failure, in the third circuit, as follows:

"When the charge is made that assets have apparently not been accounted for, the referee hears and decides the dispute in the first instance. The point of time to which the inquiry is directed is the date of bankruptcy, and the precise question is whether the bankrupt was then in possession or control of money or of goods that apparently should have come into the hands of the trustee. Being fundamental, this question needs to be examined first of all, but it neither involves the bankrupt's present ability to turn over, nor raises the question whether he should be punished for contempt—except of course as the complexity of human affairs may compel an occasional approach to these allied subjects. The two questions last referred to, therefore, do not need consideration at the first stage of the investigation. If the assets that presumably should have been in the bankrupt's possession or control at the time of bankruptcy have not been accounted for, the referee may, and probably will, draw the natural inference, and direct the bankrupt to pay the money or deliver the goods, as the case may be. If this order becomes final, either by failure to have it reviewed or by affirmance in the district court, a definite step has been taken; the proper tribunal has settled beyond future controversy that the assets described were in the bankrupt's possession or control at the time of bankruptcy.

"Then next comes the question—Are they still there? Or what has become of them? This is evidently a distinct subject, which should not be confused with the order, but should be separately treated. It will need no attention unless the bankrupt should fail to comply with the order to hand over, but failure to comply makes him presumptively liable to punishment for contempt. But only presumptively; he may have a complete answer to any attempt to punish, and in any event he cannot be punished until he has been heard. In such a hearing the inquiry is directed to the bankrupt's present ability to pay the money or deliver the goods, and unquestionably he makes a sufficient answer if he shows that he is physically unable to obey the order. If it be true that he does not now possess or control the assets, he may still be liable to the criminal law, but, except for wilful disobedience of the court's command, he cannot be confined by civil process.

"The evidence produced must therefore satisfy the judge that the bankrupt is really unable to obey; and is not merely defying the order. This presents a mere question of evidence, and if the bankrupt fails to prove that he cannot comply, he is simply in the ordinary position of a suitor that has not offered enough evidence to prove a fact, and is obliged to take the consequences of such failure."

§ 1584. Interference with the estate.

The filing of the petition in bankruptcy constitutes a caveat and an injunction against any interference with the property of the bankrupt by persons having no liens thereon, title or claim thereto, and any wilful interference with the bankrupt estate, or attempt to injure it, to withdraw it from the custody of the court, or to conceal it constitutes a contempt.<sup>47</sup> So a seizure of the property under writs of replevin with knowledge of the bankruptcy proceedings,<sup>48</sup> or the taking of possession by attachment,<sup>49</sup> is a contempt. The fact that the petitioning creditor's claims are paid will not justify the taking possession of property of the bankrupt estate.<sup>50</sup> Where there was simply a threat, but no levy under a judgment of a state court nor other interference with the property, the sheriff would not be guilty of contempt.<sup>51</sup>

A landlord claiming title and preventing the removal of property from his property by the receiver in bankruptcy has been held not punishable for contempt in a summary proceeding.<sup>52</sup>

§ 1585. Disobedience of injunction.

A restraining order becomes operative upon the defendant from the time of his having notice of its issuance, regardless of the time of the formal service of notice upon him, and a violation thereof at any time thereafter is a contempt.<sup>53</sup> A creditor's failure to obey an order commanding him to stay proceedings in a state court upon his claim may be punished as a contempt.<sup>54</sup>

§ 1586. Failure to file schedules.

The bankrupt's neglect to file schedules may be punished as a contempt.<sup>55</sup>

§ 1587. Failure to produce books and records.

The court also has power to compel the production of the bankrupt's books,<sup>56</sup> or those of third parties where there is reason to believe that they will show the disposition of the bankrupt's property and affect the right of the bankrupt to a discharge which involves the exercise of a wide discretion and should not be interfered with by the appellate court unless manifestly abused, and to punish failure to obey as a contempt.<sup>57</sup> However, a lawful order to produce is a condition precedent to action committing for contempt, and an order adjudging bankrupt in contempt cannot be predicated upon an order to produce books and papers which is made without giving the bankrupt the opportunity to be heard.<sup>58</sup>

An officer of a bankrupt corporation who upon being ordered to produce papers in his possession belonging to it, is guilty of punitive contempt.<sup>59</sup> A bankrupt has been adjudged in contempt for failure to turn over checks which were returned to him upon the balancing of his bank account.<sup>60</sup>

§ 1594. Contempt of attorneys.

While an attorney may under certain circumstances be punished for contempt,<sup>71</sup> yet in the ordinary case of advice to clients, if an attorney acts in good faith and in the honest belief that his advice is well founded and in the just interests of his client, he cannot be held for error in judgment.<sup>72</sup> Nor can he be held for contempt for inducing judicial action on the part of a state court directing the receiver in bankruptcy to surrender property which has come into his possession.<sup>73</sup>

An attorney who mailed a document to his client upon being ordered to produce the same has been held not guilty of contempt where he did not intend to place the same beyond the jurisdiction of the court.<sup>74</sup>

ance of witnesses is not to be considered as changing or enlarging the power of the federal courts to compel their attendance as defined in section 876 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, but is a limitation upon pre-existing rights, so that one cannot be compelled to attend a reference in bankruptcy within the state of his residence, if at a distance of more than one hundred miles therefrom. If the testimony of such witnesses is desired it must be pursuant to section 21 of the law.<sup>78</sup>

A witness is entitled<sup>79</sup> for each day's attendance in court, or before any officer pursuant to law, to one dollar and fifty cents, and five cents a mile for going from his place of residence to the place of trial or hearing, and five cents a mile for returning. By the act of August 3, 1892,<sup>80</sup> witnesses in courts in Wyoming, Montana, Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Idaho, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and Utah are entitled to receive fifteen cents for each mile necessarily traveled over any stage line or by private conveyance and five cents for each mile over any railroad in going to and returning from said court. But no officer of a United States court is entitled to witness fees for attending before any court or commissioner where he is officiating.<sup>81</sup>

No extra allowance can be made to an expert witness, but it is a matter for private contract between the witness and the party summoning him, and such contract will not bind the court nor will it be regarded under any circumstances unless in writing and signed by the parties.<sup>82</sup> If the referee is in the state of witness' residence within a hundred miles thereof and witness has been paid his mileage and fee as stated, he will be guilty of contempt if he wilfully disobeys any lawful order, misbehaves so as to obstruct the hearing, fails to produce any pertinent document which he has been ordered to produce or refuses to appear after being subpoenaed or to take the oath after appearing or to testify after being sworn. The examinations<sup>83</sup> are for the purpose of furnishing creditors and the officers administering the estate full information as to bankrupt's assets. Contempt may be predicated upon false swearing, or upon vague, contradictory and evasive answers,<sup>88</sup> or upon a refusal to answer,<sup>89</sup> by the bankrupt or any other witness,<sup>90</sup> whether before the court or before a special commissioner.<sup>91</sup> The bankrupt cannot, however, be held in contempt for refusal to answer questions which may tend to incriminate him, regardless of whether the proceeding is voluntary or involuntary. The filing of a voluntary petition does not amount to a waiver of the bankrupt's constitutional privilege.<sup>92</sup> If the question is of such a description that the answer may or may not incriminate the bankrupt, he can refuse to answer, but if the court is convinced that the answer to the question cannot by any possibility incrim-

by other testimony, in which event the question whether the party has purged himself is to be decided upon a careful consideration of all the evidence.<sup>2</sup>

Punishment for contempt should not be used in such a way as to prevent or delay the administration of the estate, but should include means to secure a proper carrying out of the steps in the bankruptcy proceedings as speedily as possible. So, if a person is in contempt for failure to do what the act requires him to do, he should first be allowed to purge himself of the civil contempt by doing what he ought and by putting the creditors in the position they would have been in if no contempt had occurred.<sup>3</sup>

A bankrupt may purge himself of his contempt by filing his schedules even after he is fined for contempt for failure to file them.<sup>4</sup>

A defendant who has disobeyed an injunction cannot purge himself of the contempt by going into the merits of the case to determine whether the injunction was properly granted.<sup>5</sup>

§ 1600. — Powers and duties of referee and judge.

Section 41b of the act provides that "The referee shall certify the facts to the judge, if any person shall do any of the things forbidden in this section. The judge shall thereupon, in a summary manner, hear the evidence as to the acts complained of, and, if it is such as to warrant him in so doing, punish such person in the same manner and to the same extent as for a contempt committed before the court of bankruptcy, or commit such person upon the same conditions as if the doing of the forbidden act had occurred with reference to the process of, or in the presence of, the court."<sup>6</sup> The statutory procedure must be strictly followed, and any deviation therefrom may be taken advantage of on a motion to dismiss the proceedings.<sup>7</sup> The court of bankruptcy has no authority to refer the question of the commitment of a person guilty of contempt to the discretion of the referee, since the court alone is authorized to exercise the power of commitment.<sup>8</sup>

The referee cannot punish for contempt, but when committed before him, he should enter the fact on the record and then certify the facts to the judge, who is authorized to impose punishment as for similar offenses committed before a court of bankruptcy.<sup>9</sup>

The referee has the right and it is his duty to determine judicially in the first place whether a contempt has been committed, and, if he thinks not, to refuse to certify the matter for contempt proceedings before the judge. The only recourse the aggrieved party has is by petition for revision, or exceptions to the referee's report.<sup>10</sup>

For a direct contempt, that is one occurring in the presence of the court, the court may act on its own knowledge. Where a constructive contempt, not occurring in the presence of the court, but arising out of the bankrupt's failure to comply with an order of the court, it is proper to adhere substantially to the method of criminal procedure, except in the matter of a jury trial, and the attachment or rule should be like an indictment, to the extent of giving the bankrupt an opportunity to defend by informing him of the nature of the offense charged.<sup>11</sup>

In contempt cases, and especially in those which involve the charge of another criminal charge besides the contempt, the rules of evidence applicable to civil case in reference to presumptions and the shifting of the burden of proof, do not apply; but the proceedings and the rules of evidence and presumptions of law applied in criminal cases should be observed.<sup>12</sup>

§ 1601. — Proceedings against several bankrupts.

Two bankrupts may be proceeded against together.<sup>13</sup>

§ 1602. — The application.

A petition to punish the bankrupt as for contempt for disobedience of an order to turn over assets need not allege the bankrupt's present ability to comply with the order,<sup>14</sup> although it is held that a petition which contains no allegation that the bankrupt's failure to turn over property was wilful, nor anything to show that it was not caused by mere inability is insufficient.<sup>15</sup>

A petition charging that the bankrupt was guilty of perjury will not support a conviction under section 41a for refusal to be examined.<sup>16</sup>

§ 1603. — The hearing.

While proceedings in bankruptcy may be summary, they should not be so summary as to deprive the bankrupt of those fundamental rights and privileges that belong to every citizen, among which are the right to be advised of the demand made upon him, and the right after being so advised to have a reasonable time to prepare his defense and produce his witnesses; a failure to give such notice and opportunity, cannot be cured by subsequently permitting the bankrupt to introduce evidence.<sup>17</sup> A certified copy of the petition and rule to show cause should be served upon the alleged contemnor in person, and proof of service be filed with the case.<sup>18</sup>

The contempt proceedings may be commenced before the cross-examination of the bankrupt.<sup>19</sup>

in which the court exercises the powers of a special tribunal, as when acting as a court of bankruptcy, and such court has power and jurisdiction, on the petition of the trustee without a jury trial, to punish a bankrupt or others for failure to obey an order requiring him to surrender property in his possession belonging to his estate in bankruptcy,<sup>20</sup> and the like. Punishment for contempt is a summary proceeding to be dealt with by the court in the first instance without the intervention of a jury.<sup>21</sup>

The proceedings in contempt being criminal in their nature, the commission thereof must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt.<sup>22</sup> Proof may, however, be supplied by bankrupt's admissions.<sup>23</sup>

The hearing cannot be converted into an appellate proceeding to determine the correctness of orders made by the referee after a hearing on the merits,<sup>24</sup> and where the ownership and value of the property which the party has failed to turn over has been determined in another proceeding before a special master, such questions cannot be relitigated upon a motion to punish for contempt.<sup>25</sup> which leaves the question of the bankrupt's default and his consequent contempt to be determined without further action by the court <sup>28</sup> is not a judgment of contempt upon which a commitment can be based.

Where the bankrupt is under indictment in the local courts, the bankruptcy court may postpone the making of any order in the contempt proceeding until the trial of the bankrupt in the state court.<sup>29</sup>

An order allowing the bankrupt additional time to comply with an order of the referee to turn over assets is in effect an affirmance of the order of the referee, and the court by striking out the provision in the referee's order, "that in default thereof let the above-named bankrupt be committed for contempt" does not adjudicate that the bankrupt should not be punished for contempt, but leaves such a motion to be brought on at a subsequent period, if the bankrupt does not avail himself of the opportunity to pay within the extended time.<sup>30</sup>

§ 1605. — Review of order of commitment.

While the exercise of the power of punishment for contempt of their orders, by courts of general jurisdiction, was formerly not subject to review,<sup>31</sup> in some jurisdictions the power to punish has been much restricted and the right of review and appeal from such proceedings is allowed. Nor was there, in the system of federal jurisprudence, any relief against such orders, when the court had authority to make them, except through the court making the order, or by the exercise of the pardoning power. When, however, a court undertakes by its process of contempt, to impose punishment for refusal to comply with an order which it had no authority to make, the order itself, being without jurisdiction, is void, and the order of punishment is equally void. When the proceeding for contempt in such a case results in imprisonment, the proper course is to sue out a writ of habeas corpus for the discharge of the prisoner.<sup>32</sup> The inquiry cannot, however, be extended upon a writ of habeas corpus so as to review, as upon writ of error, any irregularities of the district court in the proceedings, or to determine, as upon appeal, the real merits of the case.<sup>33</sup>

A judgment for criminal contempt is not reviewable by appeal, and a judgment against a party for a civil contempt committed before the final decree is reviewable by appeal from the final decree only. If the contempt is committed after the final decree, the judgment is reviewable by appeal or petition to revise.<sup>34</sup>

An order adjudging the bankrupt in contempt based upon the findings of the referee will not be reversed by the appellate court in the absence of clear proof of error.<sup>35</sup>

§ 1606. Punishment for contempt.

The constitutions of most of the states contain limitations forbidding imprisonment for debt. While the federal constitution contains no such provision, section 990 of the Revised Statutes provides that there shall be no imprisonment for debt in any state on process issuing from a court of the United States, where, by the laws of such state imprisonment for debt has been or shall be abolished. Imprisonment for the violation of an order of a court to turn over money to a trustee, or to disclose the whereabouts of concealed property, cannot be considered as imprisonment for debt.<sup>36</sup>

The power of the bankruptcy courts to punish for contempt must be exercised according to the general principles governing contempt proceedings.<sup>37</sup> The rules governing the administration of the law of contempt laid down in Gompers v. Buck Stove Co.,<sup>38</sup> apply in bankruptcy cases.<sup>39</sup> In that decision it is said that the character and purpose of the punishment distinguish civil and criminal contempts. tempt is remedial and for the benefit of the complainant in the contempt proceedings. The punishment for a criminal contempt is punitive—to vindicate the authority of the court. If imprisonment be imposed in a civil proceeding it must be coercive in its nature. The committal must stand only unless and until the defendant performs the affirmative act required by the court's order. When inflicted in a criminal proceeding it is fixed and certain as a punishment for completed disobedience of orders or for other past wrongdoing.

When the contempt consists of a violation of the order of the court, and is not committed in its presence, and the statute does not prescribe the form of the order of commitment, the defendant may be imprisoned until he be discharged by order of court, or until further order of court,<sup>40</sup> the defendant being committed to the custody of the marshal until the fine has been paid, or the order obeyed.<sup>41</sup>

Where it appears that the bankrupt is unable to respond to an order to turn over assets, his commitment should not be continued indefinitely, regardless of the grossness of his fraud in disposing of his property, but his imprisonment should be limited according to circumstances.<sup>42</sup>

Where the refusal of a third person to answer a question is not a wilful contempt, a nominal fine only will be imposed.<sup>43</sup>

Upon a motion to punish the bankrupt for contempt for failure to file his schedules, the bankrupt should be fined a sufficient amount to compensate the attorneys for their trouble in making the motion, and if such fines do not prove sufficient to put a stop in the delay in filing the schedules, punishment by imprisonment may be imposed.<sup>44</sup>

The bankrupt cannot be sentenced to a fixed term of imprisonment as a punishment for contempt, in proceedings instituted by an attorney of the receiver in bankruptcy and not by the public prosecutor.<sup>45</sup> The certified copy of the proceedings of contempt and of the attachment is sufficient to justify not only the United States attorney in making the necessary complaint, but to authorize the issuance of a warrant of arrest by the proper officer, precisely as a certified copy of an indictment would be in any other case of crime.<sup>46</sup>

§ 1607. Discharge from imprisonment.

The bankrupt may be discharged from imprisonment for failure to turn over assets to the trustee upon showing his inability to comply with the court order.<sup>47</sup>

§ 1608. Pardon of contempts.

"When a court commits a party for a contempt, its adjudication is a conviction and the commitment in consequence is execution. After a conviction and a commitment for a contempt, the court has no more power to discharge or remit the sentence than it has in the case of a conviction and commitment for any other crime or offense against the United States."<sup>48</sup> Under the constitution the President is invested with power "to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States," and the exercise of this prerogative extends as well to cases of punishment of contempt for disobedience of lawful process of a federal court as to misbehavior in its presence.<sup>49</sup> It has been held further that a "contempt of court is an offense against the state, and not an offense against the judge personally. In such a case the state is the offended party, and it belongs to the state, acting through another department of its government, to pardon or not to pardon at its discretion the offender."<sup>50</sup> These observations apply only where the term at which the conviction was had has expired and by reason thereof the case has passed beyond the jurisdiction of the court. The term of the court of bankruptcy being considered as continuous from the commencement of a proceeding to the closing of an estate,<sup>51</sup> the court would have power and control over such matters during the pendency of the proceeding, the rule being that during the existence of the term, the court has general and full power over this as over any other kind of judgment, order or decree in either civil or criminal cases.<sup>52</sup>

The fact that a fine has been imposed as a punishment for a contempt, does not remove the case beyond the pardoning power of the President, because the amount of the fine is directed in the order imposing it to be paid to the plaintiff in the suit, towards the reimbursement of his expenses in the attachment proceedings in respect of such contempt.<sup>53</sup> If the right to the fine could be regarded as a vested private right of the plaintiff in the suit, existing in the shape of a judgment, the President might still pardon the offense and imprisonment, with the exception or saving as to the fine, in which case the fine would remain as a debt recoverable according to the appropriate legal remedies.<sup>54</sup>

§ 1609. Jurisdiction over offenses.

Courts of bankruptcy with which the circuit courts had concurrent jurisdiction prior to their abolishment,<sup>1</sup> within their respective territorial limits, have jurisdiction to arraign, try and punish bankrupts, officers and other persons, and the agents, officers, members of the board of directors or trustees, or other similar controlling bodies, of corporations for violations of this act, in accordance with the procedure of the United States now in force, or such as may hereafter be enacted, regulating trials for the alleged violation of the laws of the United States.<sup>2</sup> If the bankruptcy court obtains jurisdiction over violators of the act, it may enforce the provisions against them though they may be aliens.<sup>3</sup>

§ 1610. Exemption from prosecution.

Section 7 of the act does not exempt the bankrupt from prosecution for crimes which are disclosed by his testimony. It merely protects him from the use of his testimony in such criminal proceedings.<sup>4</sup>

§ 1611. Concealment of assets.

A person who has, while a bankrupt, or after his discharge, concealed from his trustee any of the property belonging to his estate in bankruptcy is guilty of concealment of assets.<sup>5</sup> While the act does not make it a criminal offense for a person other than the bankrupt, unconnected with him in any way, to conceal the bankrupt's property from the trustee,<sup>6</sup> it is held that an officer of a bankrupt corporation may be guilty thereof if he participated in the concealment.<sup>7</sup> The offense may be committed by a corporation.<sup>8</sup>

This offense would occur where assets are secreted, falsified or mutilated.<sup>9</sup> The provision is a penal one and cannot therefore be given a retroactive effect so that to create an offense under it the act must have been committed since July 1, 1898, the date of the passage of the law.<sup>10</sup>

A conviction cannot be upheld without adjudication as a bankrupt<sup>11</sup> but where there has been an adjudication, the same cannot be attacked collaterally.<sup>12</sup> The offense is concealing from the trustee so that, if no trustee has been appointed, there can be no offense;<sup>13</sup> but if property is afterwards discovered, the proper course is to have a trustee appointed,<sup>14</sup> and then, if the concealment continues, the offense will be committed. Demand by the trustee is not necessary, but the offense is complete when the schedule is filed.<sup>15</sup> It must be knowingly and fraudulently done;<sup>16</sup> and, if due to a mistake either in law or fact, it does not constitute the offense,<sup>17</sup> nor where property is omitted because deemed worthless or because after acquired,<sup>18</sup> or because it was not known at the time that a substantial interest existed in the property concealed;<sup>19</sup> or where the property was incumbered for more than it was worth.<sup>20</sup> The mere omission through ignorance or otherwise, to turn over property, or put it in the schedules is not an offense,<sup>21</sup> and it is not sufficient to constitute the offense that the bankrupt collects money due him at the time of the filing of the petition and applies the same to the payment of a debt, if such payment is honestly made, even though the result of such payment is to advantage a creditor.<sup>22</sup> But it is no defense that the bankrupt at the time of concealing his property did not know of the appointment of the trustee or the latter's identity.<sup>23</sup>

To constitute the offense the bankrupt must have a present interest in the property, and, if previously to the bankruptcy proceedings he has actually conveyed it away so that between him and the grantee the title has actually passed; though the conveyance might be set aside by creditors or a trustee in bankruptcy, such transfer not being merely colorable or on a secret trust for bankrupt's benefit, his failure to include it would not constitute the offense.<sup>24</sup>

A concealment prior to filing of petition continuing thereafter is sufficient to constitute the offense.<sup>25</sup> So, the intentional and fraudulent omission of property previously conveyed in fraud of creditors, whether such conveyance was prior or subsequent to the bankruptcy act, where there is a secret trust for bankrupt's benefit, is a violation of the act, because the concealment is a continuing act and is perpetuated whenever the bankrupt's duty to reveal such assets exists and is knowingly disregarded and concealment may be effected by concealment of the title as well as by hiding the property, and it is not necessary that bankrupt himself should be able to recover it, if his creditors or trustee can do so.<sup>26</sup> Also where property was concealed from the receiver of a state court and was not subsequently turned over to the trustee in bankruptcy;<sup>27</sup> or where there is a large shortage in the bankrupt's assets, or a disappearance of some, which bankrupt fails to satisfactorily explain;<sup>28</sup> but mere inability to give a satisfactory explanation will not make it so.<sup>29</sup> The omission of property conveyed by bankrupt to his wife for the purpose of covering it up is an offense under this provision;<sup>30</sup> but it is not for an attorney at law to omit listing contracts for contingent fees unearned;<sup>31</sup> and whether or not failure to list an interest in remainder under a will constitutes the offense depends upon whether the interest can be subjected to the claims of creditors in any way.<sup>32</sup> It is no excuse for the bankrupt to say that he omitted property from his schedules on the ground that he would be entitled to such property as an exemption.<sup>33</sup>

The amount or value of the property concealed is immaterial.<sup>34</sup> The bankrupt is none the less guilty of concealing assets because the facts and circumstances relating to the fraudulent transfer were made known to the trustee on bankrupt's examination, the essence of the offense being the placing of the property out of the trustee's reach by the bankrupt with intent to retain it for himself.<sup>35</sup>

The filing of amended schedules giving a full statement of property including that which was originally omitted, or assisting the trustee in obtaining possession of property not originally scheduled, while evidence tending to show the absence of an unlawful intent, is not a conclusive answer to a charge of concealment, and should not be considered as avoiding the consequences of the unlawful act.<sup>36</sup> The wilful and fraudulent omission by bankrupt of part of his assets from his schedules may be cause for prosecution under the act, but it is not an infamous crime as the term is used at common law and in the fifth amendment to the constitution.<sup>37</sup>

§ 1612. False oath or account.

The act expressly makes it an offense to make a false oath or account in, or in relation to any proceeding in bankruptcy.<sup>39</sup> The offense may be committed by persons other than the bankrupt.<sup>40</sup>

The same rule as to the time of making the oath applies as was stated in the preceding section of this chapter as to the concealing of assets, that is, it must have been after the passage of the act of July 1, 1898. A false oath is a wilful, deliberate, intentional falsehood; or statement of something that the person making it knows or should know is untrue, or recklessly makes, without knowing whether it is true or not,<sup>41</sup> or without having reasonable grounds for believing it to be true, in regard to a material matter;<sup>42</sup> and may be in any part of the bankruptcy proceedings,<sup>43</sup> but it must be all material to the proceedings in bankruptcy, and have some relation to the bankrupt's estate or his acts affecting his estate and be knowingly and fraudulently made.<sup>44</sup> Thus the offense is committed in making a pauper affidavit when bankrupt lives in affluence and the entire circumstance shows that he has the control of money;<sup>45</sup> or where he False oath includes the commission of perjury in the making of schedules, or on an examination. In re Adams, 171 Fed. 599, 22 A. B. R. 613.

Indictment may be predicated upon false swearing at an examination before a special commissioner prior to the adjudication. United States v. Liberman, 176 Fed. 161, 23 A. B. R. 734.

An indictment for perjury may be predicated upon false swearing by the bankrupt in an examination to determine the validity of a creditor's claim. United States v. Simon, 146 Fed. 89, 17 A. B. R. 41.

False oath in proceedings for a discharge is an offense. Edelstein v. United States, 149 Fed. 636, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 236, 17 A. B. R. 649; In re Kretsch, 172 Fed. 523, 22 A. B. R. 284.

states in his schedule that all of his property was turned over to a state receiver, which was not true.<sup>46</sup>

The verification of schedules from which valuable property is knowingly omitted or which contains a false statement constitutes a false oath, if the omission was with fraudulent intent;<sup>47</sup> thus it would constitute a false oath for the bankrupt to state in his schedules that he has paid nothing to his attorneys for their services and had assigned no property, when he had given them an order for money due for services, but not yet payable, in payment of a past indebtedness to such attorneys;<sup>48</sup> or when he states that an indebtedness is a bona fide loan when the facts and circumstances fail to carry it out;<sup>49</sup> or where he is called upon to explain the disposition of money drawn by him from his business and adopted a method of accounting which enabled him to avoid an explanation of what he did with a large sum;<sup>50</sup> or where he produces a false and inaccurate statement of expenditures for the purpose of making a good showing as to the disposition of a sum of money.<sup>51</sup> A false oath as to the ownership of property is an offense and will prevent a discharge even though the property cannot be administered in the proceeding.<sup>52</sup>

Wherever the offense of concealing property from the trustee is committed by its omission from the schedules, or failure to disclose it on examination, there will also be a false oath; but there may be omission from the schedules which will make the oath to them false but will not constitute knowingly and fraudulently concealing property from the trustee.<sup>53</sup> A bankrupt is not guilty of making a false oath when he omits from his sworn schedule securities which are absolutely worthless,<sup>54</sup> and the omission from bankrupt's schedules of stock held by his wife which was purchased with money borrowed by her would not make the oath a false one, merely because he was employed as manager of the corporation whose stock she held;<sup>55</sup> and, where by agreement between counsel certain testimony given by bankrupt in another proceeding and claimed to be partly false was made part of the record, but bankrupt was not sworn, there is no false oath in relation to any proceeding in bankruptcy.<sup>56</sup>

The finding of a special master that the bankrupt did not commit perjury has been sustained even though the testimony was exceedingly suspicious.<sup>57</sup> Evidence that books which the bankrupt swore were destroyed by fire on a given date were in his possession several weeks after the date of the fire is sufficient to show the commission of the offense.<sup>58</sup>

The immunity afforded by section 7 subdivision 9, is no bar to a prosecution for perjury in giving testimony under the command of that section.<sup>59</sup>

The failure of the petition in bankruptcy to allege that the bankrupts were not excepted from the provisions of the act,<sup>60</sup> or the filing of an amended schedule or assisting the trustee in obtaining possession of property not originally scheduled,<sup>61</sup> cannot be set up as a defense to a prosecution for false oath.

§ 1613. Subornation of perjury.

One who suborns another to make a false oath in bankruptcy proceedings may be punished under section 5393 of the Revised Statutes.<sup>62</sup>

§ 1614. Advice of counsel as a defense.

property before his attorney, and received advice that it is not such an asset as should properly be scheduled in bankruptcy, such advice, however erroneous, tends to deprive a "concealment of assets" or a "false oath" of the elements of "wilfulness and fraud," and, in case of a false oath, a conviction of perjury could not be maintained, and the offense under this provision would not be committed; but such advice must have been given in good faith.<sup>63</sup>

§ 1615. Presentment of false claim.

The presentment under oath of a false claim for proof against the estate of a bankrupt, or the use of such claim in composition personally or by agent, proxy, or attorney, or as agent, proxy, or attorney is expressly made an offense.<sup>64</sup>

§ 1616. Receiving property from bankrupt.

The act expressly defines the offense to be "receiving any material amount of property from a bankrupt after the filing of the petition, with intent to defeat this act;" and hence the receipt of money from a bankrupt prior to the filing of the petition, no matter what the amount or how clear the intent to defeat the act, is not an offense under the act; though the trustee may recover it by proper proceedings.<sup>65</sup> Where a bankrupt transfers mortgaged property to a mortgagee after the filing of a petition and before control is taken for the benefit of the estate, both the bankrupt and the mortgagee would be liable to punishment.<sup>66</sup>

§ 1617. Buying off opposition to discharge.

The purchase of a claim for the purpose of preventing or reducing opposition to a discharge is not an offense.<sup>67</sup>

§ 1619. Conspiracy.

Although section 29b requires as a principal offender a bankrupt, it is applicable not only to the bankrupt, but also to all persons who unite with the bankrupt as participants in the act which is made an offense.<sup>70</sup> A conspiracy to conceal property from the trustee may exist prior to the appointment of the trustee or the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, in which case it is punishable under section 5440 of the Revised Statutes which makes it an offense for two or more persons to conspire to commit an offense against the United States.<sup>71</sup> A corporation may be guilty of conspiring to conceal assets.<sup>72</sup> The fact that the bankrupt is not indicted is no defense to a prosecution for conspiracy.<sup>73</sup>

the affairs of, and the papers and records of, estates in his charge by parties in interest when directed by the court so to do."

Section 39b of the act provides that, "Referees shall not (1) act in cases in which they are directly or indirectly interested; (2) practice as attorneys and counselors at law in any bankruptcy proceedings; or (3) purchase, directly or indirectly, any property of an estate in bankruptcy."<sup>74</sup>

Violations of any of these provisions, or a refusal to permit a reasonable opportunity for an inspection of the accounts and papers relating to estates by parties in interest may be tried by district courts,<sup>75</sup> and, upon conviction, the referee becomes liable to a fine and the forfeiture of his office.<sup>76</sup>

§ 1621. Offenses by trustee.

Section 29a of the act provides that "A person shall be punished, by imprisonment for a period not to exceed five years, upon conviction of the offense of having knowingly and fraudulently appropriated to his own use, embezzled, spent, or unlawfully transferred any property or secreted or destroyed any document belonging to a bankrupt estate which came into his charge as trustee." This provision is for the punishment of the trustee if he knowingly and fraudulently appropriates to his own use, embezzles, spends or unlawfully transfers any property or secretes or destroys any document belonging to a bankrupt estate which comes into his charge as such trustee, and has no reference to the bankrupt nor to anyone else.<sup>77</sup> In the event the trustee misappropriates funds, he cannot be compelled to testify, if he refuses to answer upon the ground that his answer may incriminate him.<sup>78</sup>

74—Analogous provision of act of 1867. "Sec. 3. . . . That he will not, during his continuance in office, be, directly or indirectly, interested in or benefited by the fees or emoluments arising from any suit or matter pending in bankruptcy, in either the district or circuit court in his district.

"Sec. 4. . . . No register shall be of counsel or attorney, either in or out of court, in any suit or matter pending in bankruptcy in either the circuit or district court of his district, nor in an appeal therefrom, nor shall he be executor, administrator, guardian, commissioner, appraiser, divider, or assignee of or upon any estate within the jurisdiction of either of said courts of bankruptcy, nor be interested in the fees or emoluments arising from either of said trusts."

§ 1622. Limitations upon prosecutions.

Section 29d is absolutely prohibitive to the prosecution for an offense arising under the law, unless the indictment is found or the information is filed within one year after its commission, and such time can under no condition be extended.<sup>79</sup> The section is, however, inapplicable to a prosecution for conspiring to commit an offense under the bankruptcy act.<sup>80</sup> In case of concealment of assets the limitations commence to run from the time that a demand is made for the property thought to be concealed,<sup>81</sup> though it is held that the statute begins to run from the time of the commission of the overt acts amounting to concealment, and that mere silence and passivity on the part of the bankrupt after the alleged concealment does not make the offense a continuing one so as to stay the running of the statute.<sup>82</sup>

§ 1623. Evidence before grand jury.

The use in evidence before the grand jury of the pleadings in the bankruptcy proceedings<sup>83</sup> or the taking of the bankrupt's books by the receiver and their use before the grand jury in procuring an indictment against him<sup>84</sup> or the production of books of the bankrupt, transferred to the trustee in accordance with section 70 of the act, before the grand jury,<sup>85</sup> is not improper and is no bar to a prosecution. The use of the schedules of the bankrupt by the grand jury in determining whether to indict or not has been held a violation of section 7a (9) and to constitute grounds for the dismissal of the indictment.<sup>86</sup>

§ 1624. Indictment or information.

Offenses under the act may be prosecuted on information or indictment.<sup>87</sup> The indictment should aver scienter and all essential facts necessary to constitute the offense as defined in the act,<sup>88</sup> clearly and explicitly.<sup>89</sup>

The indictment is not insufficient because it fails to state what tribunal appointed the trustee named in it, or that the person appointed accepted the appointment, or gave bond, or ever qualified.<sup>90</sup>

The particular mode of concealment need not be alleged<sup>91</sup> and where the evidence is wholly circumstantial it has been held unnecessary to aver the precise details of the act of concealment.<sup>92</sup>

A concealment from the trustee after his appointment and a failure to deliver over to him upon demand any property which the bankrupt may have in his possession is an offense as of any date the concealment continues and may be charged as such in the indictment.<sup>93</sup> No allegations of ownership save that the property belonged to the estate in bankruptcy is necessary.<sup>94</sup> A charge that the accused did unlawfully, knowingly, wilfully and fraudulently conceal certain property from his trustee is sufficient without a further averment that the accused knew the property belonged to the estate.<sup>95</sup>

While the omission of the words "knowingly and fraudulently" in an indictment charging a conspiracy to conceal assets is fatal on demurrer,<sup>96</sup> the words "unlawfully, knowingly and fraudulently" sufficiently charge wrongful intent, and the omission of the word "wilful" is not fatal.<sup>97</sup> A conspiracy to conceal property from the trustee may exist prior to the appointment of the trustee. Hence it is not necessary that an indictment charging such conspiracy should allege the appointment of a trustee.<sup>98</sup>

An indictment against the president of a corporation for causing it to conceal assets need not allege that the corporation was one capable of being adjudged a bankrupt under section 4b, in order to show the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court.<sup>99</sup>

An indictment charging the bankrupt with perjury under section 29b for having falsely omitted from his schedule certain of his property, must not alone allege that his deposition in that regard was false, but also that he had other property which was omitted, and which should be described, since the indictment should not alone set forth the substance of the offense, but there should be proper averments to falsify the matter wherein the perjury is assigned.<sup>1</sup> When the allegations of the indictment show the materiality of the alleged false statements, an allegation that such statements were material is superfluous.<sup>2</sup>

An indictment for perjury under section 5392 of the Revised Statutes must allege that the alleged false oath was taken wilfully.<sup>3</sup> An indictment charging a conspiracy to give false oaths which fails to state what false oaths were to be given or what the subject of the false oaths was with reasonable particularity is insufficient.<sup>4</sup>

§ 1625. Disqualification of judge.

§ 1626. Jury trials.

The act provides that alleged offenses may be submitted to a jury according to the laws of the United States at the time of its passage, or such as might thereafter be enacted in relation to trials by jury.<sup>6</sup>

§ 1627. Presumptions and burden of proof.

The burden is upon the prosecution to show the concealment of assets beyond a reasonable doubt.<sup>7</sup> Proof of the concealment of any part of the property charged to have been concealed will warrant a conviction.<sup>8</sup> Where the property alleged to have been concealed was conveyed by the bankrupt by warranty deed the presumption is that the bankrupt acted legally and in good faith in making the conveyance.<sup>9</sup>

§ 1628. Evidence at the trial.

The judge may exclude evidence of facts which, though relevant to the issue, are too remote to be material.<sup>10</sup> The concealment of assets or the existence of a conspiracy to conceal assets may be proved by circumstantial evidence.<sup>11</sup>

Statements of an alleged perjurer other than those claimed to have been false as are necessary to make the charge intelligible may be introduced in evidence.<sup>12</sup>

Section 7, clause 9, of the act provides that no testimony given by the bankrupt shall be offered in evidence against him in any criminal proceeding. The examination before the referee cannot be used by the prosecuting attorney in his cross examination of the bankrupt for the purpose of impeaching him.<sup>13</sup> Testimony of the trustee that he had never learned from the bankrupt that there was property belonging to him at a certain place is not objectionable as an attempt, by indirect method, to disclose the bankrupt's testimony before the referee.<sup>14</sup> It is held, however, that testimony of the bankrupt in parts of his examination other than that made the basis of the charge may be given in evidence.<sup>15</sup> The immunity found in section 7 (9) does not prevent the use of the defendant's testimony in the bankruptcy proceedings from being used against him in a prosecution for false swearing,<sup>16</sup> but testimony given in one bankruptcy proceeding, not tending to establish perjury in that proceeding, cannot be used to establish perjury in subsequent bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>17</sup>

Books of the bankrupt in possession of the receiver,<sup>18</sup> as well as books transferred to the trustee in accordance with section 70 of the act,<sup>19</sup> are admissible in a prosecution for concealment of assets or for conspiring to conceal assets. Testimony of an expert accountant based upon an examination of books which the bankrupt has delivered to his trustee is not inadmissible against him under section 7 (9).<sup>20</sup>

§ 1629. Penalties.

The penalty for false swearing is controlled by section 29 of the bankruptcy act, and not by the section 5392 of the Revised Statutes; but the fact that bankrupt, found guilty of false swearing, is sentenced under section 5392 and a punishment in excess of that provided for by the bankruptcy act is imposed does not involve an entire failure of prosecution, and in such case the appellate court may remand the cause with instructions to impose sentence under the bankruptcy act.<sup>25</sup>

In any case in which the imprisonment is claimed to be in contravention of the act, the same remedy by habeas corpus may be pursued in addition to any other remedies, as in other cases of unlawful imprisonment, in which case the usual practice in habeas corpus cases will govern.

§ 1631. Modes of appeal provided exclusive.

Three methods of review are provided by the bankruptcy act,
(1) a review in matter of law of all orders in bankruptcy except those provided for in the second method;<sup>1</sup> (2) an appeal in case of orders adjudging or refusing to adjudge bankrupt; granting or denying a discharge, which is held to include granting or refusing an order confirming a composition;<sup>2</sup> or allowing or rejecting a claim of $500 or over; and (3) an appeal in the usual way in controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>3</sup>

As to questions arising in the bankruptcy proceedings proper the modes of review specifically provided by the bankruptcy act are exclusive.<sup>4</sup>

Provisions in the act for appeal and for review on petition are mutually exclusive, and the revisory jurisdiction does not include any orders or decrees which are appealable or reviewable upon writ of error and vice versa.<sup>5</sup>

§ 1632. Petition to revise and appeal in same case.

An appeal may be taken and a petition to revise filed in the same case.<sup>6</sup> This practice has been frequently followed due to the confusion as to the proper form of proceeding to employ.

Where a case before the appellate court on appeal and petition for review, is heard on the appeal, the petition will be dismissed.<sup>7</sup>

§ 1633. Appeals in bankruptcy proceedings proper.*§ 1634. — In general.

Section 25a of the act provides that appeals, as in equity cases, may be taken in bankruptcy proceedings from the courts of bankruptcy to the circuit court of appeals of the United States, (1) from a judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt; (2) from a judgment granting or denying a discharge, and (3) from a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of five hundred dollars or over.<sup>8</sup>

This section applies to "bankruptcy proceedings" as such,<sup>9</sup> as appears from the specification of the cases from which it provides an appeal, and supplements the preceding provision,<sup>10</sup>

8—Analogous provisions of Act of 1867. "Sec. 8. . . . That appeals may be taken from the district to the circuit courts in all cases in equity, and writs of error may be allowed to said circuit courts from said district courts in cases at law under the jurisdiction created by this act, when the debt or damages claimed amount to more than five hundred dollars, and any supposed creditor, whose claim is wholly or in part rejected, or an assignee who is dissatisfied with the allowance of a claim may appeal from a decision of the district court to the circuit court from the same district, but no appeal shall be allowed in any case from the district to the circuit court unless it is claimed, and notice given thereof to the clerk of the district court, to be entered with the record of the proceedings, and also to the assignee or creditor, as the case may be, or to the defeated party in equity, within ten days after the entry of the decree or decision appealed from. The appeal shall be entered at the term of the circuit court which shall be first held within and for the district next after the expiration of ten days from the time of claiming the same. But if the appellant in writing waives his appeal before any decision thereon, proceedings may be had in the district court as if no appeal had been taken; and no appeal shall be allowed unless the appellant at the time of claiming the same shall give bond in man[ner] now required by law in cases of such appeals. No writ of error shall be allowed unless the party claiming it shall comply with the statutes regulating the granting of such writs. . . .

Sec. 24. That a supposed creditor who takes an appeal to the circuit court from the decision of the district court, rejecting his claim in whole or in part, shall, upon entering his appeal in the circuit court, file in the clerk's office thereof a statement in writing of his claim, setting forth the same, substantially, as in a declaration for the same cause of action at law, and the assignee shall plead or answer thereto in like manner, and like proceedings shall thereupon be had in the pleadings, trial, and determination of the cause, as in action at law commenced and prosecuted in the usual manner, in the courts of the United States, except that no execution shall be awarded against the assignee for the amount of a debt found due to the creditor. The final judgment of the court shall be conclusive."

which provides for the summary review in the matter of law of all other orders if the district courts in "bankruptcy proceedings" as such; while section 25 is confined to "appeals as in equity cases" and covers both fact and law.<sup>11</sup> "Controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings," that is, between the trustee on one side and a stranger to the proceedings on the other, are to be reviewed in the same manner and under the same rules as other cases in the United States courts.<sup>12</sup>

§ 1635. — From whose decisions.

It should be observed that an appeal is confined to the decisions of the courts of bankruptcy. If the purpose is to secure a review of a referee's decision, the question must be certified to the judge and the appeal taken from the latter's action.

§ 1636. — Appealable cases.

An appeal lies from the district court to the circuit courts of appeal from orders adjudging a person a bankrupt;<sup>13</sup> or from an order dismissing a petition for failure to allege facts sufficient to constitute an act of bankruptcy since such order is a judgment refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt;<sup>14</sup> but an order or judgment refusing to set aside an adjudication<sup>15</sup> or an order adjudging a person not adjudicated a member of an adjudicated partnership<sup>16</sup> is not appealable. A judgment granting or denying a discharge is appealable,<sup>17</sup> as is, ordinarily, an order refusing or confirming a composition, since it is the equivalent of an order of discharge.<sup>18</sup> But while the confirmation of a composition always has the effect of discharging the bankrupt, thereby giving the opposing creditors the right to appeal, an order refusing to confirm a composition on the ground that it is not for the best interests of the creditors is not a bar to a subsequent discharge and is therefore not appealable.<sup>19</sup> An order dismissing an application for discharge is reviewable by appeal,<sup>20</sup> but whether an order refusing to revoke a discharge is appealable is questionable.<sup>21</sup> An order overruling the objections made to a discharge by certain creditors is not appealable, such order not being final.<sup>22</sup>

An appeal lies from a judgment allowing or disallowing a claim of five hundred dollars or over,<sup>23</sup> notwithstanding it also settles the priority of such claim, which latter could be the subject of review;<sup>24</sup> and includes as an incident the question of the receipt of a preference which should first be surrendered,<sup>25</sup> or the question as to the rank or lien of such claim in the distribution of the estate, at least where such question is one of controverted fact and law.<sup>26</sup>

The presentation for allowance of a demand against a bankrupt's estate is a step in bankruptcy proceedings as to which appeal is specially provided by section 25. If both a demand and a lien be presented at the same time the procedure for the former dominates, the lien goes along as an incident, and the double presentation is also regarded as a step in the bankruptcy proceeding.<sup>27</sup>

The provision restricting the right of appeal to judgments allowing or rejecting claims of over $500 has been held to refer not to the amount of the original claim, but to the amount of the allowance or rejection,<sup>28</sup> but such holding seems to be contrary to the express provision of the act. In those cases in which the amount to authorize an appeal is in controversy, it may be shown by affidavit and need not appear in the pleadings.<sup>29</sup>

An order of the district court upon reconsideration of a claim which operates to restore and allow the claim as originally proved is appealable under section 25a.<sup>30</sup> A ruling made in the course of the determination of an issue as to alleged bankruptcy upon a subordinate issue as to whether petitioning creditors held "provable" claims is not a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt within the meaning of the section.<sup>31</sup>

Whether a claim which represents expenses and costs of administration is "a debt or claim" within 25a is doubtful,<sup>32</sup> but section 25a has been held not to include an appeal from an order denying allowance of attorney's fees and expenses incurred in contesting claims,<sup>33</sup> or from an order denying priority to the claim of attorney for fees.<sup>34</sup> On the other hand, the allowance of an attorney's fee included in the claim of a mortgaged creditor, who proves his claim as a secured one;<sup>35</sup> or to petitioning creditors in an involuntary case<sup>36</sup> has been held appealable.

The rejection of claims against the receiver is within the discretion of the court, and no appeal lies therefrom.<sup>37</sup>

Section 25a has no reference to independent suits to assert title to property or money as assets of the bankrupt against strangers to the proceedings,<sup>38</sup> or to summary proceedings to compel the turning over of assets,<sup>39</sup> or to an order to distribute a fund derived from the recovery and sale of property fraudulently conveyed by the bankrupt,<sup>40</sup> or to an interlocutory order reversing a ruling of the referee made during the bankrupt's examination, refusing to require him to produce his books;<sup>41</sup> or to an order requiring the bankrupt summarily to do certain acts, his remedy seeming to have been to refuse to do the acts and, on contempt proceedings against him, to take proper steps for their review;<sup>42</sup> or to orders or decrees in proceedings for the sale and disposition of the bankrupt's property,<sup>43</sup> or to any judgment rendered or order made by a court of bankruptcy in the administration of an estate, except the particular judgments enumerated in this section. An appeal would not lie from a judgment entered on a petition of intervention filed by a claimant of property in the hands of a trustee declaring the ownership of the intervener, and ordering restitution of the property, such judgment not being one allowing a claim within the meaning of the statutes; the "debt or claim of $500 or over" would seem to mean a moneyed demand, the same as debt, and was used not to enlarge but to render certain.<sup>44</sup>

The section does not authorize an appeal from a decree refusing to require the trustee to account for the rental value of property,<sup>45</sup> or from an order denying partnership creditors the right to participate in the individual assets of a bankrupt partner until the individual partners have been paid.<sup>46</sup>

No appeal lies from an order appointing a receiver, but where a receiver is appointed by the same order which adjudicated the bankrupt, and such order is reversed and set aside upon the appeal, the appointment of the receiver falls with it.<sup>47</sup> When the judgment is upon the verdict of a jury it cannot be reviewed under an appeal as in an equity case, but only by writ of error.<sup>48</sup>

The general rule that any party in interest adversely affected by an appealable decision may appeal applies,<sup>49</sup> but, in its application, it must be remembered that the trustee represents the bankrupt, the estate and the creditors—the bankrupt to see that his estate is administered so as to pay his creditors as far as possible; the estate to see that it is all realized and administered to the best advantage and the creditors to enforce their rights. In the adjudication, the bankrupt and the creditors are the interested parties and creditors appearing in opposition to an involuntary petition as well as the bankrupt and petitioning creditors may appeal if the decision is adverse to their interests. If the act of bankruptcy alleged is a voluntary general assignment, the assignee may intervene and, if necessary, appeal.<sup>50</sup> Parties interested in rulings made prior to an order of dismissal may appeal from such order and thereby review the previous rulings.<sup>51</sup> The fact that contempt proceedings are pending against the officers of the bankrupt corporation does not affect the right to a review of an order adjudicating the corporation a bankrupt.<sup>52</sup>

In the granting or denying of a discharge the trustee is not interested, it being a personal privilege of the bankrupt, and so the parties in interest are the opposing creditors and the bankrupt. In the allowance of claims, all, trustee, bankrupt and creditors, are interested, though to allow each if dissatisfied to appeal, would be to multiply appeals and allow fractious creditors to delay the proceedings, and the appeal must be taken in such case by the trustee, or, if he refuses, or fails to act, the bankruptcy court may, on its own motion, if doubtful of its decision, order him to appeal, or may make such order an application of a dissatisfied party, or, in its discretion, allow such party to appeal in the name of the trustee.<sup>53</sup>

In rejecting a claim only the particular creditor whose claim it is can appeal. It should be observed that to be appealable the order must be one allowing or rejecting a claim of $500 or over; so that, if the claim amounts to as much as $500, the order allowing or rejecting it will be appealable irrespective of the fact that it may be partially allowed. Such a case would be appealable by those entitled to appeal from an allowance and the party entitled to appeal from a rejection.

In an appeal by the trustee from an order allowing claims for expenses and costs of administration, he represents merely the general creditors of the estate, and the claimants are entitled to notice of the appeal and an opportunity to be heard.<sup>54</sup>

All parties concerned or interested in the appeal should be made parties,<sup>55</sup> and upon an appeal from a decree denying adjudication, the original petitioners, as well as the intervening petitioners must either join in the appeal or be severed therefrom.<sup>56</sup> While the general rule that parties against whom a joint judgment is rendered must unite in an appeal is applicable to appeals in bankruptcy proceedings,<sup>57</sup> it applies only to a joint judgment or decree against such parties. It has no application to separate judgments or decrees against such parties, though rendered at the same time and contained in the same entry.<sup>58</sup>

The fact that one was an indispensable party in the lower court does not make him an indispensable party to the appeal.<sup>59</sup> A trustee in bankruptcy who obtains possession of a fund concerning which litigation is pending and who is made a party to the suit is not a necessary party to an appeal from a judgment therein.<sup>60</sup>

adverse to him upon questions suggested by the assignment, or by an assignment of cross-errors, nor can he be heard on such questions. He may only be heard in support of the order, decree or judgment below. Mere assertion of error in an appellee's brief does not give the circuit court of appeals jurisdiction to review alleged error against an appellee. To review such alleged errors a cross-appeal is necessary.<sup>61</sup>

An appeal brings up the whole case and cannot be made to turn upon errors in rulings made upon the trial of a feigned issue.<sup>62</sup> Questions of fact as well as law will be decided.<sup>63</sup> While all rulings made in the proceedings are reviewable upon an appeal from a final order therein, though not appealable in themselves,<sup>64</sup> an appeal cannot be used to give a party a second trial; but only to re-examine and revise the rulings and decree.<sup>65</sup> While a ruling of the lower court which is assigned as error but which is not argued either orally or in brief will ordinarily be deemed abandoned,<sup>66</sup> the appellate court, sua sponte, will take notice of the want of jurisdiction of the lower court if the same appears by the record, and will in such case reverse a decree though the parties fail to suggest the want of jurisdiction in the bankruptcy court.<sup>67</sup>

Where the appeal is from a judgment allowing or disallowing a debt, any question of lien or priority of the debt, if allowed, may be considered upon the appeal as an incident of the debt;<sup>68</sup> but the action of the district court in allowing or disallowing a claim will not be reversed merely to preserve the claimant's intend and revise in matter of law the proceedings of the courts of bankruptcy within their jurisdiction; and by section 25a with jurisdiction of appeals from judgments adjudging or refusing to adjudge the debtor a bankrupt, from judgments granting or denying a discharge, and from judgments allowing or rejecting claims of five hundred dollars or over. A comparison of sections 23, 24 and 25 will show that section 23 clearly indicates a distinction between "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings," and "proceedings in bankruptcy;" that section 24a provides for appeals in the former and section 25a in the latter. Section 25a leaves appeals in "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings" to be determined by the general provisions of the statutes, under section 24a.<sup>75</sup> The classification of matters in bankruptcy as "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings" and "proceedings in bankruptcy," has, in actual application, caused much confusion. There is, however, a clear distinction between the two phrases, the former being generally held to embrace questions between the trustee, representing the bankrupt and his creditors, on the one side, and adverse claimants on the other, and not directly affecting those administrative orders and judgments ordinarily known as "proceedings in bankruptcy," and the latter being confined to those questions between the bankrupt and his creditors which are the very subject of such administrative orders and judgments, from the petition for an adjudication to the settlement of the estate and including the intermediate administrative steps, and such controversies as arise between parties to the bankruptcy proceedings as are involved in the allowance of claims, fixing their priorities, sales, allowances, and other matters to be disposed of summarily.<sup>76</sup> This distinction is emphasized by the provisions of section 23a, providing limitations of the circuit courts [now district courts] in controversies at law and in equity between trustees in bankruptcy, as such, and adverse claimants concerning the property acquired or claimed by the trustee.<sup>77</sup> The right of appeal under section 24a may therefore be said to be limited to separable controversies in reference to the title, possession or distribution of the estates of bankrupts which may be rendered in the course of the proceedings<sup>78</sup> in the courts of bankruptcy, which here means only the district courts, and not to the rulings or action of either referee or trustee.

In determining the question of the remedy, as between review and appeal, the object and character of the proceeding as determined by the nature of the right involved and the issues raised,<sup>79</sup> and not by the circumstance as to which party is actor and which is defendant,<sup>80</sup> must govern.

A judgment upon an adverse claim is appealable regardless of whether the trustee instituted the proceedings or whether the claimant<sup>3</sup> intervened, but the denial of a right to intervene in a bankruptcy proceeding, not being a final order or decree, is not appealable.<sup>4</sup>

An order allowing expenses incurred by the trustee for counsel fees in the realization of assets<sup>5</sup> or surcharging the account of the trustee<sup>6</sup> is not appealable. An order or judgment refusing to set aside an adjudication is not appealable under section 24a.<sup>7</sup> The provision in section 25a limiting appeals to decisions on a claim of $500 or over does not apply to appeals under section 24a.<sup>8</sup>

§ 1642. — Scope of review.

Appeals under section 24a are governed by the provisions of the general judiciary act.<sup>9</sup> The appeal opens up the whole case as in other equity appeals, and both the law and the facts are open for consideration.<sup>10</sup> So, on an appeal from an interlocutory decree granting an injunction, the court may review the whole of the decree, not merely the part granting the injunction, and determine whether there was an insuperable objection, in point of jurisdiction or merits, to the maintenance of the suit, and if there is it may direct a final decree dismissing the bill.<sup>11</sup>

Where the district court upon retrial of a case has placed a different value on property decreed to be paid to the trustee, than that fixed at the former trial the appellate court will examine the evidence on appeal although the same is conflicting.<sup>12</sup>

§ 1643. Writs of error to circuit court of appeals.

Review of final orders under section 24a may be had upon writ of error or appeal, depending upon whether the proceeding in the lower court was at law or in equity, and with the difference in practice that under writ of error only questions of law can be considered, while on appeal the review may extend to the consideration of questions of fact. In a proceeding partaking of an equitable form as interventions in the bankruptcy court usually do, appeal is a proper remedy, even though the questions at issue are such as can be considered in a court of law. But when review is desired only on one or more legal questions arising under such proceeding in intervention, a writ of error is appropriate for the purpose. When the proceeding is at law, writ of error is proper although the form of proceeding is not one recognized at common law.<sup>13</sup>

If in any "proceeding in bankruptcy" a trial by jury be had under section 19 of the act, a review in the circuit court of appeals cannot be had under section 24b or 25a because those sections confer only jurisdiction in equity and not jurisdiction at law; and a review cannot be had under section 24a because that section relates exclusively to "controversies" as distinguished from "proceedings" in bankruptcy. If a review lies, it must come by writ of error under section 128 of the Judicial Code of 1911.<sup>14</sup> So, in an appeal from a judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt in which a jury trial was not had or demanded, but the court of bankruptcy proceeded on its own findings of fact, both the facts and law are re-examinable on appeal, while if the judgment is entered on the verdict of a jury, the issue of facts is concluded and the judgment is reviewable for errors of law only; in the latter case errors in instructions given or refused or in the admission or rejection of evidence must appear by exceptions duly taken and preserved by bill of exceptions.<sup>15</sup> The question whether the petition alleged an act of bankruptcy against the alleged bankrupt does not go to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court is reviewable upon writ of error.<sup>16</sup> A judgment in a proceeding to punish for contempt for violation of an injunction of the bankruptcy court is reviewable by writ of error.<sup>17</sup> An appeal and a writ of error may be taken to review the same adjudication.<sup>18</sup>

Writs of error must issue in the name of the President of the United States, and be attested by the chief justice of the supreme court and the clerk of the circuit court. Any defect in the writ in this regard, however, is amendable.<sup>19</sup> The citation issued upon a writ of error should contain the names of all persons joining in applying for the writ.<sup>20</sup>

§ 1644. Mandamus.

An order adjudicating a person a bankrupt is not reviewable by mandamus.<sup>21</sup> The propriety of the appointment of a receiver and the effect of the dismissal of the proceedings upon the receivership are judicial questions to be determined primarily by the bankruptcy court and are not reviewable by mandamus.<sup>22</sup> An application for mandamus will be denied where a petition for revision has been filed in the time and no further relief is therefore necessary to preserve the rights of the petitioner.<sup>23</sup>

§ 1645. Time for appeal.

No time is fixed by section 24a for an appeal under its provisions, and an appeal thereunder must be allowed by the judge of the court appealed from or a judge of the court appealed to, within six months, the period of limitation fixed for appeals by the judiciary code.<sup>24</sup> The provisions of section 25a of the bankruptcy act relate only to cases specifically mentioned in the section, and have no application to appeals in independent proceedings instituted for the recovery of assets of the estate or to set aside alleged preferences,<sup>25</sup> or to an appeal from an order or judgment refusing to set aside an adjudication.<sup>26</sup>

The time limit for a review by appeal or writ of error under section 24a begins to run from the time of the entry of the judgment, decree or order.<sup>27</sup>

An appeal from an interlocutory order or decree granting, continuing, refusing, dissolving or refusing to dissolve an injunction, or appointing a receiver, must be taken within thirty days from the entry of such order or decree.<sup>28</sup>

An appeal under section 25a must be taken within ten days. Unless so taken and all the statutory requirements complied with, the appellate court will be without jurisdiction;<sup>29</sup> but it has been held that a court may, in its discretion, overlook a breach of its own rules;<sup>30</sup> and, where the failure to appeal in time was due to a mistake of the remedy, the lower court may grant a review of the decision, from which an appeal is desired, so that an appeal may be in time,<sup>31</sup> even though the lower court is satisfied with its original decision on the merits and is unwilling to grant a rehearing in order to give these merits further consideration.<sup>32</sup>

The citation and bond are not jurisdictional prerequisites and an appeal is in time where the petition for appeal is filed within ten days though the citation and bond are not filed until after expiration of ten days.<sup>33</sup> So, when an appeal has been allowed by the taking of security within the statutory time, and the transcript of the record has been filed and the case has been docketed at the proper term, the failure to issue a citation within the time prescribed for an appeal is not ground for the dismissal of an appeal.<sup>34</sup> Where, however, appellant, within ten days after the adjudication, prayed an appeal, which was allowed, and filed a bond, but the petition for the appeal, its allowance, and the citation and service thereon were not filed in the district court until after the expiration of the ten days, the appeal was not in time and should be dismissed.<sup>35</sup>

Section 31 of the act, like the similar section in the act of 1867, adopts the general rule followed in computing time. In the event the last day falls on Sunday or a holiday and is succeeded by a holiday or a Sunday, the next day thereafter which is not a legal holiday would be included. In computing the time within which an act must be done, holidays or Sundays occurring within the term are to be counted, unless expressly excluded or the last day falls on Sunday or a holiday.<sup>36</sup>

Whether the time limit begins to run from the date of the decision or from the date of the entry of the judgment is not settled<sup>37</sup> though it is held that a judgment allowing or rejecting a claim is presumptively rendered at the date of its filing with the clerk, and that the ten days would begin to run from that time.<sup>38</sup> Where a motion for a rehearing is filed within the time allowed for an appeal the time limit for an appeal or writ of error does not begin to run until the motion is disposed of.<sup>39</sup> The court cannot, however, extend the time for appeal,<sup>40</sup> and a rehearing should not be granted for the purpose of reviving the right to appeal unless the facts clearly warrant it.<sup>41</sup> Nor can the time be extended indirectly by the entry of an alias adjudication<sup>42</sup> or a motion to set aside the order of adjudication made after the expiration of the time allowed for an appeal.<sup>43</sup> While it is an abuse of the court's discretion to set aside an order disallowing a claim for the sole purpose of granting an appeal,<sup>44</sup> yet, an order disallowing a claim is within the discretion of the court, and it may, in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion, set it aside after the expiration of 10 days and thereby revive the right to appeal.<sup>45</sup> When the bankruptcy court in a controversy between the trustee and a creditor has rendered a decision adverse to the trustee and he has lost his right of appeal without culpable neglect, the court may grant a rehearing for the purpose of reviving such right.<sup>46</sup> While it has been held that if a circuit or district court permits the filing of a petition for rehearing during the term at which the order sought to be reviewed was entered,<sup>47</sup> it retains jurisdiction to act on it at the succeeding term, and the time for appeal does not begin to run until action is taken on the petition,<sup>48</sup> such decisions seem to overlook the fact that in the bankruptcy court the term is continuous from the commencing of a proceeding to the closing of an estate.<sup>49</sup>

§ 1646. Procedure in taking appeals.

The appellant must present a petition praying the appeal accompanied by an assignment of errors, without which the judgment will be affirmed,<sup>50</sup> and, if by others than the trustee, an appeal bond, to the judge of the court of bankruptcy or circuit court of appeals. It should be presented to the judge of the court of bankruptcy first, and, in case of his refusal to allow it, to the judge of the circuit court of appeals. This is the usual course and the higher judge, unless there was reason for not having presented it to the lower, would exact this requirement. Upon the allowance of the appeal and the approval of the bond, indorsed on it usually, the papers with the citation, with evidence of service on the adverse party,<sup>51</sup> should be filed in the clerk's office of the court of bankruptcy, which must be done within ten days after the order appealed from or the appeal will be dismissed.<sup>52</sup> Where the record is incomplete, the appellees should suggest to the court the defect complained of and apply for a certiorari to send up the missing matter.<sup>53</sup> If the papers are regular and the judge applied to refuses to allow the appeal, he may be compelled to do so by mandamus.<sup>54</sup> The assignment of errors must ordinarily be filed within the time allowed for an appeal,<sup>55</sup> though where the appeal is allowed upon condition that the petitioner give a bond, the assignment of errors need not be filed until such bond is approved.<sup>56</sup> In proceedings by appeal and by writ of error to review the same rulings the filing of a single assignment of errors is sufficient.<sup>57</sup> While an appeal may be dismissed because of the generality of the assignment of errors, the court may allow an amendment and retain the case when the special circumstances justify it, and the application is promptly made.<sup>58</sup>

A bill of exceptions is unnecessary, for the proceeding in bankruptcy being a proceeding in equity, the appeal makes the entire record available to the appellant, and imposes the duty upon him, and upon the clerk of the lower court, to place the material parts of it in the transcript sent to the appellate court.<sup>59</sup> The practice and requirements upon appeals are substantially the same as in other cases, and the record required to be certified and filed is the record of the case in the bankruptcy court, not § 1647. Appeal bonds.

A bond running only to the original petitioning creditors has been held sufficient.<sup>71</sup> The trustee as beneficial owner of a bond given upon appeal from the adjudication and made payable to certain creditors of the bankrupt may sue thereon, but <sup>72</sup> the complaint in such suit must allege that the trustee is the beneficial owner, and should show the manner in which he became such.<sup>73</sup>

Section 25c of the act provides that trustees shall not be required to give bond when they take appeals or sue out writs of error. This section applies to supersedeas as well as cost bonds.<sup>74</sup>

The taking of an appeal deprives the lower court of jurisdiction to further consider matters involved in the appeal,<sup>75</sup> but without a supersedeas an appeal to the circuit court of appeals does not suspend the execution of an order of the bankruptcy court nor stop its enforcement.<sup>76</sup>

Upon reversal of an order refusing the bankrupt his discharge the court may merely reverse the decree of the lower court leaving the question of a discharge to a new inquiry, or reverse it with instructions to grant the discharge.<sup>77</sup> The lower court cannot in any way limit the effect of a judgment or order of the circuit court of appeals on affirmance of an order of the lower court. It is bound to obey the mandate of the court of appeals and carry it into effect without any limitation whatever.<sup>78</sup>

By the intervention of a term of the appellate court between the allowance of an appeal and the issuance of the citation, if citation is not waived, the appeal becomes inoperative.<sup>79</sup>

§ 1649. Rehearing in circuit court of appeals.

The fact that the circuit court of appeals erroneously exercised jurisdiction under an appeal does not render the judgment void, but merely erroneous. The error may be corrected by a timely application to that court upon a petition to rehear or by resort to some appellate procedure for the correction of the error.<sup>80</sup> A petition to rehear should ordinarily be filed within thirty days after the filing of the opinion but a petition has been allowed after such time where the point upon which the rehearing was asked was a reversal of the authority upon which the opinion was based after the time for a petition to rehear, but before the court had lost jurisdiction by the expiration of the term.<sup>81</sup>

§ 1650. Revision of bankruptcy proceedings.

§ 1651. — In general.

Section 24b of the bankruptcy act provides that "the several circuit courts of appeal shall have jurisdiction in equity, either interlocutory or final, to superintend and revise in matter of law the proceedings of the several inferior courts of bankruptcy within their jurisdiction."<sup>82</sup>

By this provision, the jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeals is limited to the review in matters of law of some action taken or order made in the course of a bankruptcy proceeding for which an appeal is not provided, and, if an appeal is provided, that is exclusive, but then both law and fact are reviewed.<sup>83</sup> The "proceedings" reviewable are those adminis-

It has been held that the circuit court of appeals of the Eighth Circuit has no

trative orders and decrees in the ordinary course of a bankruptcy proceeding between the filing of the petition and the final settlement of the estate, which are not made specially appealable under sections 24a or 25b, the provision not being intended as a substitute for the right of appeal upon controverted questions of fact under sections 24a and 25a.<sup>84</sup> It is held, however, that the circuit court of appeals will not on its own motion decline jurisdiction, of a controversy brought up by petition to revise which should properly have come up on appeal;<sup>85</sup> and conversely an order appealed from has been treated as before the court of appeals by petition for revision where no objection was made and no questions of fact were involved,<sup>86</sup> though the true rule, in view of the recent decision of the supreme court,<sup>87</sup> that the provisions for an appeal under section 25a and those for review under section 24b are mutually exclusive, would seem to be that where an appeal has been erroneously taken it cannot be treated as a petition for review.<sup>88</sup>

An order is subject to review though made in chambers.<sup>89</sup>

To have a referee's decision reviewed, it should be certified to a judge of the district court, and his decision first taken.

§ 1652. — What may be reviewed.

This provision is limited to proceedings already had and contemplates a summary review of the orders of the bankruptcy

The court of appeals of the eighth circuit has held that an order dismissing a petition for failure to allege facts sufficient to constitute an act of bankruptcy is reviewable under section 24b as well as appealable under section 25a,<sup>96</sup> but its holding is contrary to the decision of the supreme court, which holds the two sections mutually exclusive and not cumulative.<sup>97</sup>

A finding that an alleged creditor has a provable claim entitling him to be a petitioning creditor is reviewable,<sup>98</sup> as is a decision as to the priority of a claim not amounting to $500, the validity not being disputed;<sup>99</sup> setting off a usury judgment against claims;<sup>1</sup> or setting aside the allowance of a secured claim and requiring the surrender of a preferential payment;<sup>2</sup> or denying partnership creditors the right to participate in the individual assets of a bankrupt partner until the individual partners have been paid.<sup>3</sup>

The circuit court of appeals has jurisdiction to review the decision of the district court, exercising ancillary jurisdiction in bankruptcy proceedings, that it has no jurisdiction to determine adverse claims.<sup>4</sup> It is only when the jurisdiction of the lower court as a federal court is in issue that the supreme court has exclusive jurisdiction to entertain a writ of error or an appeal.<sup>5</sup>

made upon petition of the trustee<sup>49</sup> nor can a decree setting aside or sustaining a conveyance made by the bankrupt,<sup>50</sup> or an interlocutory decree in a plenary suit brought in the bankruptcy court by the trustee under section 67e,<sup>51</sup> or a proceeding to punish for contempt one who has violated an injunction of the bankruptcy court in a collateral matter<sup>52</sup> be reviewed upon petition. The propriety of an order directing the bankrupt to turn over property to the trustee cannot be questioned upon a petition to review an order adjudging the bankrupt guilty of contempt.<sup>53</sup>

A specific provision<sup>54</sup> having been made for appeal from a judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge a bankrupt, granting or denying a discharge or allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of $500 or over, the courts are not at liberty to disregard the distinction and only non-appealable orders can be reviewed under this provision;<sup>55</sup> which was also the view under the former act;<sup>56</sup> but the present act is mandatory as to the revision while the former was permissive.<sup>57</sup> Accordingly a review of an order allowing or rejecting a claim exceeding $500<sup>58</sup> cannot be had under section 24b though the trustee admits the validity of the claim and contests only its validity as a lien upon the bankrupt's property<sup>59</sup> since the proper procedure is by appeal.

§ 1654. — Time for presenting petition.

While neither the statute nor the rules limit the time within which a petition for review should be filed,<sup>63</sup> it should be within a reasonable time depending upon the circumstances of each case.<sup>64</sup> The better practice is to fix it at six months, by analogy to the time allowed by the statute for taking appeals to the circuit court of appeals in other cases.<sup>65</sup> A petition to revise an order setting aside a sale of the bankrupt's property and ordering a resale need not be presented until after the resale has been made and confirmed.<sup>66</sup>

Rule 38 of the second circuit limits the time to ten days, unless an order of the bankruptcy court enlarging the time is granted within the ten days,<sup>67</sup> but an order extending the time for the filing of the petition to revise is improper if made nunc pro tunc after the expiration of the time allowed by the rules for the filing of such petition.<sup>68</sup> A stipulation that two petitions to revise be printed in one appeal book is not a waiver of the failure to file within the ten days allowed.<sup>69</sup>

§ 1655. — Practice.

It is expressly provided that the power of revision shall be exercised "on due notice and petition by the party aggrieved."<sup>70</sup> The circuit court of appeals cannot revise the proceedings of the district court in bankruptcy without an issue made and presented by parties who have a substantial interest in the controversy, and who can suitably represent it, or at least without a proper opportunity being given therefor, and where the creditor against whom the petition for review was filed has been paid, and has therefore no longer any interest in the controversy, the court will not proceed further until other creditors, having an interest, are brought in or given an opportunity to come in by notice properly served.<sup>71</sup> Reasonable notice should be given to the adverse party; but where the record contains everything that was done it may contain more than is necessary, but is certainly sufficient, and notice given in open court in the presence of all the parties and their attorneys at the very instant the judgment sought to be revised was announced is due notice.<sup>72</sup> A petition for revision should not be dismissed for lack of proper parties, where the parties referred to were not parties to the proceedings below.<sup>73</sup>

While it has been held that the petition may be presented and allowed by a judge of a court of bankruptcy,<sup>74</sup> or any one of the judges of the circuit courts of appeals, the better practice is to present it to the latter.<sup>75</sup>

The petition should state specifically the question of law which was involved and was ruled upon by the court below, and should be accompanied by a certified copy of so much of the record as will exhibit the manner in which the question arose and its determination,<sup>76</sup> and the question of law so presented is the only question which will be decided.<sup>77</sup> An informal memorandum filed by the judge in connection with an order made by him forms no part of the record,<sup>78</sup> and a mere opinion of the district court not specially made a part of the record does not take the place of a finding of facts, although it may be referred to to ascertain what propositions of law governed the court in making its decision, or to determine whether the case went off on facts or law.<sup>79</sup>

The clerk of the district court, who is also the clerk of the bankruptcy court, is the only person authorized to certify to the appellate court the proceedings had in the bankruptcy court, either on appeal or on a petition to revise.<sup>80</sup> The appellee, in support of the decision of the lower court, may rely upon any ground disclosed by the record even though it may not have been the ground upon which the decision was based.<sup>81</sup>

§ 1656. — Dismissal, affirmance or reversal.

A petition to revise will be dismissed where the parties elect to stand upon an appeal.<sup>82</sup> Where the record upon motion to dismiss a petition to revise, covers substantially the entire case the court may not only deny the motion to dismiss, but may deny the petition.<sup>83</sup> On the other hand, the appellate court may render a decision on the merits though the petitioner has filed his consent that the petition to revise be dismissed.<sup>84</sup>

A revisory petition may be dismissed without prejudice to such further proceedings in the district court as that court may consider proper.<sup>85</sup> Ordinarily a case erroneously brought up should be dismissed unless such action would leave a decree entered in a case over which the court had no jurisdiction, when it may be remanded with directions to dismiss.<sup>86</sup> The petition will be dismissed where it presents merely a moot question, as where the property to which the appellant asserts the right to a lien has been sold by the receiver in bankruptcy since the entry of the order of the lower court denying the petition asserting the lien.<sup>87</sup>

Where an order of the district court is reversed and the case remanded, the district court cannot amend its original order to conform with the opinion of the circuit court of appeals since the same is annulled by the reversal.<sup>88</sup>

It should be borne in mind that the power to review does not confer original jurisdiction over bankruptcy proceedings as such and the decree, if affirmed, remains the decree of the lower court, to be carried out by it.<sup>89</sup> Upon a petition to revise the circuit court of appeals has no power to make any orders requiring certain acts of the trustee<sup>90</sup> though it has been held that the circuit court of appeals sits as a court of bankruptcy on a peti-

§ 1657. The Supreme Court of the United States.

§ 1658. — Statutory provisions as to appeals generally.<sup>92</sup>

The judicial code of 1911,<sup>93</sup> re-enacting in part the act of March 3, 1891,<sup>94</sup> establishing the circuit courts of appeals, except as amended,<sup>94a</sup> fixes the appellate jurisdiction of the United States courts. Appeals or writs of error may be taken from the district courts direct to the supreme court in any case in which the jurisdiction of the court is in issue, in which case only the question of jurisdiction shall be certified;<sup>95</sup> in any case that involves the construction or application of the constitution of the United States;<sup>96</sup> or in which the constitutionality of any law of the United States, or the validity or construction of any treaty made under its authority, is drawn in question; or in which the constitution or a law of a state is claimed to be in contravention 92—The following statutory provisions have particular reference to the jurisdiction of the supreme court:

U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 687-710, 5261.

The Act of April 7, 1874, c. 80 (1 Supp. R. S. 7), which provides that the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court over judgments and decrees of territorial courts, in cases of trial by jury, shall be by writ of error, and in other cases by appeal, etc.

The Act of Feb. 16, 1875, c. 77, § 1 (1 Supp. R. S. 62, 63), limits the review of the supreme court of decrees of circuit courts in admiralty cases to questions of law arising on findings of fact to be made in such cases by circuit courts.

The Act of March 3, 1885, c. 353 (1 Supp. R. S. 485), provides for an appeal to the supreme court in cases of habeas corpus.

The Act of March 3, 1885, c. 353 (1 Supp. R. S. 485), regulates appeals from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia and the territories.

The Act of Aug. 13, 1888, c. 866, §§ 1, 6 (1 Supp. R. S. 613, 614), takes away the right of review by the supreme court of orders of circuit courts remanding causes to state courts.

The Act of Feb. 25, 1889, c. 266 (1 Supp. R. S. 650), provides for writs of error or appeals to the supreme court in cases involving the question of the jurisdiction of circuit courts.

The Act of March 3, 1891 (1 Supp. R. S. 901), creating the circuit courts of appeals.

of the constitution of the United States,<sup>97</sup> in which three latter cases the supreme court passes on the whole case,<sup>98</sup> and under any of which a controversy in bankruptcy proceedings may arise.

Where the jurisdiction of the district court is in issue, an appeal may be taken to the supreme court on the question of jurisdiction or to the circuit court of appeals on the merits, but appellant will be bound by his election,<sup>99</sup> but after an appeal to the circuit court of appeals in a case involving the construction of the constitution of the United States, the case may be taken to the supreme court.<sup>1</sup>

The supreme court is also expressly vested with appellate jurisdiction "of controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings, from the court of bankruptcy, from which it has appellate jurisdiction in other cases; and shall exercise a like jurisdiction from the courts of bankruptcy not within any organized circuit of the United States and from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."<sup>2</sup>

Prior to the amendment of January 28, 1915, an appeal could be taken to the supreme court "from any final decision of a court of appeals allowing or rejecting a claim under the laws relating to bankruptcy, under such rules and within such time as were prescribed by the supreme court, in the following cases and no other: First. Where the amount in controversy exceeded the sum of two thousand dollars, and the question involved was one which might have been taken on appeal or writ of error from the highest court of a state to the Supreme Court of the United States; or Second. Where some justice of the Supreme Court of the United States shall certify that in his opinion the determination of the question involved in the allowance or rejection of such claim was essential to a uniform construction of the laws relating to bankruptcy throughout the United States."<sup>3</sup>

§ 1659. — What constitutes matter or amount in controversy.

Under the law as it existed prior to the amendment of January 28, 1915, the amount in controversy was a material question. As to what constitutes "matter in controversy" or "matter in dispute," the supreme court has long since definitely stated the law. Chief Justice Taney, in Barry v. Mercein,<sup>5</sup> states that matter in controversy, under section 22 of the judiciary act of 1891, must be "money or some right, the value of which, in money, can be calculated and ascertained. . . . The words of the act of congress are plain and unambiguous. They give the right of revision in those cases only where the rights of property are concerned, and where the matter in dispute has a known and certain value, which can be proved and calculated, in the ordinary mode of business transactions. . . . It is the same in judgments in criminal cases, although the liberty or life of the party may depend on the decision of the circuit court." Chief Justice Marshall, in passing upon this same question in Gordon v. Ogden,<sup>6</sup> said: "The jurisdiction of the court has been supposed to depend on the sum or the value of the matter in dispute in this court, not on that which was in dispute in the circuit court. If the writ of error be brought by the plaintiff below, then the sum which his declaration shows to be due may be still recovered, should the judgment for a smaller sum be reversed; and consequently the whole sum claimed is still in dispute. But if the writ of error be brought by the defendant in the original action, the judgment of this court can only affirm that of the circuit court, and consequently the matter in dispute cannot exceed the amount of that judgment. Nothing but that judgment is in dispute between the parties." The same view is laid down in Kanouse v. Martin,<sup>7</sup> wherein it is held that: "The settled rule is, that until some further judicial proceedings have taken place, showing upon the record that the sum demanded in the declaration is not the matter in dispute, that sum is the matter in dispute."

§ 1660. — Appeals from the highest court of a state.

As the trustee is authorized to sue in the state courts and must do so in many cases, the provisions as to the review of such cases by the Supreme Court of the United States<sup>8</sup> are important. The Supreme Court may re-examine on writ of error the final judgment or decree in any suit in the highest court of a state, in which a decision in the suit could be had, where is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States, and the decision is against their validity; or where is drawn in question the validity of a statute, or an authority exercised under any state, on the ground of their being repugnant to the constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States, and the decision is in favor of their validity. A ruling of the state court involving a construction of the bankruptcy act is reviewable by the supreme court where the construction contended for but not adopted would have defeated the jurisdiction of the state court.<sup>9</sup> Only questions of law can be examined;<sup>10</sup> and the amount involved is immaterial, but there must have been a final judgment or decree in the lower court;<sup>11</sup> that is, there must not be any judicial question undetermined.<sup>12</sup>

If either party claims a right, title, privilege or immunity under the United States or the constitution, laws or treaties thereof, he must plead it;<sup>13</sup> and the attention of the state court must have been directed to it in time for consideration before deciding the case.<sup>14</sup> It is not sufficient to raise such question

The direction of a verdict by the state court in an action by the trustees in bankruptcy to recover alleged assets of the bankrupt estate raises a question of law as to whether the evidence was sufficient to require a submission of the case to the jury. Rector v. City Deposit Bank Co., 200 U. S. 405, 15 A. B. R. 336.

first on a motion for a new trial or petition for rehearing,<sup>15</sup> except in a statutory proceeding requiring no answer and where the defense could not be made earlier,<sup>16</sup> but the points may be made on trial.<sup>17</sup>

The decision of the state court will not be reviewed if it can be supported on some other ground, though a federal question was passed upon;<sup>18</sup> nor unless there was an adverse decision on the federal question;<sup>19</sup> or the federal question was directly involved.<sup>20</sup> If there are several federal questions and the state court considered only one, the supreme court will not consider the others,<sup>21</sup> but will affirm the judgment unless the question was decided erroneously.<sup>22</sup>

The fact that in determining the right to exemptions, a state court accepts the judgment of the bankruptcy court in the matter does not make the decision of the former court appealable to the supreme court.<sup>23</sup>

An action brought by the trustee in bankruptcy to recover what is alleged to be an asset of the estate presents a federal question, and a judgment rendered therein is appealable,<sup>24</sup> and, a judgment of a state supreme court in an action by the trustee to recover a preference deciding the right to avoid a preference under the state law has been held appealable.<sup>25</sup>

Where the defendant in a suit in a state court set up the issuance of an injunction against the prosecution of the suit by the bankruptcy court, he thereby sets up a right claimed under a judgment of a court of the United States, the denial of which lays the foundation for a review by the supreme court. This right to review cannot, in such case, be defeated by a finding of the state court that the bankruptcy court has exceeded or ended its jurisdiction.<sup>26</sup>

§ 1661. — Appeals in bankruptcy proceedings proper.

Section 25b of the bankruptcy act, which is practically identical with section 252 of the judicial code of 1911, provides that "From any final decision of a court of appeals, allowing or rejecting a claim under this act, an appeal may be had under such rules and within such time as may be prescribed by the Supreme Court of the United States, in the following cases and no other:

1. Where the amount in controversy<sup>27</sup> exceeds the sum of two thousand dollars, and the question involved is one which might have been taken on appeal<sup>28</sup> or writ of error from the highest court of a state to the Supreme Court of the United States; or

2. Where some justice of the supreme court of the United States shall certify that in his opinion the determination of the question or questions involved in the allowance or rejection of such claim is essential to a uniform construction of this act throughout the United States."<sup>29</sup>

This section of the statute has been superseded by a recent 27—Note the different phraseology here: "exceeds the sum of two thousand dollars." The amount in controversy would not, under this provision, suffice if just $2,000.

28—The use of the word "appeal" in reference to the removal of cases from the highest court of a state to the supreme court was probably a slip, as such cases are taken to the supreme court by writ of error only (U. S. Rev. Stat., § 109; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680); and only when there is an adverse decision on a federal question on which the decision rests.

29—It will be observed that if the case comes under this subdivision, there is no specified amount required.

Analogous provision of Act of 1867. "Sec. 9. . . . That in cases arising under this act no appeal or writ of error shall be allowed in any case from the circuit courts to the Supreme Court of the United States, unless the matter in dispute in such case shall exceed two thousand dollars."

amendment by which all judgments and decrees of the circuit courts of appeals in all proceedings and causes arising under the bankruptcy act are made final and subject to review by certiorari only.<sup>29a</sup> It may, however, be of value to note the decisions prior to the change in the law.

An appeal under section 25b was allowed only in cases coming under clause 3 of section 25a, and then only from the final decision, i. e., one that could not be further affected by action in the circuit court of appeals.<sup>30</sup>

A ruling made in the course of the determination of an issue as to alleged bankruptcy upon a subordinate issue as to whether the petitioning creditors held "provable" claims is not a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt within the meaning of section 25a, and a decision by the circuit court of appeals upon such a ruling is not a final decision allowing or rejecting a claim within the meaning of section 25b.<sup>31</sup>

The judgment of the circuit court of appeals as to the validity of a lien asserted by a creditor was appealable under the latter section where the parties insisted upon different constructions of the act one of which would defeat the lien and the other of which would render it valid.<sup>32</sup> A certificate of a justice of the supreme court under section 25b (2) did not give the right of appeal from a decision of the circuit court of appeals allowing or rejecting a claim of less than $500. In regard to such claims the decision of the circuit court of appeals was final.<sup>33</sup>

Even before the act of 1915, no appeal lay from the decision of a circuit court of appeals, in the exercise of its supervisory jurisdiction over proceedings in bankruptcy.<sup>34</sup> A judgment that

An erroneous decision against an asserted right to an exemption does not create a question of jurisdiction proper to be passed upon by the supreme court by a direct appeal;<sup>37</sup> nor does an appeal lie from a decision of the circuit court of appeals under section 24b allowing or rejecting a claim for an exemption, the remedy being by certiorari.<sup>38</sup> An order granting or refusing a discharge is not appealable to the supreme court.<sup>39</sup>

§ 1662. — Controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings.

By the judicial code of 1911, the supreme court was expressly vested with appellate jurisdiction of controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings, from the courts of bankruptcy, from which it has appellate jurisdiction in other cases.<sup>40</sup> Where the jurisdiction of the federal court rendering the judgment or decree appealed from rested alone upon the diversity of citizenship, the decision of the circuit court of appeals was final and no appeal lay to the supreme court.<sup>41</sup> Whether the jurisdiction depended upon diverse citizenship alone was determined from the complaint or bill, regardless of questions which may have been brought into the suit by the answer or in the course of the subsequent proceedings.<sup>42</sup> It was not sufficient that grounds of jurisdiction other than diverse citizenship might be inferred argumentatively from the statements in the complaint or bill.<sup>43</sup> A suit could not be said to arise under the laws of the United States, simply because the trustee was a party.<sup>44</sup>

upon an appeal to it under section 24a of the act, where the amount in controversy exceeded $1,000 besides costs.<sup>45</sup> The circuit court of appeals could allow an appeal to the supreme court from its decision in a case involving a controversy existing independent of the bankruptcy proceedings which involved the requisite amount and did not depend upon the citizenship of the parties.<sup>46</sup> A decree of the circuit court of appeals on appeal from an interlocutory decree granting an injunction, directing a decree dismissing the suit was held a final decree and appealable, the requisite amount being involved <sup>47</sup> as was a decree dismissing the petition of a trustee to prevent the enforcement of a lien in a state court.<sup>48</sup>

The act of January 28, 1915,<sup>48a</sup> is sweeping in its provisions and makes all judgments and decrees of the circuit court of appeals in all proceedings and causes arising under the bankruptcy act, as well as in all controversies arising under such proceedings and causes, final, and reviewable only by certiorari, regardless of the amount in controversy. The purpose of congress was to render the decisions of the circuit court of appeals final not only in bankruptcy proceedings proper, but in all collateral controversies arising in the course of the proceedings as well, and the distinction between "proceedings in bankruptcy" and "controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings" is now immaterial, so far as the right to appeal to the supreme court is concerned.

of bankruptcy throughout the United States,' approved July 1st, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and in all controversies arising in such proceedings and causes; . . .; and, also in all causes arising under any amendment or supplement to any one of the aforementioned Acts which has been heretofore or may be hereafter enacted, shall be final, save only that it shall be competent for the supreme court to require by certiorari, upon petition of any party thereto, that the proceeding, case, or controversy be certified to it for review and determination, with the same power and authority and with like effect as if taken to that court by appeal or writ of error."

the district court direct to the supreme court only includes cases where the question is as to the jurisdiction of the United States court as such and does not include a case where the district court determines that it has jurisdiction to require an alleged adverse claimant to turn over property to the trustee.<sup>49</sup>

§ 1663. — Appeals from courts not in organized circuits.

The concluding clause of section 24a does not confer jurisdiction upon the supreme court to review decisions of the courts of bankruptcy not within any organized circuit of the United States, deciding questions arising in the bankruptcy proceedings proper, but jurisdiction in such case is limited as in appeals from the decisions of the other courts to controversies which are not inherently steps in the bankruptcy court, though they may arise in the course of the proceedings. Accordingly, the decision of the district court of Porto Rico allowing or disallowing a claim, has been held not appealable to the supreme court.<sup>50</sup> Nor does the supreme court have jurisdiction under section 24b to review an order of the district court of Porto Rico declaring a person to be a general partner of the bankrupt partnership and as such individually liable for firm debts.<sup>51</sup>

§ 1664. — Appeals from District of Columbia.

Under section 24a of the act appeals from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia are taken immediately to the Supreme Court of the United States instead of through the court of appeals of the district.*

§ 1665. — Certification of cases and certiorari.

The circuit court of appeals may at any time within its discretion certify to the Supreme Court of the United States any questions or proposition of law whether its decision would be final or not, concerning which it desires the instruction of that court for its proper decision. The supreme court may either give its opinion which shall bind the circuit court of appeals or require the whole record and then decide it as if on appeal or writ of error.<sup>52</sup> While the certification is made by the circuit court of appeals of its own motion, the advisability therefor may be suggested by counsel though not by formal motion. The certification should be restricted to questions of law and not seek a decision of the whole case,<sup>53</sup> nor comprehend mixed questions of law and fact.<sup>54</sup>

By the act of March 3, 1891,<sup>55</sup> re-enacted in the act of March 3, 1911,<sup>56</sup> it is provided that the supreme court may require by certiorari, or otherwise, certain cases made final in the circuit courts of appeals to be certified to the supreme court for its review and determination, with the same power and authority in the case as if it had been carried by appeal or writ of error to the supreme court. Apart from section 25 of the law, the circuit courts of appeals have jurisdiction on petition to superintend and revise any matter of law in bankruptcy proceedings and also jurisdiction of controversies over which they would have appellate jurisdiction in other cases. The decisions of those courts may be reviewed in the supreme court on certiorari or in certain cases by appeal.<sup>57</sup> The writ of certiorari may also be allowed by the supreme court in aid of the writ of habeas corpus and for the purpose of enlarging the scope of that writ.<sup>58</sup> Application for the issuance of this writ should be addressed to the supreme court and will not be granted except in its discretion and then only in matters of gravity and general importance.<sup>59</sup> Only final orders of the district court can be reviewed by certiorari,<sup>60</sup> and after affirmance of an order by the circuit court of appeals, the lower court cannot insert in its order entered on the mandate of the court of appeals a provision that it should not be prejudicial to the right to apply to the supreme court for a writ of certiorari.<sup>61</sup>

By a recent act of congress,<sup>61a</sup> the decisions of the circuit courts of appeals in all proceedings and causes arising under the bankruptcy act, and in all controversies arising under such proceedings and causes, are made final, save only that it shall be competent for the supreme court to require by certiorari, upon petition of any party thereto, that the proceeding, case or controversy be certified to it for review and determination, with the same power and with like effect as if taken to that court by appeal or writ of error.

No certiorari for diminution of the record will be awarded by the supreme court in any case, unless a motion therefor shall be made in writing, and the facts on which the same is founded shall, if not admitted by the other party, be verified by affidavit. And all motions for certiorari must be made at the first term of the entry of the case; otherwise, the same will not be granted, unless upon special cause shown to the court accounting satisfactorily for the delay.<sup>62</sup> The application must be made by petition, in which the title is A. B., petitioner, vs. C. D., respondent, and which must be filed in the office of the clerk of the supreme court together with a certified copy of the entire record, including the proceedings in the circuit court of appeals, an entry of appearance for the petitioner, signed by a member of the bar of the supreme court, a deposit of twenty-five dollars on account of costs, and between fifteen and twenty printed copies of such certified copy of the record. It is well to have printed fifty copies for use on the final hearing, in case the application, which must be presented in open court, is granted.

§ 1666. — Practice in taking appeals.

The supreme court provides in its general orders that the lower court, when rendering judgment or decree, must make and file a finding of the facts and its conclusions of law thereon, stated separately, and the record to be transmitted to the supreme court is to contain only the pleadings, the judgment or decree, the finding of facts and the conclusions of law.<sup>63</sup> A party contemplating an appeal to the supreme court, if the conclusion of the lower court is against him, should at the hearing and before the entry of the decree, request the making of findings of facts and conclusions.<sup>64</sup> General Order 36 does not require such findings to be made without request, but is intended to give the party a right thereto, if he demands it.<sup>65</sup>

It is the practice of the circuit court of appeals not to anticipate a further appeal but to await requests for findings and conclusions under General Order 36 and if the decree has been entered prior to a request for findings and conclusions, to vacate the decree.<sup>66</sup>

The transcript must show affirmatively the ground upon which the action complained of was taken<sup>67</sup> and the omission of findings of fact and conclusions of law cannot be supplied by a reference to the opinion below.<sup>68</sup> The findings of fact and conclusions of law may be filed nunc pro tunc as of the date the judgment was entered.<sup>69</sup>

The rule requiring the filing of specific findings of fact and conclusions of law does not apply to an appeal in a case involving a controversy existing independent of the bankruptcy proceedings, and appealable under section 24a of the act, and the appeal brings up the whole case.<sup>70</sup>

The record on appeal from a state supreme court includes the pleadings and judgment in an action at law and the bill of exceptions; or the pleadings, evidence and decree in equity; and if the local practice makes it part of the record, the opinion of the court may be considered.<sup>71</sup> The record must show on its face that the federal question was presented to the state court.<sup>72</sup>

A motion made in the circuit court of appeals to vacate a prior decree of reversal entered by it and to enter a final decree consistent with a subsequent holding of the court will be granted where its purpose is simply to avoid the necessity of having the case remanded, only to return to the circuit court of appeals and proceed thence to the supreme court.<sup>73</sup>

§ 1667. — Time of appeal.

Under a recent act of congress, "no writ of error, appeal or writ of certiorari intended to bring up any cause for review by the supreme court shall be allowed or entertained unless duly applied for within three months after entry of the judgment or decree complained of."<sup>74</sup>

This statute supersedes General Order 36, under which a party was given thirty days within which to appeal. Even before the act of congress above referred to, it was held that the general order was not applicable to writs of error, the time within which the latter might be brought having been fixed by the Revised Statutes;<sup>75</sup> nor was the general order applicable to a case involving a controversy existing independent of the bankruptcy proceedings.<sup>76</sup>

The limitation begins to run from the date of the judgment, not from the date of an order denying a rehearing.<sup>77</sup>

§ 1668. — Effect of appeal.

Under the act of 1867, where a party appealed from the circuit court to the supreme court, it was held that the allowance of the appeal related back to the time when the original application was made for appeal to the circuit court and entitled the party to a stay of proceedings, which would be true of an appeal under the present act.<sup>78</sup> The pendency of an appeal operates as a stay not only of the decree or order appealed from, but of all proceedings in aid of the execution of the same.<sup>79</sup>

A decision of the supreme court reversing a decree of the circuit court of appeals and directing that court to dismiss an appeal to it and to remand the case to the district court for further proceedings, in conformity with the decision, though addressed to the circuit court of appeals alone, does not authorize that court to grant a peremptory writ of mandamus to enforce obedience to the mandate by the district court. The decision is to be regarded as giving directions which the circuit court of appeals is simply to communicate to the district court, and which the latter is to follow on the authority of the supreme court, not of the circuit court of appeals.<sup>80</sup>

FORMS IN BANKRUPTCY

The forms given herewith, consisting of the sixty-three official forms promulgated by the Supreme Court of the United States, and 125 forms collected and compiled by the author, are intended merely as a working foundation for use by members of the bar and officers of the bankruptcy court, and are not offered as a complete set of forms to meet every imaginable situation which might arise in bankruptcy practice.

Care has been taken to avoid unnecessary repetition and duplication. Orders and notices of motion must necessarily follow to a great extent the wording of the particular motion or petition for relief, and, for that reason, preference has been given to forms of petitions, rather than to forms of orders or notices based thereon.

Many of the forms represented are verbatim copies of or adopted from forms actually used before the courts. These forms have as a rule been adopted from important cases carried to the Supreme Court by counsel of the highest standing in the bankruptcy practice. No form is represented, however, which does not meet the requirements of the Bankruptcy Act, and the decisions of the courts.

The forms have been indexed in the general index and, to further facilitate their use, they have been arranged, as nearly as practicable, in the order in which the matters to which they pertain, are treated in the text.

Oaths required by the act, except upon hearings in court, may be administered by referees and by officers authorized to administer oaths in proceedings before the courts of the United States, or under the laws of the State where the same are to be taken. Bankrupt Act of 1898, c. 4, § 20.

INVOLUNTARY PETITION—LESS THAN TWELVE CREDITORS.

To the Honorable Judge of the District Court of the United States for the _____ District of _____:

Respectfully submitting to the Honorable Court, your petitioners allege:

First. That the said K. P. Co. (a corporation) for the greater portion of six months preceding the date of the filing of this petition has been principally engaged in business as manufacturer of pianos and had its principal place of business at No. _____ Street in the City of _____, and that the said K. P. Co. (a corporation) is not a wage-earner or person engaged chiefly in farming or tilling of soil and is not a municipal, railroad, insurance or banking corporation, and owes debts to the amount of $1,000 or over.

Second. That your petitioners are creditors of the said alleged bankrupt, having provable claims amounting in the aggregate in excess of securities held by them to the sum of $500.

Third. The nature and amount of your petitioners' claim are as follows:

(a) The claim of your petitioner W. C. S. is as follows:

Money loaned and advanced by G. C. to the alleged bankrupt above named on or about and between the first day of January, 1907, and the first day of January, 1908, both days inclusive, amounting to the sum of $800.00, and thereafter and for value said claim was assigned by G. C. to petitioner, who is now the owner and holder thereof.

[(b) The claim of your petitioner A. B. is as follows: (Here allege nature of other claims).]

Fourth. Your petitioners further show that the said alleged bankrupt is insolvent, and within four months next preceding the date of this petition, and while insolvent, committed acts of bankruptcy as follows:

I. Your petitioners are informed and believe that said alleged bankrupt paid certain claims, demands, accounts and indebtedness to several persons, firms and corporations, creditors of said alleged bankrupt, upon antecedent indebtedness, with the intent and for the purpose of preferring such creditors of said alleged bankrupt and for the purpose of allowing said creditors to obtain a greater percentage of their respective debts than any other of such creditors of the same class, which payments amounted in the aggregate to the sum of about $2,500.00.

II. Your petitioners are informed and believe that the said alleged bankrupt, with intent to hinder, delay and defraud its creditors, and with intent and for the purpose of giving a preference contrary to the provisions of the Bankruptcy Law, and upon pretended and alleged antecedent indebtedness claim and alleged to be due from said alleged bankrupt to divers persons, firms and corporations, assigned, transferred and set over unto said divers persons, firms and corporations large and valuable property, consisting of merchandise, accounts and dues receivable, of the value of about $2,500.00, applicable to the payment of the debts of said alleged bankrupt.

Fifth. Your petitioners further represent that the said alleged bankrupt has creditors other than your petitioners, and that the said creditors were and are less than twelve in number.

WHEREFORE, your petitioners pray that service of this petition, with a subpoena, may be made upon K. P. Co. (a corporation), as provided in the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy, and that it may be adjudged by the Court to be bankrupt within the purview of said acts.

AMENDED VERIFICATION OF PETITION BY ATTORNEY FOR CREDITOR.

H. F. H., being duly sworn upon his oath, says that he is a member of the firm of D. & H., a society of attorneys practicing in the city of San Juan, Porto Rico, composed of the said H. F. H. and F. H. D., and that the said D. & H. are members of the bar of the United States District Court for Porto Rico, regularly practicing therein; that the said firm D. & H., and each of the partners thereof, were duly and fully authorized by S. P. & Co. and by S. R. & Co. to sign the petition in bankruptcy herein filed by the said S. P. & Co. and S. R. & Co., and the A. T. Co. against the S. de J. H., on the 8th day of June, 1903; that the said S. P. & Co. and S. R. & Co. are mercantile associations and firms engaged in business in the city of New York, neither of whom have any representatives in Porto Rico, nor did they have at the time of filing the petition in bankruptcy as aforesaid; that neither the said S. P. & Co. nor the said S. R. & Co. nor the partners thereof in the said city of New York were aware of the acts of bankruptcy alleged in the said petition to have been committed by the said S. de J. H. at the time of the filing of the said petition, but that your affiant had knowledge thereof, having acquired such knowledge within a few days previous to the filing of said petition in bankruptcy, and the affiant alleges that he acquired knowledge of the said acts of bankruptcy by reading a certified copy of the transfer set forth in the said petition in bankruptcy, dated March 7, 1903, and that the reason why he signed and verified the said petition in bankruptcy in behalf and for the said S. P. & Co. and S. R. & Co. is and was because he was familiar with the facts as aforesaid and it would greatly delay the filing of the petition in bankruptcy if time had been taken to send the petition in bankruptcy to New York for the signature of a member of the firm of the said S. P. & Co. and the said S. R. & Co., or to have awaited the arrival in Porto Rico of a duly authorized person to sign such petition.

Affiant states that all the matters and facts set forth in said petition in bankruptcy filed as aforesaid are true. And affiant further says that at the time of the filing of said petition in bankruptcy D. J. A. was the regular and general agent in Porto Rico of the A. T. Co. of New York, and such company had no other agent in Porto Rico at the time; that the said D. J. A. was duly and fully authorized by the said A. T. Co. to sign the said petition in bankruptcy and that he signed the same for the reason that the facts relating to the act in bankruptcy as set forth in said petition were not known to said A. T. Co., but were known to the said J. A., who acquired the knowledge thereof from the reading of the document or transfer set forth in said petition in bankruptcy; and that he, the said J. A., signed and verified the said petition in bankruptcy for the reason that it would have delayed the proceedings herein, to the great prejudice of his client, the said A. T. Co., if he had waited until the petition of bankruptcy should be sent to New York for signature or if he should wait until an officer of the said company should come to Porto Rico.

MOTION TO DISMISS INVOLUNTARY PETITION.

[Caption.]

Now come the said alleged bankrupts, S. de J. H., J. M. y H., and J. T. y M., by their attorneys, N. B. K. P., appearing specially for this purpose and no other, and move the Court to vacate and set aside the service of process in said cause upon the said respondents and to dismiss the said petition filed against them, for the following reasons, to-wit:

First, because said writ was issued on the 10th day of June, 1903, and made returnable on the 12th day of June, 1903, which failed to give such reasonable notice as is required to constitute due process of law.

Second, because, although said writ was issued and attested on the 10th day of June, 1903, it was not served upon respondents until late in the afternoon of the 11th day of June, 1903, by reason of which these respondents were given less than twenty-four hours' notice to appear in this court in defense of said petition, which is not such reasonable notice as constitutes due process of law.

Third, because the petition in this case fails to allege that these respondents are included within the classes of persons against whom involuntary petitions in bankruptcy can be filed under the law, by reason whereof this Court is without jurisdiction to proceed against these respondents.

Fourth, because the said petition is not legally or sufficiently verified, in that it is sworn to by one claiming to be an attorney in fact of certain corporation petitioners without power of attorney under which he claims to act being set forth or attached to the said petition so as to enable the Court to judge of the sufficiency of the same.

Fifth, because the said petition is not legally or sufficiently verified, in that the party verifying the same as an attorney in fact does not set forth in said affidavit to said petition that he has had any opportunity to ascertain the accuracy of the allegations made in the said petition, or has in fact any knowledge thereof, whereby he is enabled to verify the same.

Sixth, because of others matters apparent on the face of said petition.
Filed June 15, 1903.      N. B. K. P., Attorney for Respondents.

§ 1702. Form No. 34.

[Caption.]

To the Honorable Judges of the District Court of the United States for the ——— District of ———:

The petition of W. C. S. respectfully shows to this Honorable Court and alleges:

First. That he is a creditor of the bankrupt above named, and that a petition praying for the involuntary adjudication of said alleged bankrupt was filed in the office of the clerk of this court on the ——— day of ———, 19—, and thereafter on said day a subpoena was issued on the said involuntary petition.

Second. That the alleged bankrupt above named has its place of business at No. ——— Street, ———, ———, and is a corporation incorporated under the laws of the State of ——— and has liabilities of ——— dollars, and assets which consist of outstanding accounts and merchandise of about ——— dollars.

Third. That the alleged bankrupt is a manufacturer of pianos. That none of the creditors have an inventory of the bankrupt's property and that ——— its officers or other employers desire to abstract, purloin or remove any parts of the piano or merchandise used in the construction thereof, if it can be done without knowledge of the creditors, for the reasons aforesaid, that the creditors have no inventory.

Fourth. Petitioner's attorneys, Messrs. M. & G., were informed by the bankrupt's attorneys that the said alleged bankrupt has less than twelve creditors, and further that it is insolvent and cannot pay its just debts in full. Information was also obtained that the rent of the premises of the bankrupt has not been paid for the past month and there is fear that dispossession proceedings will be brought, and, if permitted, grave and serious injury will result. That if the bankrupt's property is dispossessed, the wood used in the construction of said pianos,— which is of delicate hue—as well as the veneer which is attached to the various wood—and is also delicate—will become scratched, and if they become scratched, they become worthless.

Fifth. Petitioner further says that he has been informed that the bankrupt has outstanding accounts, having sold some pianos on the installment plan, which demand immediate attention by a custodian to be appointed by this court. That if the debtors become advised of the bankruptcy herein, they will delay making payments on the installment accounts through various pretexts and excuses, and some will move and the accounts become lost and the property of the bankrupt to which the estate is entitled will also be lost.

Sixth. Therefore, petitioner submits that a custodian be appointed at once to take charge of these outstanding accounts and vigorously prosecute them, to the end that collection of the same may be successfully had.

Seventh. Petitioner further shows that the bankrupt has refused to permit an examination of its books and that the major portion of its debts are now past due and no inspection can be obtained of the bankrupt's premises in relation to the payment of past due accounts.

Eighth. Your petitioner further shows that the outstanding and quick assets of the bankrupt might be disposed of in some way so that the same will be lost to the estate.

WHEREFORE, your petitioner prays for an order of this court appointing a receiver of the K. P. Co., with the usual powers, and that the usual injunction order issue, and for such other and further relief in the premises as to the Court may seem just and proper.

And your petitioner will ever pray, etc.

Dated ———, 19—.

PETITION FOR EXAMINATION UNDER SECTION 21A.

[Caption.]

To the Honorable Judges of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York:

The petition of J. W. respectfully shows to this Honorable Court:

First. That the petition praying for the involuntary adjudication of the alleged bankrupt above named was duly filed in the office of the clerk of this court on the 2d day of August, 1909, and thereafter and on said day, your petitioner was duly appointed receiver of the property, assets and effects of the alleged bankrupt, above named, and duly qualified in the manner and form prescribed by law.

Second. That after your petitioner's qualification, he entered upon the discharge of his duties as such receiver, and took possession of all the assets of the alleged bankrupt discoverable.

Third. That the petitioner found that the bankrupt was a dealer in and manufacturer of pianos, and that the bankrupt had certain outstanding accounts with which your petitioner is unacquainted at this time.

Fourth. Petitioner has been informed that the bankrupt made a statement in which he said that he had assets much larger than those taken possession of by him, and petitioner desires an examination and investigation into the facts concerning the disappearance of the assets, as he believes from such examination, facts may be elicited which may bring said assets into the estate.

Fifth. Your petitioner therefore deems it necessary and essential for the best interests of the creditors herein that the alleged bankrupt above named, its officers and directors and J. J. (the name "J. J." being fictitious, real name being unknown, but more particularly identified as the bookkeeper of the alleged bankrupt), be examined under the provisions of Section 21-A of the Bankruptcy Act, so that your petitioner may obtain information which will aid him in bringing assets into the estate herein.

WHEREFORE, your petitioner prays an order of this court directing the alleged bankrupt above named, its officers and directors and J. J. (the name "J. J." being fictitious, real name being unknown, but more particularly identified as the bookkeeper of the alleged bankrupt), to appear for examination before a special examiner to be appointed for the purpose, and that they produce for exhibit and examination all books, vouchers, papers, writings, etc., relating to their business, and that they be examined concerning their acts, conduct and property, and for such other and further order and relief in the premises as the Court may deem just and proper.

And your petitioner will ever pray, etc.

PETITION FOR RE-EXAMINATION OF CLAIM PRAYING FOR SURRENDER OF PREFERENCE.

[Caption.]

To R. S. H., Esquire, Referee in Bankruptcy:

The petition of The P. L. & T. Co., of Philadelphia, trustee of the estate of G. W. and I. W., individually and trading as G. W. & Co., bankrupts, respectfully represents:

1. That a petition praying that G. W. and I. W., individually and trading as G. W. & Co., be adjudged voluntary bankrupts, was filed in the said District Court of the United States, for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, on the thirty-first day of December, 1901, and in pursuance thereof, they were so adjudged on the same day.

2. That your petitioner is the trustee of the estate of G. W. and I. W., individually and trading as G. W. & Co., bankrupts, and has duly qualified as such.

3. That J. W. & Co. have filed a proof of claim against the estate of the said bankrupts on the present proceedings in the sum of $2,565.92, and that the said claim is based upon the sale and delivery of merchandise on an open account, as shown by the statement annexed to the proof of claim, between July 19 and October 8, 1901.

4. That G. W. and I. W., individually and trading as G. W. & Co., were on or before October 9, 1901, insolvent, and continued so up to the date of bankruptcy, and your petitioner is informed, believes, and expects to be able to prove, and therefore avers that the said G. W. and I. W., individually and trading as G. W. & Co., did pay or cause to be paid to J. W. & Co., on October 9, 1901, the sum of $634.78; that said sum of money was then and immediately prior thereto, the property and assets of said G. W. and I. W., individually and trading as G. W. & Co., and that said payment did not wholly extinguish the indebtedness at the date of payment due claimants by said G. W. & I. W., individually and trading as G. W. & Co., but was only in liquidation pro tanto of said indebtedness then existing.

5. That the said payment by said G. W. and I. W., individually and trading as G. W. & Co., to the said J. W. & Co., claimants, constitutes a preference within the meaning and intent of the Bankruptcy Act, being a transfer of property, the result of which will be to enable the said claimants to obtain a greater percentage of their debt than any other of said creditors of the same class.

6. That said preference should be surrendered before the said claim is allowed.

Your petitioner therefore objects to the allowance of said claim and prays that if allowed, it be re-examined and that no dividend be paid thereon unless and until the said preference be surrendered.

The P. L. & T. Co.,
Trustee for the Estate of G. W. and I. W., Individually and Trading as
G. W. & Co., Bankrupts.

The petition of _____ respectfully shows:

That petitioner is the duly qualified and acting trustee of the estate of the above-named bankrupt.

That among the assets listed by the said bankrupt in his schedules on files herein and coming into the possession of your petitioner as trustee herein is the following described personal property, to-wit:

That your petitioner is informed that on the _____ day of _____, 19—, more than four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy herein, said bankrupt made and delivered to one _____, hereinafter called the mortgagee, his promissory note dated on that day, whereby for value he promised to pay to the order of said _____, the sum of _____ Dollars, on or before the _____ day of _____, 19—, at the _____ Bank of _____, _____, with interest thereon at the rate of _____ per cent per annum.

That your petitioner is informed that to secure the payment of said note according to its terms, the bankrupt herein made and delivered to said _____, a chattel mortgage of and upon the above described personal property, and that said mortgage was filed and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of _____, State of _____, as required by law, on the _____ day of _____, 19—, the county in which the bankrupt resided at last mentioned date, as petitioner is informed.

That the value of the above described property does not exceed the sum of _____ Dollars ($_____), which is less than the amount of the aforesaid mortgage thereon; that the value of said property is not sufficient to justify an attempt on the part of petitioner to redeem it or to administer it in these proceedings, unless the said note and mortgage are invalid as against the trustee herein and the creditors of the said bankrupt other than the aforesaid mortgagee.

That your petitioner has not sufficient information to form a belief that the aforesaid note and mortgage are valid as against him and the creditors of the bankrupt other than the aforesaid mortgagee, but believes that it would be unprofitable at this time for him to retain possession of the said property for the following reasons:

WHEREFORE, your petitioner prays for an order permitting and authorizing him to deliver the said property to the aforesaid mortgagee, without prejudice, however, to the right of the petitioner to contest the validity of the mortgage and retake possession of said property if said mortgage be declared invalid by a court of competent jurisdiction, and for such other and further relief as to the court may seem just.

Co. for the sum of $6,500.00 with interest from the first day of July, 1910, on account of rent alleged to be due from said The D. J. Co. under and by virtue of a lease between said companies dated August 30, 1900, for the use and occupation of certain parts of said The M. S. B. Co.'s premises in said city, known as Nos. ——— West Fourth Street, and also on account of certain alterations made by The D. J. Co. to certain parts of said premises.

Your petitioner further represents to the Court that service of the summons had been made on said The D. J. Co. in said case; that the said claim made by said The M. S. B. Co. and said suit brought by it to enforce the same, constitute a cloud upon the title and possession of petitioner to said assets of said The D. J. Co. now in his hands as trustee of the bankrupt herein, and a hindrance to their speedy and proper distribution by him to creditors of said bankrupt, and that it is necessary for the complete determination of said claim and for a speedy and proper distribution of said assets to creditors of said bankrupt, that said The M. S. B. Co. be forthwith made a party to this proceeding.

WHEREFORE, Your petitioner prays that the said The M. S. B. Co. be forthwith made a party to this proceeding and ordered to set up herein whatever claim or claims, if any, it may have against said The D. J. Co. or its said assets now in his hands as aforesaid; that notice of the pendency and prayer of this petition, in such form as to the Court may seem

PETITION FOR PRESERVATION OF LIENS AND SUBROGATION.

[Caption.]

To the Honorable S. C. E., Referee:

The petition of C. & C. T. & S. Bank respectfully shows that it was duly appointed as trustee herein, and has qualified as such trustee.

Your petitioner further shows that the assets of the bankrupt which came into its possession consist of a plant for the manufacture of loose leaf devices and kindred articles, machinery, merchandise and outstanding accounts, said manufacturing plant being situated in Ravenswood, Chicago, Illinois.

Your petitioner further shows that on June 3, 1910, there was entered in the Supreme Court of Cook County certain judgments against the bankrupt, said judgments being hereinafter enumerated.

That on said June 3, 1910, executions were issued on said judgments to the sheriff of Cook County, and that from the time of the issuing of said executions, the same became liens to the amount thereof upon all property of the bankrupt herein; that on June 4, 1910, these bankruptcy proceedings were instituted by the filing of the creditors' petition.

Your petitioner further shows that the said executions are still in the hands of the sheriff and are wholly unsatisfied.

That the following is a list of the judgments hereinabove referred to:

Your petitioner further shows that in order to avoid certain transfers it will be necessary for the benefit of the estate to preserve the liens of said judgments and executions, and to have the trustee subrogated to such rights and liens; that there are certain conveyances made by the said bankrupt prior to the institution of these bankruptcy proceedings, which are absolutely void as against the judgment and execution creditors, but which may not be void as against the trustee and that, therefore, it will be of great benefit to this estate to have said judgment and execution rights and liens preserved and said trustee subrogated to such rights and liens.

WHEREFORE, Your petitioner prays for an order preserving the rights and liens against the property and assets of the bankrupt under the judgments and executions above referred to and to have the trustee subrogated to such rights and liens and your petitioner will ever pray.

PETITION BY ADVERSE CLAIMANT FOR ACCOUNTING BY TRUSTEE.

[Caption.]

To the Honorable Judges of the District Court of the United States, for the District of New Jersey:

The petition of J. E. D. respectfully shows:

1. That your petitioner resides at _____, _____ County, New York, and is engaged in the business of banking at No. — Broad Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York.

2. On information and belief, that an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against The S.-K. Co. was filed in this proceeding on or about November 29, 1910, and E. S. A. and T. M. C. were appointed by this Court receivers of the property of said The S.-K. Co.

3. That the said The S.-K. Co. is indebted to your petitioner in a sum in excess of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($250,000) and that your petitioner holds as collateral security therefor accounts receivable created in favor of the said The S.-K. Co. and assigned to your petitioner pursuant to an agreement between the said company and your petitioner, originally executed under date of September 21, 1908, and renewed and extended by agreements dated respectively, September 21, 1909, and May 16, 1910, which agreements provided in substance as follows:

That the said The S.-K. Co. will assign and deliver to your petitioner, within seven days after the shipment of the merchandise represented thereby, accounts receivable for and representing all sales of merchandise made by it from and after the date of the agreement, except sales for cash in hand; that your petitioner will loan or advance to the said The S.-K. Co. on the security of said accounts receivable, eighty per cent (80%) of the net face value of such thereof as he shall approve; that all checks, notes or money, or security or collateral of any kind which shall come to the said company in payment or on account of or in connection with any of the assigned accounts receivable, shall be immediately delivered to your petitioner, the same being his property, and that the lien of your petitioner on the accounts receivable assigned to him shall include any money which shall become due him [commissions], as well as the amount of all the loans and interest thereon.

4. That your petitioner from the time of the execution of the first of said agreements, dated September 21, 1908, received from the said The S.-K. Co., from day to day, assignments of its accounts receivable and of the merchandise therein described, and at the same time from day to day made loans or advances to the said company on the security thereof. That in some cases where the accounts receivable called for future deliveries the merchandise represented thereby was boxed and stored in warehouse for the account of your petitioner and the negotiable warehouse receipts for the same were endorsed and delivered to your petitioner.

5. That in the normal course of business the remittances in payment or on account of the accounts receivable which had been assigned to your petitioner were received at the office of the said The S.-K. Co. and were immediately delivered to your petitioner, the checks, notes and drafts being endorsed by the said company to the order of your petitioner. Similarly, returns of merchandise of purchasers were received at the office of the said The S.-K. Co., and were stored in warehouse for the account of your petitioner, the negotiable warehouse receipts for the same being endorsed and delivered to your petitioner. On information and belief that since the 29th day of November, 1910, remittances have been received at the office of the said The S.-K. Co., in payment and on account of accounts receivable, which were assigned to and are the property of your petitioner, but that the said remittances have been retained by the receivers hereinabove named, and have not been forwarded to your petitioner, to whom they belong. That your petitioner has not notified the debtors under said assigned accounts receivable of the assignment thereof to your petitioner, for the reason that it will facilitate the collection thereof to have the remittances continue as heretofore to be sent to the office of the said company. The aggregate of the face value of assigned accounts receivable held by your petitioner is in excess of the indebtedness of the said The S.-K. Co. to your petitioner, and that it will be to the advantage of the said company and of its creditors, as well as to the advantage of your petitioner, to have the said accounts collected as speedily as possible. That it is probable that some of the merchandise shipped to customers of the said The S.-K. Co., the accounts receivable for which have been assigned to and are the property of your petitioner, will be returned to the office of said company, and that the same being the property of your petitioner should be turned over to him.

6. That the records in the office of the said The S.-K. Co., as well as in your petitioner's office, show in detail all the accounts receivable which have been assigned to your petitioner, as well as loans and advances made on the security thereof and the remittances therefor received by your petitioner and applied in the reduction of said loans and of the present balance of accounts receivable held by your petitioner and of the loans unpaid.

THEREFORE, Your petitioner prays for an order authorizing and directing the receivers of the property of the said The S.-K. Co. to pay to your petitioner the amount of all collections made by the said company prior to the time said receivers qualified as such, and which have come into the hands of said receivers, and of all collections by said receivers since that time in payment or on account of the accounts receivable theretofore assigned to your petitioner; and further authorizing and directing the said receivers to endorse and turn over to your petitioner all checks, drafts and remittances which heretofore have been received by them and which shall hereafter be received by them in payment or on account of the accounts receivable assigned to your petitioner, and to turn over and deliver to your petitioner all merchandise returned by purchasers and received by said receivers, the accounts receivable representing which have been assigned to your petitioner, and that the said receivers be directed to authorize and direct any warehouse company or concern to deliver to your petitioner the merchandise stored therein by The S.-K. Co. for which your petitioner holds warehouse receipts endorsed by said company; until the indebtedness of the said The S.-K. Co. to your petitioner is paid in full.

No other application for an order to this effect has been made. And your petitioner will ever pray, etc.

J. E. D.,
Petitioner.

Dated, New York, December 1, 1910.

BILL IN EQUITY TO RECOVER PREFERENCE.

In the District Court of the United States, Southern District of Illinois, Northern Division.

In Chancery.

W. J. R., Trustee in Bankruptcy of F. B., Bankrupt,

v.

The R. I. P. Co., a Corporation.

To the Honorable J. O. J., Judge of Said District Court:

Your orator, W. J. R., trustee in bankruptcy of Frank Brown, F. B., bankrupt, respectfully represents unto your Honor that on, to-wit, the 27th day of November, A. D. 1907, the said F. B., of _____, _____ County, Illinois, filed in this court a voluntary petition in bankruptcy and that he was thereafter on to-wit, the said 27th day of November,

A. D. 1907, duly and regularly adjudged bankrupt by said court, and that thereafter your orator was regularly elected trustee in bankruptcy of said bankrupt estate and that your orator has qualified and is now acting as such trustee.

Your orator further represents that on to-wit, the 25th day of November, A. D. 1907, the said bankrupt, being indebted to the R. I. P. Co., an Illinois corporation, having its principal place of business in the city of ——— and State of Illinois, which is hereinafter named as the defendant, upon a previously existing indebtedness for merchandise sold and delivered by the R. I. P. Co. to the said F. B., amounting to the sum of to-wit, four hundred and six ($406) dollars, it did transfer and deliver to the said R. I. P. Co. goods, wares and merchandise consisting of gang plows, cultivators, harrows, pulverizers and other farm implements of the property of F. B., bankrupt, of the value of to-wit, five hundred ($500) dollars, in full payment and discharge of said indebtedness so owing by said bankrupt to the said R. I. P. Co.

Your petitioner further represents that at the time the said bankrupt transferred and delivered said merchandise to the said R. I. P. Co. in payment of said indebtedness owing by said bankrupt to the said R. I. P. Co., and at all times since then, up to the time of filing of said voluntary petition in bankruptcy, the said F. B. was insolvent, of which fact the said R. I. P. Co. at the time of the receipt of the said merchandise in payment of said debt had notice, and that the said R. I. P. Co. then had reasonable cause to believe that the said bankrupt was insolvent and unable to pay his debts in full; that the said transfer and delivery of said merchandise so made by the said bankrupt to the said R. I. P. Co. was made within four months next preceding the date of the filing of said petition in bankruptcy by said B.; that the said transfer of merchandise by the said bankrupt under the circumstances herein alleged was in violation of the rights and interests of other creditors of said bankrupt and in violation of the provisions of the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy and amounted to an unlawful preference of said R. I. P. Co. over other creditors of said bankrupt of the same class as the said R. I. P. Co.

Forasmuch, therefore, as your orator is without remedy in the premises, except in a court of equity, your orator prays: That the said R. I. P. Co., a corporation, which is made party defendant to this, your orator's bill of complaint, may be required to answer the same, but not under oath, the answer under oath being hereby expressly waived; that an account may be had under the direction of this Honorable Court and the amount of the property transferred by the said bankrupt to the said R. I. P. Co. in payment of said previously existing debt and the value thereof, within four months prior to the filing of said voluntary petition in bankruptcy may be ascertained and that the defendant may be decreed by the court to return to your orator all property so received by the said R. I. P. Co. from the said bankrupt, or the value thereof, and that the said defendant may be decreed to surrender to your orator all preferences received by it from the said bankrupt within four months previous to the filing of said petition in bankruptcy; that the said defendant may be required to set forth and discover a full and complete description, together with the value thereof, of all property received by it from the said F. B. within four months previous to the date of filing of said voluntary petition in bankruptcy, and under what circumstances it received the same; and that your orator may have such other and further relief in the premises as the nature of the case may require and to your Honor may seem meet.

May it please your Honor to grant to your orator the writ of subpoena directed to the R. I. P. Co., commanding it on a day certain therein to be named to be and appear in this honorable court then and there to answer the premises and to stand to, perform and abide by such other and further orders, directions and decrees as may be made against it, and your orator as in duty bound will ever pray, etc.

That certain of the creditors of said ——, to-wit: the defendant above named, —— and Co., and —— and Co., declined to execute releases and accept the benefits of said trust deed or assignment, and thereafter the said —— executed a supplemental agreement with the said —— as trustee, directing said trustee to apportion the funds in his hands among all of the creditors of said ——, and deliver to each creditor his proportion of said estate, provided such creditor, in consideration thereof, execute a full release of his claim; and further directing said trustee to return to him, the said ——, at the expiration of thirty days any funds remaining in his hands not disbursed to creditors in accordance with said agreement.

That the effect of the levying and taking of said money from the estate of said ——— effected a preference in favor of said defendant over and above the other creditors of said ——— (of the same class as defendant) and the said defendant received a greater proportion of its claim against the said ——— than the other creditors of said ——— (of the same class as defendant).

VIII.

That said defendant well knew (and had reasonable cause to believe) at the time of the issuance of said execution and the taking of said money from the estate of said ——— that the said ——— was wholly insolvent and that there were not sufficient funds in his estate to pay his creditors in full, that the claim of said defendant against the said ——— had been in existence a long time prior thereto, and that by taking the said money from the said estate of ——— as aforesaid, the said defendant obtained a much greater proportion of its claim against the said ——— than the other creditors (of the same class) could have or did receive.

The above-named plaintiff for his complaint in the above-entitled action alleges and shows to the Court:

First. That on the _____ day of _____, A. D. 19—, the above-named bankrupt, _____, duly filed his petition in voluntary bankruptcy in the above-entitled court and was on the said day duly adjudged a bankrupt under and pursuant to the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy.

Second. That thereafter such proceedings were had in said court, sitting as a court of bankruptcy, that the plaintiff was on the _____ day of _____, A. D. 19—, duly appointed the trustee in bankruptcy of said bankrupt; that the plaintiff thereupon duly qualified as such trustee and ever since has been and now is the duly qualified and acting trustee of the said _____.

Third. That for several years preceding the month of _____, 19—, the said bankrupt was engaged in the _____ business in the Village of _____, County of _____, State of _____; that on or about the _____ day of _____, A. D. 19—, the said bankrupt received, among other goods, a shipment of farm implements of the value of _____ dollars ($_____) from the _____, a corporation, at _____, _____, which implements were received by said bankrupt at his place of business in _____, _____, on or about the _____ day of _____, A. D. 19—. That at said time the said bankrupt was indebted in the sum of about _____ dollars ($_____) to _____ (naming other creditors).

Fourth. That the said bankrupt, in payment of said shipment of

D. 19—, and that said defendants knew of the existence of debts to said ——— and to other creditors.

Sixth. That while said bankrupt was insolvent he had knowledge of his outstanding obligations, and while in contemplation of bankruptcy, he did, without consideration and with intent to cheat and defraud his creditors and to put his property beyond the reach of creditors, on the ——— day of ———, execute and deliver a warranty deed, which deed was recorded in book ——— of deeds, page ———, in the office of the register of deeds in ——— County, ———, conveying to said defendants the following described real estate situate in the County of ———, State of ———, to-wit: ———.

Seventh. That at the time said bankrupt transferred said real estate to these defendants, the said defendants and each of them knew and had reasonable cause to believe that said bankrupt was insolvent and that said defendants took and accepted the transfer of said real estate for the purpose of assisting, aiding and abetting said bankrupt to place his said property beyond the reach of his creditors, and of securing to said defendants a preference over legitimate creditors of said bankrupt, and that the effect of the transfer of said property was and is to enable the defendants to hold said real estate and the value thereof in their own names and to assist the said bankrupt in defrauding and cheating his creditors.

Eighth. That at the time of the transfer to said defendants of said real estate by said bankrupt, in the month of ———, A. D. 19—, the Ninth. That prior to the commencement of this action, the said court of bankruptcy duly made and filed its order in said bankruptcy proceedings, authorizing and directing plaintiff to commence and prosecute this action.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against said defendants and each of them for the recovery of the real estate herein described, or for the sum of ——— dollars ($———), its value, with interest thereon, in the event said real estate can not be had, and for such other relief as to the Court may seem just and proper, together with plaintiff's costs and disbursements herein.

COMPLAINT IN ACTION TO SET ASIDE TRANSFER AS BOTH PREFERENTIAL AND FRAUDULENT.

[Caption.]

Plaintiff complains of defendant and alleges:

That on the 20th day of May, 1911, one R. J. J. was duly adjudged a bankrupt upon his voluntary petition theretofor filed in the clerk's office of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of the State of Washington, and thereafter on the 21st day of June, 1911, the plaintiff was duly elected trustee in the matter of the estate of said R. J. J. and thereafter qualified and entered upon the discharge of his duties.

That on the 16th day of May, 1911, an action was brought in the Eighth Judicial District of the State of Idaho by the D. C. Co., a corporation, against said R. J. J. and others, in which action an attachment was duly issued and the B. L. Co. was garnished, and in answer to such garnishment stated that it was indebted to said R. J. J. in the sum of $369.35, and still is indebted to him in said sum, and that demand has been made by the plaintiff for the payment of said sum from the said B. L. Co., by plaintiff, but the said company still holds and refuses to pay plaintiff said sum or any part thereof.

That said R. J. J. was doing business prior to his adjudication in bankruptcy as the S. C. Co., and that any indebtedness due the S. C. Co. is in fact and reality due to said R. J. J., that being the name under which he transacted business.

That Mrs. R. J. J. was divorced from said J. on the ground of non-support.

That the said R. J. J., for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, voluntarily and without demand on the part of his former wife, assigned to her on May 17, 1911, the said account of indebtedness due him from the B. L. Co.

That said assignment was intended as a preference and to prevent said sum from being divided among his creditors proportionately and equitably, and as a transfer to his said former wife, so as to enable her to obtain a greater percentage of her debt than any other creditor of his in the same class.

That the said transfer was made while J. was utterly insolvent and knew himself to be insolvent, and such insolvency was known to Mrs. J., and that said transfer was known by her to be for the purpose of hindering, delaying and defrauding his other creditors.

That said R. J. J. and his wife had a property settlement of all their affairs, and in such settlement the said R. J. J. retained possession of said account against the B. L. Co. for his own use and benefit, and that the said transfer to his said former wife was not made to her in good faith.

That the said money is still in the possession of the B. L. Co.

That the plaintiff applied to the referee in bankruptcy where said petition in bankruptcy was filed for leave to preserve the said attachment lien for the benefit of the estate of said bankrupt, and so that the rights of said D. C. Co. under said attachment might be used for the benefit of the creditors of said bankrupt, and that upon notice to and waiver of the statutory time, and with the consent of the D. C. Co., said referee made an order permitting this plaintiff to bring this action to recover the said money and to maintain and preserve the lien of said attachment issued in said action of the D. C. Co. against the said R. J. J.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays that the said assignment of said claims be adjudged null and void and fraudulent as to creditors, and that plaintiff may have judgment against defendant for the sum of $369.35, with interest and costs.

PETITION BY RECEIVER FOR SALE OF PERISHABLE PROPERTY FREE FROM LIEN.

[Caption.]

To the Honorable C. C. K., Judge of said Court:

Your petitioner, the C. T. & T. Co., temporary receiver heretofore appointed by the Court in this cause, respectfully shows to the Court that your petitioner as such receiver has taken possession of the property and assets of the said bankrupt, all of which is situated at the premises ——— Street in the city of Chicago, Cook County, Illinois, excepting about 475 bags of timothy seed, which is in the C. D. Co. warehouse and the S. S. warehouse in said city, and your petitioner has been engaged in and has now about completed an inventory of said property; that upwards of $30,000.00 of said estate consists of seed, in substantially the following quantities: Timothy and clover seed, 4,539 bags; millet and hungarian, 1,081 bags; redtop, 322 bags; buckwheat, 584 bags, and a limited quantity of barley, rape, peas, blue grass, and some other kinds of grain, but comparatively small quantities, the season for the sale of which is now on or drawing to a close; and your petitioner further and more particularly shows that there is a present active market for timothy and clover for fall sowing, which activity will be practically ended in the course of the next two or three weeks and that there will then be no active market until the coming winter for the spring sowing season, except a few days in July for fall sowing; that the market for the sale of redtop is nearly over for this season, and that now for a very few weeks is the season for selling and disposing of hungarian, buckwheat and millet, so that the present time is the season or nearly the closing of the season for selling, marketing and disposing of substantially all of the said stock of seed and grain belonging to the said estate, and that it is and will be to the great interest and advantage of the said estate and of the creditors thereof to have the said stock sold immediately and that as speedy a sale as possible within a couple of weeks for the most of said stock and within a week or ten days thereafter for the remainder thereof is absolutely necessary to prevent great loss and depreciation in the value of said stock of seed and grain and to save the great expense and loss that would result from selling the same out of season or carrying it over to another season; and as showing the attitude and view of the creditors of the said estate as regards the necessity of a speedy sale of said stock of seed, your petitioner shows that on the afternoon of May 10th, instant, a meeting of the following creditors of the said estate, called by your petitioner at the request of some of said creditors, was held at room —, — Building in said city, namely:

F. E. W., J. A. P., M. T. Co., G. & Co., E. & D., M. S. H., F. N. B. of Chicago, H. W. R. & Bros., J. F. H., E. S. & Co., M. D. & Co., J. C. V., B. & S., and E. W. B., many of which creditors were personally present and also were represented by their attorneys at said meeting, and at said meeting the matter of said bankrupt's estate was considered by said creditors and it was the consensus of opinion of said creditors that the said stock of seed and grain should be sold speedily and for the reasons your petitioner has above in this petition set forth, and without formal action taken, it was agreed that your petitioner should prepare and present to this Court a petition for leave and authority to your petitioner as such receiver to sell the said stock immediately in the open markets and through the usual channels of trade, and that such petition be presented to this Court at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, May 11th, instant, and that the said creditors who attended said meeting would consider themselves as notified at such meeting of the presentation of such petition to this Court at said time on said May 11th without the service of further notice, and your petitioner shows that the said creditors, who are herein above named as attending said meeting have claims against the said estate aggregating about $59,500.00 in amount, the same being over nine-tenths of the indebtedness of said bankrupt, as appears from the schedules filed herein by said bankrupt and as your petitioner is informed and believes.

Your petitioner therefore prays the authority and direction of the court in the premises, and that if an order be entered for the sale of said stock of seed and there are any liens or claims of priority upon or with respect to any of said stock such lien be transferred to the funds arising out of the sale of the property by the proper order of the court.

And your petitioner will ever pray, etc.

SPECIAL APPEARANCE BY PLEDGEE, DENYING AUTHORITY TO SELL.

[Caption.]

The F. N. Bank of Chicago appears herein for the sole purpose of denying the jurisdiction of this court to enter an order as prayed in and by the petition of the C. T. & T. Co., the temporary receiver herein, filed herein May 13, A. D. 1901, or any order interfering with the control by this respondent of the property hereinafter described; and this respondent not waiving its objection to the jurisdiction of the court as aforesaid and for the sole purpose of supporting its said objection, shows to the court that it holds in pledge to secure indebtedness owing to it by the bankrupt, warehouse receipts issued by the N. S. Co., to said bankrupt as follows: ————.

Said warehouse receipts were all duly endorsed by the bankrupt and delivered and pledged to this respondent as aforesaid for moneys in good faith loaned and advanced to said bankrupt at the times, respectively, of the pledging of said receipts as aforesaid.

This respondent further says that all of the seed described in and covered by the warehouse receipts aforesaid is included, as this respondent is informed and believes, as a part of that which the temporary receiver herein claims in and by its petition aforesaid to have in its possession, but that as a matter of fact the said seed covered and represented by the warehouse receipts aforesaid is not and never has been in the possession of the said temporary receiver, and was not at the time of the bankruptcy or at any time since the issuing of the warehouse receipts therefor, respectively, as aforesaid, in the possession of the said bankrupt. On the contrary, the said seed represented and covered by the warehouse receipts aforesaid was and has been at all times since the issuing of the warehouse receipts therefor, respectively, as aforesaid, in the full possession and control of the said N. S. Co.

This respondent further shows to the court in support of its objection to the jurisdiction of the court as aforesaid, that although a representative of this respondent did attend the meeting mentioned in the said petition of the temporary receiver as held on the afternoon of May 10th, instant, this respondent by its said representative or otherwise did not concur in the proceedings of said meeting or in anything said or done thereat except to the extent of agreeing that the seed in question ought to be promptly sold in order not to lose a favorable market therefor, and this respondent therefore denies all the averments of said petitioner the effect that this respondent agreed to the filing of the petition aforesaid either with or without notice to this respondent. And this respondent denies also that it waived notice of the filing of said petition or of any other proceeding which might be taken by the temporary receiver or other parties involved, and on the contrary avers that it insisted that it would accept no notice and consent to no application to this court until what was proposed was put into writing and submitted, which was never done until the petition aforesaid was filed.

For the reason aforesaid this respondent denies the jurisdiction of the court herein and prays that said petition may on that account be dismissed, so far as the seed represented and covered by the warehouse receipts aforesaid held in pledge by this deponent is concerned.

REPORT OF SPECIAL MASTER IN COMPOSITION

[Caption.]

To the Honorable C. C. K., Judge of Said Court:

I, F. L. W., referee in bankruptcy to whom as special master was heretofore referred, the matter of the specifications of the objections to the confirmation of the composition in said cause filed herein on April 2nd, 1904, on behalf of J. T. and P. W. M. Co., and the A. W. Co., of New York, a corporation, creditors of said bankrupts, do hereby report:

That the said matter was duly set for hearing before me for argument on the sufficiency of said specifications and that on such argument it was contended that specification numbered 1, to the effect that the bankrupts had not nor had any or either of them filed any schedule of their individual property, was insufficient to warrant the Court in refusing to confirm the said composition.

It is also contended that specification numbered 8, filed on behalf of J. T., was not sufficient, if true, to prevent the confirmation of the composition because the statement charged was alleged to have been made to a commercial agency and not such false statement in writing made to the objecting creditor directly for the purpose of obtaining such property on credit.

As to specification No. 8 of J. T., referred to, I am of the opinion that a reasonable and proper construction of section 14b (3) would require the "materially false statement in writing" to be made direct to the creditor in question, and I deem the allegations in this specification which are to the effect that the alleged false statement was made to a commercial agency to be insufficient, and I am of the opinion that the specification should be overruled for this reason.

I am also of the opinion that specification No. 4, filed by the P. W. M. Co., is insufficient and should be overruled.

I am further of the opinion that the other specifications, if proven to be true, would be sufficient to prevent the confirmation of the composition and that, if the Court should determine that such specification 1 is insufficient, evidence should be heard with reference to other specifications.

Special Master.

That this action was brought in the year nineteen hundred and _____, for goods, wares and merchandise sold and delivered by the plaintiffs to the defendant, and on the _____ day of _____, 19—, a judgment was recovered in favor of the plaintiffs and against the defendant for the sum of $_____, which judgment was duly docketed in the office of the clerk of this Court on the _____ day of _____, 19—.

That thereafter and on or about the _____ day of _____, 19—, petitioner was duly adjudged a bankrupt by the United States District Court for the _____ District of _____, which court had jurisdiction to so adjudge petitioner bankrupt.

That your petitioner is a creditor of the above-named bankrupt, having a provable claim amounting, in excess of securities held by him and in excess of dividends received by him herein, to the sum of _____ Dollars ($_____), which has been proved and allowed herein, the nature of said claim being as follows:

That said claim is affected by the discharge herein.

That on the _____ day of _____, 19—, upon petition of the said bankrupt, this court made its order discharging the said bankrupt from his debts.

That the fraud, of the bankrupt, as aforesaid, was first discovered by your petitioner on the _____ day of _____, 19—, in the following manner: (Here state also the diligence used to discover the fraud.)

That the time for applying for an order revoking said discharge has not expired, and no application therefor has been previously made.

§ 1841. Form No. 173.*INDICTMENT FOR FALSE OATH.

Circuit Court of the United States of America for the Southern District of New York, in the Second Circuit.

At a stated term of the Circuit Court of the United States of America for the Southern District of New York, in the Second Circuit, begun and held in the City of New York, within and for the district and circuit aforesaid, on the first Monday of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ten, and continued by adjournment to and including the 24th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ten.

Southern District of New York, ss:

The jurors of the United States of America within and for the district and circuit aforesaid, on their oath present that on the 2d day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and nine, a petition in bankruptcy, dated on the 13th day of July, in said year, signed by W. S. M., petitioner, and creditor of the K. P. Co. (a corporation organized under the laws of New York), by and under the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy, was duly filed in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, praying that the said K. P. Co. should be adjudged an involuntary bankrupt; that on the said second day of August of the same year, J. W. was duly appointed receiver of the property, assets and effects of the said alleged bankrupt; that on the fourth day of August of the said year the said receiver, having duly qualified, petitioned the said Court for an order under Section 21a of the Bankruptcy Act, requiring the said K. P. Co., its officers and directors, to appear before a special examiner or commissioner to be appointed for that purpose, to be examined concerning their acts, conduct and property of the said alleged bankrupts; that on the said fourth day of August in the same year, an order was made by the Honorable C. M. H., judge of the said District Court, that the said examination should proceed before T. A., special commissioner and examiner, and that the witnesses should testify and give evidence before him as to the acts, conduct and property aforesaid; that on the nineteenth day of August of the said year the said K. P. Co. was duly adjudged an involuntary bankrupt and S. M. was duly appointed referee; that the said referee was duly authorized under and by virtue of the laws of the United States relating to bankruptcy to examine witnesses and require them to give evidence in any and all examinations before him as such referee; that pursuant to the said authority, A. B. C. named herein as defendant, appeared before the said referee on the twenty-eighth day of October, in the said year, to testify before him as such referee, and the said defendant was then and there duly sworn by the said referee at the city of New York in said Southern District of New York, who then and there had the right and authority and was a competent person to administer said oath under and by virtue of the order of the said court appointing him as such referee; and the said oath was authorized by the laws of the United States; and the said A. B. C. was then and there duly sworn that the evidence he should give in the proceedings then before the said referee should be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; and the said defendant was then and there examined by and before the said referee under and by authority of said oath concerning the acts, conduct and property of the said alleged bankrupt on the said twenty-eighth day of October in the said year and also on the ninth day of November in the same year. And thereafter on the ninth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ten, the said A. B. C. then and there perused and made himself acquainted with the testimony he had given as aforesaid and which had been reduced to type-writing, and signed the same with his name and was again sworn by the said referee, authorized and empowered as aforesaid, to the effect that the evidence which he, the said A. B. C., had so as aforesaid signed was the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and upon the examination aforesaid it became and was a material matter and inquiry in the said proceeding before the said referee to ascertain and discover what property and assets the said alleged bankrupt had, was entitled to, possessed of, or owned, and which should be administered by the court of bankruptcy pursuant to the provisions of the acts relating to bankruptcy, and it was especially a material matter and inquiry then and there:

First. As to whether or not he, the said A. B. C., had been able to obtain the address of W. C. S. or had ever known the same.

Second. As to whether or not the said A. B. C. had a conversation or conversations with the said W. C. S. in regard to his buying pianos of and from the said alleged bankrupt.

And the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do further present that he, the said A. B. C., having been sworn as aforesaid, then and there falsely, corruptly, knowingly, willfully and contrary to said oath, did swear and depose before the said referee, among other things, in substance and to the effect following, that is to say:

First. That he, the said A. B. C., had not been able to obtain the address of said W. C. S. and had never known the said address.

Second. That he, the said A. B. C., had had a conversation or conversations with the said W. C. S. in regard to his, the said W. C. S.'s buying pianos of and from the said alleged bankrupt.

Whereas, in truth and in fact, it was not and is not true and at the time of so swearing and deposing the said A. B. C. did not believe it to be true:

First. That he, the said A. B. C., had not been able to obtain the address of the said W. C. S. and had never known the same.

Whereas, in truth and in fact, it was not and is not true and at the time of so swearing and deposing the said A. B. C. did not believe it to be true:

Second. That he had a conversation or conversations with the said W. C. S. in regard to his, the said W. C. S.'s, buying pianos of and from the said alleged bankrupt.

And so the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do say that A. B. C., within the said jurisdiction, in manner and form aforesaid, having taken an oath before a competent tribunal in a cause wherein a law of the United States authorized an oath to be administered, that he, the said A. B. C., would truly depose and testify, willfully, falsely and contrary to his said oath, did depose and state material matters which he then did not believe to be true, and thereby did commit willful and corrupt perjury; against the peace of the United States and their dignity and contrary to the form of the statute of the United States in such case made and provided.

PETITION FOR REVISION OF ORDER OF DISTRICT COURT.

In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

In re D. N. H. and L. H., Bankrupts. No. ———.

To the Honorable the Judges of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit:

The petition of J. A. S. respectfully shows as follows:

I.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Washington, Northern Division, two separate proceedings were begun against D. N. H. and L. H., his wife, on the 19th day of January, 1901, to the end that they each be declared a bankrupt, and on the 9th day of February, 1901, these two proceedings were consolidated.

II.

Thereafter, on the 25th day of February, 1901, each of the aforesaid H.'s was adjudged a bankrupt, and thereafter, on the same proceedings, your petitioner became the duly elected and qualified trustee in bankruptcy of each of their estates under the laws of the United States.

III.

Thereafter the aforesaid bankrupts, and each of them, claimed exemption in their favor of two certain policies of life insurance in the hands of the trustee upon the life of D. N. H., payable to L. H., the wife. Of these policies copies are hereto annexed and made a part of this petition. As therein appears, these policies are, respectively, in the sum of $5,000 and $2,000 in the event of death, and have a present cash surrender value, combined, of about $2,200.

IV.

Such proceedings were had upon this application for exemption that the claim of the bankrupts was, on the 17th day of June, 1901, denied by the referee; but upon certification of the matter to the District Court, his action was, on July 16, 1901, overruled and the exemption in favor of the bankrupts by order was allowed.

V.

Your petitioner, considering himself aggrieved by this order of the District Court, respectfully applies to this Honorable Court for a revision and review thereof, to the end that the claim of exemption of the bankrupts of these policies of insurance may be denied and the action of the lower court corrected, and that such orders emanate from this court as are necessary to that end. For this purpose your petitioner annexes hereto a certified copy of so much of the record as will enable your Honorable Court to review and correct the action of the District Court with due care and justice to all concerned.

PETITION FOR WRIT OF ERROR FROM STATE COURT.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Georgia:

To the Honorable W. H. F., Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia:

The petition of T. M. K., Administrator of E. K., deceased, respectfully shows:

That on the 17th day of February, 1911, the Supreme Court of Georgia rendered final judgment against your petitioner in a certain cause wherein your petitioner was plaintiff in error and LaG. M. defendant in error, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court of Troup County, Georgia, against your petitioner and in favor of said LaG. M., in a suit filed by petitioner against said LaG. M. for the recovery of a one-fifth undivided interest in certain lands in said county, and for costs, as will fully appear by reference to the record and proceedings in said case, and that the said Supreme Court of Georgia is the highest court of said state in which a decision in said suit could be had.

And your petitioner claims the right to remove said judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error under Section 709 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, because it was contended by your petitioner before the Supreme Court of Georgia that the homestead exemption set apart in 1878 to G. K., bankrupt, was not subject to a judgment founded on a debt contracted prior to the adoption of the Constitution of the State of Georgia of 1868; that a sale of said homestead under an execution predicated on such judgment was void; that the title to the property thus sold remained in said G. K. until his death, when it descended by operation of law to his children, including plaintiff's estate; that under the agreed statement of facts, in which it appears that the defendant claims the premises under said void sale, the petitioner was entitled to recover the interest in the land sued for.

Upon the hearing of the said case the Supreme Court of Georgia held that "an exemption in bankruptcy made under the Constitution of 1868 is subject to a judgment founded on a debt contracted prior to the adoption of said Constitution," and affirmed the judgment of the court below in favor of the defendant therein and against your petitioner, as appears by the record of the proceedings in said cause, which is herewith submitted.

WHEREFORE, your petitioner prays the allowance of a writ of error, returnable to the Supreme Court of the United States, and for citation and supersedeas; and your petitioner will ever pray, etc.

RECEIVED TO THE CLERK OF THE COURT

GENERAL ORDERS IN BANKRUPTCY

ADOPTED AND ESTABLISHED BY THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, NOVEMBER 23, 1898

[AS AMENDED]

---

In pursuance of the powers conferred by the Constitution and laws upon the Supreme Court of the United States, and particularly by the act of Congress approved July 1, 1898, entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," it is ordered, on this 28th day of November, 1898, that the following rules be adopted and established as general orders in bankruptcy, to take effect on the first Monday, being the second day, of January, 1899. And it is further ordered that all proceedings in bankruptcy had before that day, in accordance with the act last aforesaid, and being in substantial conformity either with the provisions of these general orders, or else with the general orders established by this court under the bankrupt act of 1867 and with any general rules or special orders of the courts in bankruptcy, stand good, subject, however, to such further regulation by rule or order of those courts as may be necessary or proper to carry into force and effect the bankrupt act of 1898 and the general orders of this court.

DOCKET

The clerk shall keep a docket, in which the cases shall be entered and numbered in the order in which they are commenced. It shall contain a memorandum of the filing of the petition and of the action of the court thereon, of the reference of the case to the referee, and of the transmission by him to the clerk of his certified record of the proceedings, with the dates thereof, and a memorandum of all proceedings in the case except those duly entered on the referee's certified record aforesaid. The docket shall be arranged in a manner convenient for reference, and shall at all times be open to public inspection.

Secs. 163, 177.

FILING OF PAPERS

The clerk or the referee shall indorse on each paper filed with him the day and hour of filing, and a brief statement of its character.

III

PROCESS

All process, summons and subpoenas shall issue out of the court, under the seal thereof, and be tested by the clerk; and blanks, with the signature of the clerk and seal of the court, may, upon application, be furnished to the referees.

CONDUCT OF PROCEEDINGS

Proceedings in bankruptcy may be conducted by the bankrupt in person in his own behalf, or by a petitioning or opposing creditor; but a creditor will only be allowed to manage before the court his individual interest. Every party may appear and conduct the proceedings by attorney, who shall be an attorney or counsellor authorized to practice in the circuit or district court. The name of the attorney or counsellor, with his place of business, shall be entered upon the docket, with the date of the entry. All papers or proceedings offered by an attorney to be filed shall be indorsed as above required, and orders granted on motion shall contain the name of the party or attorney making the motion. Notices and orders which are not, by the act or by these general orders, required to be served on the party personally may be served upon his attorney.

Secs. 9, 177, 454.

V

FRAME OF PETITIONS

All petitions and the schedules filed therewith shall be printed or written out plainly, without abbreviation or interlineation, except where such abbreviation and interlineation may be for the purpose of reference.

Secs. 153, 400.

VI

PETITIONS IN DIFFERENT DISTRICTS

In case two or more petitions shall be filed against the same individual in different districts, the first hearing shall be had in the district in which the debtor has his domicile, and the petition may be amended by inserting an allegation of an act of bankruptcy committed at an earlier date than that first alleged, if such earlier act is charged in either of the other petitions; and in case of two or more petitions against the same partnership in different courts, each having jurisdiction over the case, the petition first filed shall be first heard, and may be amended by the insertion of an allegation of an earlier act of bankruptcy than that first alleged, if such earlier act is charged in either of the other petitions; and, in either case, the proceedings upon the other petitions may be stayed until an adjudication is made upon the petition first heard; and the court which makes the first adjudication of bankruptcy shall retain jurisdiction over all proceedings therein until the same shall be closed. In case two or more petitions shall be filed in different districts by different members of the same partnership for an adjudication of the bankruptcy of said partnership, the court in which the petition is first filed, having jurisdiction, shall take and retain jurisdiction over all proceedings in such bankruptcy until the same shall be closed; and if such petitions shall be filed in the same district, action shall be first had upon the one first filed. But the court so retaining jurisdiction shall, if satisfied that it is for the greatest convenience of parties in interest that another of said courts should proceed with the cases, order them to be transferred to that court.

Secs. 14, 27.

VII

PRIORITY OF PETITIONS

Whenever two or more petitions shall be filed by creditors against a common debtor, alleging separate acts of bankruptcy committed by said debtor on different days within four months prior to the filing of said petitions, and the debtor shall appear and show cause against an adjudication of bankruptcy against him on the petitions, that petition shall be first heard and tried which alleges the commission of the earliest act of bankruptcy; and in case the several acts of bankruptcy are alleged in the different petitions to have been committed on the same day, the court before which the same are pending may order them to be consolidated, and proceed to a hearing as upon one petition; and if an adjudication of bankruptcy be made upon either petition, or for the commission of a single act of bankruptcy, it shall not be necessary to proceed to a hearing upon the remaining petitions, unless proceedings be taken by the debtor for the purpose of causing such adjudication to be annulled or vacated.

Secs. 9, 14, 27, 113, 247.

PROCEEDINGS IN PARTNERSHIP CASES

Any member of a partnership, who refuses to join in a petition to have the partnership declared bankrupt, shall be entitled to resist the prayer of the petition in the same manner as if the petition had been filed by a creditor of the partnership, and notice of the filing of the petition shall be given to him in the same manner as provided by law and by these rules in the case of a debtor petitioned against; and he shall have the right to appear at the time fixed by the court for the hearing of the petition, and to make proof, if he can, that the partnership is not insolvent or has not committed an act of bankruptcy, and to make all defenses which any debtor proceeded against is entitled to take by the provisions of the act; and in case an adjudication of bankruptcy is made upon the petition, such partner shall be required to file a schedule of his debts and an inventory of his property in the same manner as is required by the act in cases of debtors against whom adjudication of bankruptcy shall be made.

SCHEDULE IN INVOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY

In all cases of involuntary bankruptcy in which the bankrupt is absent or can not be found, it shall be the duty of the petitioning creditor to file, within five days after the date of the adjudication, a schedule giving the names and places of residence of all the creditors of the bankrupt, according to the best information of the petitioning creditor. If the debtor is found, and is served with notice to furnish a schedule of his creditors and fails to do so, the petitioning creditor may apply for an attachment against the debtor, or may himself furnish such schedule as aforesaid.

Secs. 344, 398.

X

INDEMNITY FOR EXPENSES

Before incurring any expense in publishing or mailing notices, or in travelling, or in procuring the attendance of witnesses, or in perpetuating testimony, the clerk, marshal, or referee may require, from the bankrupt or other person in whose behalf the duty is to be performed, indemnity for such expense. Money advanced for this purpose by the bankrupt or other person shall be repaid him out of the estate as part of the cost of administering the same.

Secs. 31, 34, 365, 669.

AMENDMENTS

The court may allow amendments to the petition and schedules on application of the petitioner. Amendments shall be printed or written, signed and verified, like original petitions and schedules. If amendments are made to separate schedules, the same must be made separately, with proper references. In the application for leave to amend, the petitioner shall state the cause of the error in the paper originally filed.

XII

DUTIES OF REFEREE

1. The order referring a case to a referee shall name a day upon which the bankrupt shall attend before the referee; and from that day the bankrupt shall be subject to the orders of the court in all matters relating to his bankruptcy, and may receive from the referee a protection against arrest, to continue until the final adjudication on his application for a discharge, unless suspended or vacated by order of the court. A copy of the order shall forthwith be sent by mail to the referee, or be delivered to him personally by the clerk or other officer of the court. And thereafter all the proceedings, except such as are required by the act or by these general orders to be had before the judge, shall be had before the referee.

Secs. 9, 10, 30, 322, 333, 334, 422, 424, 425.

2. The time when and the place where the referees shall act upon the matters arising under the several cases referred to them shall be fixed by special order of the judge, or by the referee; and at such times and places the referees may perform the duties which they are empowered by the act to perform.

3. Applications for a discharge, or for the approval of a composition, or for an injunction to stay proceedings of a court or officer of the United States or of a State, shall be heard and decided by the judge. But he may refer such an application, or any specified issue arising thereon, to the referee to ascertain and report the facts.

XIII

APPOINTMENT AND REMOVAL OF TRUSTEE

The appointment of a trustee by the creditors shall be subject to be approved or disapproved by the referee or by the judge; and he shall be removable by the judge only.

Secs. 9, 682, 700.

XIV

NO OFFICIAL OR GENERAL TRUSTEE

No official trustee shall be appointed by the court, nor any general trustee to act in classes of cases.

Sec. 675.

XV

TRUSTEE NOT APPOINTED IN CERTAIN CASES

If the schedule of a voluntary bankrupt discloses no assets, and if no creditor appears at the first meeting, the court may, by order setting out the facts, direct that no trustee be appointed; but at any time thereafter a trustee may be appointed, if the court shall deem it desirable. If no trustee is appointed as aforesaid, the court may order that no meeting of the creditors other than the first meeting shall be called.

Secs. 435, 443, 678.

XVI

NOTICE TO TRUSTEE OF HIS APPOINTMENT

It shall be the duty of the referee, immediately upon the appointment and approval of the trustee, to notify him in person or by mail of his appointment; and the notice shall require the trustee forthwith to notify the referee of his acceptance or rejection of the trust, and shall contain a statement of the penal sum of the trustee's bond.

Sec. 684.

XVII

DUTIES OF TRUSTEE

The trustee shall, immediately upon entering upon his duties, prepare a complete inventory of all the property of the bankrupt that comes into his possession. The trustee shall make report to the court, within twenty days after receiving the notice of his appointment, of the articles set off to the bankrupt by him, according to the provisions of the forty-seventh section of the act, with the estimated value of each article, and any creditor may take exceptions to the determination of the trustee within twenty days after the filing of the report. The referee may require the exceptions to be argued before him, and shall certify them to the court for final determination at the request of either party. In case the trustee shall neglect to file any report or statement which it is made his duty to file or make by the act, or by any general order in bankruptcy, within five days after the same shall be due, it shall be the duty of the referee to make an order requiring the trustee to show cause before the judge, at a time specified in the order, why he should not be removed from office. The referee shall cause a copy of the order to be served upon the trustee at least seven days before the time fixed for the hearing, and proof of the service thereof to be delivered to the clerk. All accounts of trustees shall be referred as of course to the referee for audit, unless otherwise specially ordered by the court.

XVIII

SALE OF PROPERTY

1. All sales shall be by public auction unless otherwise ordered by the court.

Secs. 727, 1275-1284, 1364.

2. Upon application to the court, and for good cause shown, the trustee may be authorized to sell any specified portion of the bankrupt's estate at private sale; in which case he shall keep an accurate account of each article sold, and the price received therefor, and to whom sold; which account he shall file at once with the referee.

Sec. 1278.

3. Upon petition by a bankrupt, creditor, receiver or trustee, setting forth that a part or the whole of the bankrupt's estate is perishable, the nature and location of such perishable estate, and that there will be loss if the same is not sold immediately, the court, if satisfied of the facts stated and that the sale is required in the interest of the estate, may order the same to be sold, with or without notice to the creditors, and the proceeds to be deposited in court.

XIX

ACCOUNTS OF MARSHAL

The marshal shall make return, under oath, of his actual and necessary expenses in the service of every warrant addressed to him, and for custody of property, and other services, and other actual and necessary expenses paid by him, with vouchers therefor whenever practicable, and also with a statement that the amounts charged by him are just and reasonable.

XX

PAPERS FILED AFTER REFERENCE

Proofs of claims and other papers filed subsequently to the reference, except such as call for action by the judge, may be filed either with the referee or with the clerk.

Sec. 603.

XXI

PROOF OF DEBTS

1. Depositions to prove claims against a bankrupt's estate shall be correctly entitled in the court and in the cause. When made to prove a debt due to a partnership, it must appear on oath that the deponent is a member of the partnership; when made by an agent, the reason the deposition is not made by the claimant in person must be stated; and when made to prove a debt due to a corporation, the deposition shall be made by the treasurer, or, if the corporation has no treasurer, by the officer whose duties most nearly correspond to those of treasurer; if the treasurer or corresponding officer is not within the district wherein the bankruptcy proceedings are pending, the deposition may be made by some officer or agent of the corporation having knowledge of the facts. Depositions to prove debts existing in open account shall state when the debt became or will become due; and if it consists of items maturing at different dates the average due date shall be stated, in default of which it shall not be necessary to compute interest upon it. All such depositions shall contain an averment that no note has been received for such account, nor any judgment rendered thereon. Proofs of debt received by any trustee shall be delivered to the referee to whom the cause is referred.

Secs. 185, 595, 607-614.

2. Any creditor may file with the referee a request that all notices to which he may be entitled shall be addressed to him at any place, to be designated by the post-office box or street number, as he may appoint; and thereafter, and until some other designation shall be made by such creditor, all notices shall be so addressed; and in other cases notices shall be addressed as specified in the proof of debt.

Sec. 342.

3. Claims which have been assigned before proof shall be supported by a deposition of the owner at the time of the commencement of proceedings, setting forth the true consideration of the debt and that it is entirely unsecured, or if secured, the security, as is required in proving secured claims. Upon the filing of satisfactory proof of the assignment of a claim proved and entered on the referee's docket, the referee shall immediately give notice by mail to the original claimant of the filing of such proof of assignment; and, if no objection be entered within ten days, or within further time allowed by the referee, he shall make an order subrogating the assignee to the original claimant. If objection be made, he shall proceed to hear and determine the matter.

Sec. 610.

4. The claims of persons contingently liable for the bankrupt may be proved in the name of the creditor when known by the party contingently liable. When the name of the creditor is unknown, such claim may be proved in the name of the party contingently liable; but no dividend shall be paid upon such claim, except upon satisfactory proof that it will diminish pro tanto the original debt.

Sec. 597.

5. The execution of any letter of attorney to represent a creditor, or of an assignment of claim after proof, may be proved or acknowledged before a referee, or a United States commissioner, or a notary public.

When executed on behalf of a partnership or of a corporation, the person executing the instrument shall make oath that he is a member of the partnership, or a duly authorized officer of the corporation on whose behalf he acts. When the person executing is not personally known to the officer taking the proof or acknowledgment, his identity shall be established by satisfactory proof.

Secs. 454, 463.

6. When the trustee or any creditor shall desire the re-examination of any claim filed against the bankrupt's estate, he may apply by petition to the referee to whom the case is referred for an order for such re-examination, and thereupon the referee shall make an order fixing a time for hearing the petition, of which due notice shall be given by mail addressed to the creditor. At the time appointed the referee shall take the examination of the creditor, and of any witnesses that may be called by either party, and if it shall appear from such examination that the claim ought to be expunged or diminished, the referee may order accordingly.

Secs. 444, 662-669.

XXII

TAKING OF TESTIMONY

The examination of witnesses before the referee may be conducted by the party in person or by his counsel or attorney, and the witnesses shall be subject to examination and cross-examination, which shall be had in conformity with the mode now adopted in courts of law. A deposition taken upon an examination before a referee shall be taken down in writing by him, or under his direction, in the form of narrative, unless he determines that the examination shall be by question and answer. When completed it shall be read over to the witness and signed by him in the presence of the referee. The referee shall note upon the deposition any question objected to, with his decision thereon; and the court shall have power to deal with the costs of incompetent, immaterial, or irrelevant depositions, or parts of them, as may be just.

XXIII

ORDERS OF REFEREE

In all orders made by a referee, it shall be recited, according as the fact may be, that notice was given and the manner thereof; or that the order was made by consent; or that no adverse interest was represented at the hearing; or that the order was made after hearing adverse interests.

Sec. 348.

XXIV

TRANSMISSION OF PROVED CLAIMS TO CLERK

The referee shall forthwith transmit to the clerk a list of the claims proved against an estate, with the names and addresses of the proving creditors.

XXV

SPECIAL MEETING OF CREDITORS

Whenever, by reason of a vacancy in the office of trustee, or for any other cause, it becomes necessary to call a special meeting of the creditors in order to carry out the purposes of the act, the court may call such a meeting, specifying in the notice the purpose for which it is called.

Sec. 443.

XXVI

ACCOUNTS OF REFEREE

Every referee shall keep an accurate account of his travelling and incidental expenses, and of those of any clerk or other officer attending him in the performance of his duties in any case which may be referred to him; and shall make return of the same under oath to the judge, with proper vouchers when vouchers can be procured, on the first Tuesday in each month.

XXVII

REVIEW BY JUDGE

When a bankrupt, creditor, trustee, or other person shall desire a review by the judge of any order made by the referee, he shall file with the referee his petition therefor, setting out the error complained of; and the referee shall forthwith certify to the judge the question presented, a summary of the evidence relating thereto, and the finding and order of the referee thereon.

Secs. 355-361, 408.

XXVIII

REDEMPTION OF PROPERTY AND COMPOUNDING OF CLAIMS

Whenever it may be deemed for the benefit of the estate of a bankrupt to redeem and discharge any mortgage or other pledge, or deposit or lien, upon any property, real or personal, or to relieve said property from any conditional contract, and to tender performance of the conditions thereof, or to compound and settle any debts or other claims due or belonging to the estate of the bankrupt, the trustee, or the bankrupt, or any creditor who has proved his debt, may file his petition therefor; and thereupon the court shall appoint a suitable time and place for the hearing thereof, notice of which shall be given as the court shall direct, so that all creditors and other persons interested may appear and show cause, if any they have, why an order should not be passed by the court upon the petition authorizing such act on the part of the trustee.

PAYMENT OF MONEYS DEPOSITED

No moneys deposited as required by the act shall be drawn from the depository unless by check or warrant, signed by the clerk of the court, or by a trustee, and countersigned by the judge of the court, or by a referee designated for that purpose, or by the clerk or his assistant under an order made by the judge, stating the date, the sum, and the account for which it is drawn; and an entry of the substance of such check or warrant, with the date thereof, the sum drawn for, and the account for which it is drawn, shall be forthwith made in a book kept for that purpose by the trustee or his clerk; and all checks and drafts shall be entered in the order of time in which they are drawn, and shall be numbered in the case of each estate. A copy of this general order shall be furnished to the depository, and also the name of any referee or clerk authorized to countersign said checks.

Sec. 341.

XXX

IMPRISONED DEBTOR

If, at the time of preferring his petition, the debtor shall be imprisoned, the court, upon application, may order him to be produced upon habeas corpus, by the jailor or any officer in whose custody he may be, before the referee, for the purpose of testifying in any matter relating to his bankruptcy; and, if committed after the filing of his petition upon process in any civil action founded upon a claim provable in bankruptcy, the court may, upon like application, discharge him from such imprisonment. If the petitioner, during the pendency of the proceedings in bankruptcy, be arrested or imprisoned upon process in any civil action, the district court, upon his application, may issue a writ of habeas corpus to bring him before the court to ascertain whether such process has been issued for the collection of any claim provable in bankruptcy, and if so provable he shall be discharged; if not, he shall be remanded to the custody in which he may lawfully be. Before granting the order for discharge the court shall cause notice to be served upon the creditor or his attorney, so as to give him an opportunity of appearing and being heard before the granting of the order.

Sec. 427.

XXXI

PETITION FOR DISCHARGE

The petition of a bankrupt for a discharge shall state concisely, in accordance with the provisions of the act and the orders of the court, the proceedings in the case and the acts of the bankrupt.

XXXII

OPPOSITION TO DISCHARGE OR COMPOSITION

A creditor opposing the application of a bankrupt for his discharge, or for the confirmation of a composition, shall enter his appearance in opposition thereto on the day when the creditors are required to show cause, and shall file a specification in writing of the grounds of his opposition within ten days thereafter, unless the time shall be enlarged by special order of the judge.

XXXIII

ARBITRATION

Whenever a trustee shall make application to the court for authority to submit a controversy arising in the settlement of a demand against a bankrupt's estate, or for a debt due to it, to the determination of arbitrators, or for authority to compound and settle such controversy by agreement with the other party, the application shall clearly and distinctly set forth the subject-matter of the controversy, and the reasons why the trustee thinks it proper and most for the interest of the estate that the controversy should be settled by arbitration or otherwise.

Secs. 1186-1194.

XXXIV

COSTS IN CONTESTED ADJUDICATIONS

In cases of involuntary bankruptcy, when the debtor resists an adjudication, and the court, after hearing, adjudges the debtor a bankrupt, the petitioning creditor shall recover, and be paid out of the estate, the same costs that are allowed to a party recovering in a suit in equity; and if the petition is dismissed, the debtor shall recover like costs against the petitioner.

XXXV

COMPENSATION OF CLERKS, REFEREES AND TRUSTEES

1. The fees allowed by the act to clerks shall be in full compensation for all services performed by them in regard to filing petitions or other papers required by the act to be filed with them, or in certifying or delivering papers or copies of records to referees or other officers, or in receiving or paying out money; but shall not include copies furnished to other persons, or expenses necessarily incurred in publishing or mailing notices or other papers.

2. The compensation of referees, prescribed by the act, shall be in full compensation for all services performed by them under the act, or under these general orders; but shall not include expenses necessarily incurred by them in publishing or mailing notices, in travelling, or in perpetuating testimony, or other expenses necessarily incurred in the performance of their duties under the act and allowed by special order of the judge.

Secs. 34, 365.

3. The compensation allowed to trustees by the act shall be in full compensation for the services performed by them; but shall not include expenses necessarily incurred in the performance of their duties and allowed upon the settlement of their accounts.

Sec. 705.

4. Sec. 152.

(e) In computing the number of creditors of a bankrupt for the purpose of determining how many creditors must join in the petition, such creditors as were employed by him at the time of the filing of the petition or are related to him by consanguinity or affinity within the third degree, as determined by the common law, and have not joined in the petition, shall not be counted.

[1 July, 1898, 30 Stat. L., 561, c. 541, s. 59; 2 Supp., 862. 25 June, 1910, 36 Stat. L., 841, c. 412, s. 10.]

Where the preference consists in a transfer, such period of four months shall not expire until four months after the date of the recording or registering of the transfer, if by law such recording or registering is required.

And, for the purpose of such recovery, any court of bankruptcy, as hereinbefore defined, and any State court which would have had jurisdiction if bankruptcy had not intervened, shall have concurrent jurisdiction.

(c) If a creditor has been preferred, and afterwards in good faith gives the debtor further credit without security of any kind for property which becomes a part of the debtor's estates, the amount of such new credit remaining unpaid at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy may be set off against the amount which would otherwise be recoverable from him.

Sec. 982.

(d) If a debtor shall, directly or indirectly, in contemplation of the filing of a petition by or against him, pay money or transfer property to an attorney and counselor at law, solicitor in equity, or proctor in admiralty for services to be rendered, the transaction shall be reexamined by the court on petition of the trustee or any creditor and shall only be held valid to the extent of a reasonable amount to be determined by the court, and the excess may be recovered by the trustee for the benefit of the estate. # THE NATIONAL BANKRUPTCY LAW OF 1867 AND AMENDMENTS

---

AN ACT to establish a uniform System of Bankruptcy throughout the United States <sup>1</sup>

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the several District Courts of the United States be, and they hereby are, constituted courts of bankruptcy, and they shall have original jurisdiction in their respective districts in all matters and proceedings in bankruptcy, and they are hereby authorized to hear and adjudicate upon the same according to the provisions of this act. The said courts shall be always open for the transaction of business under this act, and the powers and jurisdiction hereby granted and conferred shall be exercised as well in vacation as in term time, and a judge sitting at chambers shall have the same powers and jurisdiction, including the power of keeping order and of punishing any contempt of his authority, as when sitting in court. And the jurisdiction hereby conferred shall extend to all cases and controversies arising between the bankrupt and any creditor or creditors who shall claim any debt or demand under the bankruptcy; to the collection of all the assets of the bankrupt; to the ascertainment and liquidation of the liens and other specific claims thereon; to the adjustment of the various priorities and conflicting interests of all parties; and to the marshalling and disposition of the different funds and assets, so as to secure the rights of all parties and due distribution of the assets among all the creditors; and to all acts, matters, and things to be done under and in virtue of the bankruptcy, until the final distribution and settlement of the estate of the bankrupt, and the close of the proceedings in bankruptcy. The said courts shall have full authority to compel obedience to all orders and decrees passed by them in bankruptcy, by process of contempt and other remedial process, to the same extent that the circuit courts now have in any suit pending therein in equity. Said courts may sit, for the transaction of business in bankruptcy, at any place in the district, of which place and the time of holding court they shall have given notice, as well as at the places designated by law for holding such courts.<sup>2</sup>

1—This act, together with the act of June 22, 1874, and all acts in amendment or supplementary thereto or in explanation thereof, were repealed by the act of June 7, 1878, to take effect September 1, 1878 (20 St. L. 99).

2—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 178, § 2), amends this section by adding thereto the following words: "Provided,

That the court having charge of the estate of any bankrupt may direct that any of the legal assets or debts of the bankrupt, as contradistinguished from equitable demands, shall, when such debt does not exceed five hundred dollars, be collected in the courts of the State where such bankrupt resides having jurisdiction of claims of such nature and amount."

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the several circuit courts of the United States, within and for the districts where the proceedings in bankruptcy shall be pending, shall have a general superintendence and jurisdiction of all cases and questions arising under this act; and, except when special provision is otherwise made, may, upon bill, petition, or other proper process, of any party aggrieved, hear and determine the case in a court of equity. The powers and jurisdiction hereby granted may be exercised either by said court or by any justice thereof in term time or vacation. Said circuit courts shall also have concurrent jurisdiction with the district courts of the <sup>3</sup> same district of all suits at law or in equity which may or shall be brought by the assignee in bankruptcy against any person claiming an adverse interest,<sup>4</sup> or by such person against such assignee, touching any property or rights of property of said bankrupt transferable to or vested in such assignee; but no suit at law or in equity shall in any case be maintainable by or against such assignee, or by or against any person claiming an adverse interest, touching the property and rights of property aforesaid, in any court whatsoever, unless the same shall be brought within two years from the time the cause of action accrued, for or against such assignee: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall revive a right of action barred at the time such assignee is appointed.

OF THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE LAW IN COURTS OF BANKRUPTCY

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the judges of the district courts of the United States, within and for the several districts, to appoint in each Congressional district in said districts, upon the nomination and recommendation of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, one or more registers in bankruptcy, to assist the judge of the district court in the performance of his duties under this act. No person shall be eligible to such appointment unless he be a counsellor of said court, or of some one of the courts of record of the state in which he resides. Before entering upon the duties of his office, every person so appointed a register in bankruptcy shall give a bond to the United States, with condition that he will faithfully discharge the duties of his office, in a sum not less than one thousand dollars, to be fixed by said court, with sureties satisfactory to said court, or to either of the said justices thereof; and he shall, in open court, take and subscribe the oath prescribed in the act entitled "An act to prescribe an oath of office, and for other purposes," approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and also that he will not, during his continuance in office, be, directly or indirectly, interested in or benefited by the fees or emoluments arising from any suit or matter pending in bankruptcy, in either the district or circuit court in his district.

SEC. 4.<sup>5</sup> And be it further enacted, That every register in bankruptcy, so appointed and qualified, shall have power, and it shall be his duty, to make adjudication of bankruptcy, to receive the surrender of any bankrupt, to administer oaths in all proceedings before him, to hold and preside at meetings of creditors, to take proof of debts, to make all computations of dividends, and all orders of distribution, and to furnish the assignee with a certified copy of such orders, and of the schedules of creditors and assets filed in each case, to audit and pass accounts of assignees, to grant protection, to pass the last examination of any bankrupt in cases whenever the assignee or a creditor do not oppose, and to sit in chambers and dispatch there such part of the administrative business of the court and such uncontested matters as shall be defined in general rules and orders, or as the district judge shall in any particular matter direct; and he shall also make short memoranda of his proceedings in each case in which he shall act, in a docket to be kept by him for that purpose, and he shall forthwith, as the proceedings are taken, forward to the clerk of the district court a certified copy of said memoranda, which shall be entered by said clerk in the proper minute-book to be kept in his office, and any register of the court may act for any other register thereof: Provided, however, That nothing in this section contained shall empower a register to commit for contempt, or to hear a disputed adjudication, or any question of the allowance or suspension of an order of discharge; but in all matters where an issue of fact or of law is raised and contested by any party to the proceedings before him, it shall be his duty to cause the question or issue to be stated by the opposing parties in writing, and he shall adjourn the same into court for decision by the judge.<sup>6</sup> No register shall be of counsel or attorney, either in or out of court, in any suit or matter pending in bankruptcy in either the circuit or district court of his district, nor in an appeal therefrom; nor shall he be executor, administrator, guardian, commissioner, appraiser, divider, or assignee of or upon any estate within the jurisdiction of either of said courts of bankruptcy, nor be interested in the fees or emoluments arising from either of said trusts. The fees of said registers, as established by this act, and by the general rules and orders required to be framed under it, shall be paid to them by the parties for whom the services may be rendered in the course of proceedings authorized by this act.

3—Section 3 of the above act of 1874 inserts the word "any" in lieu of the word "same."

4—Section 3 of the act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 178), here adds the words, "or owing any debt to such bankrupt."

5—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 185, § 19), requires the register to make a report to the clerk of the court of the business transacted by him.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the judge of the district court may direct a register to attend at any place within the district for the purpose of hearing such voluntary applications under this act as may not be opposed, of attending any meeting of creditors, or receiving any proof of debts, and, generally, for the prosecution of any bankruptcy or other proceedings under this act; and the travelling and incidental expenses of such register, and of any clerk or other officer attending him, incurred

6—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 184, § 18), makes the following amendment: And no register or clerk of court, or any partner or clerk of such register or clerk of court, or any person having any interest with either in any fees or emoluments in bankruptcy, or with whom such register or clerk of court shall have any interest in respect to any matter in bankruptcy, shall be of counsel, solicitor, or attorney, either in or out of court, in any suit or matter pending in bankruptcy in either the circuit or district court of his district, or in an appeal therefrom. Nor shall they, or either of them, be executor, administrator, guardian, commissioner, appraiser, divider, or assignee of or upon any estate within the jurisdiction of either of said courts of bankruptcy; nor be interested, directly or indirectly, in the fees or emoluments arising from either of said trusts.

in so acting, shall be set[tled] by said court in accordance with the rules prescribed under the tenth section of this act, and paid out of the assets of the estate in respect of which such register has so acted; or, if there be no such assets, or if the assets shall be insufficient, then such expenses shall form a part of the costs in the case or cases in which the register shall have acted in such journey, to be apportioned by the judge, and such register, so acting, shall have and exercise all powers, except the power of commitment, vested in the district court for the summoning and examination of persons or witnesses, and for requiring the production of books, papers and documents: Provided, always, That all depositions of persons and witnesses taken before said register, and all acts done by him, shall be reduced to writing, and be signed by him, and shall be filed in the clerk's office as part of the proceedings. Such register shall be subject to removal by the judge of the district court, and all vacancies occurring by such removal, or by resignation, change of residence, death or disability, shall be promptly filled by other fit persons, unless said court shall deem the continuance of the particular office unnecessary.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That any party shall, during the proceedings before a register, be at liberty to take the opinion of the district judge upon any point or matter arising in the course of such proceedings, or upon the result of such proceedings, which shall be stated by the register in the shape of a short certificate to the judge, who shall sign the same if he approve thereof; and such certificate, so signed, shall be binding on all the parties to the proceeding; but every such certificate may be discharged or varied by the judge at chambers or in open court. In any bankruptcy, or in any other proceedings within the jurisdiction of the court, under this act, the parties concerned, or submitting to such jurisdiction, may at any stage of the proceedings, by consent, state any question or questions in a special case for the opinion of the court, and the judgment of the court shall be final unless it be agreed and stated in such special case that either party may appeal, if, in such case, an appeal is allowed by this act. The parties may also, if they think fit, agree, that upon the question or questions raised by such special case being finally decided, a sum of money, fixed by the parties, or to be ascertained by the court, or in such manner as the court may direct, or any property, or the amount of any disputed debt or claim, shall be paid, delivered or transferred by one of such parties to the other of them either with or without costs.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That parties and witnesses summoned before a register shall be bound to attend in pursuance of such summons at the place and time designated therein, and shall be entitled to protection, and be liable to process of contempt in like manner as parties and witnesses are now liable thereto in case of default in attendance under any writ of subpoena, and all persons wilfully and corruptly swearing or affirming falsely before a register shall be liable to all the penalties, punishments, and consequences of perjury. If any person examined before a register shall refuse or decline to answer, or to swear to or sign his examination when taken, the register shall refer the matter to the judge, who shall have power to order the person so acting to pay the costs thereby occasioned, if such person be compellable by law to answer such question or to sign such examination, and such person shall also be liable to be punished for contempt.

OF APPEALS AND PRACTICE

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That appeals may be taken from the district to the circuit courts in all cases of equity, and writs of error may be allowed to said circuit courts from said district courts in cases at law under the jurisdiction created by this act, when the debt or damages claimed amount to more than five hundred dollars, and any supposed creditor, whose claim is wholly or in part rejected, or an assignee who is dissatisfied with the allowance of a claim may appeal from the decision of the district court to the circuit court from the same district; but no appeal shall be allowed in any case from the district to the circuit court unless it is claimed, and notice given thereof to the clerk of the district court, to be entered with the record of the proceedings, and also to the assignee or creditor, as the case may be, or to the defeated party in equity, within ten days after the entry of the decree or decision appealed from. The appeal shall be entered at the term of the circuit court which shall be first held within and for the district next after the expiration of ten days from the time of claiming the same. But if the appellant in writing waives his appeal before any decision thereon, proceedings may be had in the district court as if no appeal had been taken; and no appeal shall be allowed unless the appellant at the time of claiming the same shall give bond in man[ner] now required by law in cases of such appeals. No writ of error shall be allowed unless the party claiming it shall comply with the statutes regulating the granting of such writs.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That in cases arising under this act no appeal or writ of error shall be allowed in any case from the circuit courts to the Supreme Court of the United States, unless the matter in dispute in such case shall exceed two thousand dollars.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That the Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, subject to the provisions of this act, shall frame general orders for the following purposes:

For regulating the practice and procedure of the district courts in bankruptcy, and the several forms of petitions, orders, and other proceedings to be used in said courts in all matters under this act;

For regulating the duties of the various officers of said courts;

For regulating the fees<sup>7</sup> payable and the charges and costs to be allowed, except such<sup>8</sup> as are established by this act or by law, with respect to all proceedings in bankruptcy before said courts, not exceeding the rate of fees now allowed by law for similar services in other proceedings;

For regulating the practice and procedure upon appeals;

For regulating the filing, custody, and inspection of records;

And generally for carrying the provisions of this act into effect.

After such general orders shall have been so framed, they or any of them may be rescinded or varied, and other general orders may be framed in manner aforesaid; and all such general orders so framed shall from time to time be reported to Congress, with such suggestions as said justices may think proper.

8—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L.

184, § 18), repeals the words "except such as are established by this act or by law."

VOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY—COMMENCEMENT OF PROCEEDINGS

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That if any person residing within the jurisdiction of the United States, owing debts provable under this act exceeding the amount of three hundred dollars, shall apply by petition addressed to the judge of the judicial district in which such debtor has resided or carried on business for the six months next immediately preceding the time of filing of such petition, or for the longest period during such six months, setting forth his place of residence, his inability to pay all his debts in full, his willingness to surrender all his estate and effects for the benefit of his creditors and his desire to obtain the benefit of this act, and shall annex to his petition a schedule, verified by oath before the court or before a register in bankruptcy, or before one of the commissioners of the circuit court of the United States, containing a full and true statement of all his debts, and, as far as possible, to whom due, with the place of residence of each creditor, if known to the debtor, and if not known the fact to be so stated, and the sum due to each creditor; also, the nature of each debt or demand, whether founded on written security, obligation, contract, or otherwise, and also the true cause and consideration of such indebtedness in each case, and the place where such indebtedness accrued, and a statement of any existing mortgage, pledge, lien, judgment, or collateral or other security given for the payment of the same; and shall also annex to his petition an accurate inventory,<sup>9</sup> verified in like manner, of all his estate, both real and personal, assignable under this act, describing the same and stating where it is situated, and whether there are any, and if so, what encumbrances thereon, the filing of such petition shall be an act of bankruptcy, and such petitioner shall be adjudged a bankrupt: Provided, That all citizens of the United States petitioning to be declared bankrupt shall on filing such petition, and before any proceedings thereon, take and subscribe an oath of allegiance and fidelity to the United States, which oath shall be filed and recorded with the proceedings in bankruptcy. And the judge of the district court, or, if there be no opposing party, any register of said court, to be designated by the judge, shall forthwith, if he be satisfied that the debts due from the petitioner exceed three hundred dollars, issue a warrant, to be signed by such judge or register, directed to the <sup>10</sup> marshal of said district, authorizing him forthwith, as messenger, to publish notices in such newspapers as the warrant specifies; <sup>11</sup> to serve written or printed notice, by mail or personally, on all creditors upon the schedule filed with the debtor's petition, or whose names may be given to him in addition by the

10—The act of 1874, above, § 19, provides for the making of a report by the marshal to the clerk.

11—Section 5 of the act of 1874, above referred to, makes the following amendment: That section 11 of said act be amended by striking out the words "as the warrant specifies," where they first occur, and inserting the words "as the marshal shall select, not exceeding two;"

and inserting after the word "specifies," where it last occurs, the words "but whenever the creditors of the bankrupt are so numerous as to make any notice now required by law to them, by mail or otherwise, a great and disproportionate expense to the estate, the court may, in lieu thereof, in its discretion, order such notice to be given by publication in a newspaper or newspapers, to all such creditors whose claims, as reported, do not exceed the sums, respectively, of fifty dollars."

debtor, and to give such personal or other notice to any persons concerned as the warrant specifies, which notice shall state:—

First. That a warrant in bankruptcy has been issued against the estate of the debtor.

Second. That the payment of any debts and the delivery of any property belonging to such debtor to him or for his use, and the transfer of any property by him, are forbidden by law.

Third. That a meeting of the creditors of the debtor, giving the names, residences, and amounts, so far as known, to prove their debts and choose one or more assignees of his estate, will be held at a court of bankruptcy, to be holden at a time and place designated in the warrant, not less than ten nor more than ninety days after the issuing of the same.

OF ASSIGNMENTS AND ASSIGNEES

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That at the meeting held in pursuance of the notice, one of the registers of the court shall preside, and the messenger shall make return of the warrant and of his doings thereon; and if it appears that the notice to the creditors has not been given as required in the warrant, the meeting shall forthwith be adjourned, and a new notice given as required. If the debtor dies after the issuing of the warrant, the proceedings may be continued and concluded in like manner as if he had lived.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That the creditors shall, at the first meeting held after due notice from the messenger, in presence of a register designated by the court, choose one or more assignees of the estate of the debtor; the choice to be made by the greater part in value and in number of the creditors who have proved their debts. If no choice is made by the creditors at said meeting, the judge, or if there be no opposing interest, the register, shall appoint one or more assignees. If an assignee, so chosen or appointed, fails within five days to express in writing his acceptance of the trust, the judge or register may fill the vacancy. All elections or appointments of assignees shall be subject to the approval of the judge; and when in his judgment it is for any cause needful or expedient, he may appoint additional assignees, or order a new election. The judge at any time may, and upon the request in writing of any creditor who has proved his claim shall, require the assignee to give good and sufficient bond to the United States, with a condition for the faithful performance and discharge of his duties; the bond shall be approved by the judge or register by his indorsement thereon, shall be filed with the record of the case, and inure to the benefit of all creditors proving their claims, and may be prosecuted in the name and for the benefit of any injured party. If the assignee fails to give the bond within such time as the judge orders, not exceeding ten days after notice to him of such order, the judge shall remove him and appoint another in his place.

SEC. 14. And be it further enacted, That as soon as said assignee is appointed and qualified, the judge, or, where there is no opposing interest, the register, shall, by an instrument under his hand, assign and convey to the assignee all the estate, real and personal, of the bankrupt, with all his deeds, books, and papers relating thereto, and such assignment shall relate back to the commencement of said proceedings in bankruptcy, and thereupon, by operation of law, the title to all such property and estate, both real and personal, shall vest in said assignee, although the same is then attached on mesne process as the property of the debtor, and shall dissolve any such attachment made within four months next preceding the commencement of said proceedings: Provided, however, That there shall be excepted from the operation of the provisions of this section the necessary household and kitchen furniture, and such other articles and necessities of such bankrupt as the said assignee shall designate and set apart, having reference in the amount to the family, condition, and circumstances of the bankrupt, but altogether not to exceed in value, in any case, the sum of five hundred dollars; and also the wearing apparel of such bankrupt, and that of his wife and children, and the uniform, arms and equipments of any person who is or has been a soldier in the militia, or in the service of the United States; and such other property as now is, or hereafter shall be, exempted from attachment, or seizure, or levy on execution by the laws of the United States, and such other property not included in the foregoing exceptions as is exempted from levy and sale upon execution or other process or order of any court by the laws of the State in which the bankrupt has his domicile at the time of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, to an amount not exceeding that allowed by such State exemption laws in force in the year <sup>12</sup> eighteen hundred and sixty-four: Provided, That the foregoing exception shall operate as a limitation upon the conveyance of the property of the bankrupt to his assignees; and in no case shall the property hereby excepted pass to the assignees, or the title of the bankrupt thereto be impaired or affected by any of the provisions of this act; and the determination of the assignee in the matter shall, on exception taken, be subject to the final decision of the said court: And provided further, That no mortgage of any vessel or of any other goods or chattels, made as security for any debt or debts, in good faith and for present considerations and otherwise valid, and duly recorded, pursuant to any statute of the United States, or of any State, shall be invalidated or affected hereby; and all the property conveyed by the bankrupt in fraud of his creditors; all rights in equity, choses in action, patents and patent rights and copyrights; all debts due him, or any person for his use, and all liens and securities therefor; and all his rights of action for property or estate, real or personal, and for any cause of action which the bankrupt had against any person arising from contract or from the unlawful taking or detention, or of injury to the property of the bankrupt, and all his rights of redeeming such property or estate, with the like right, title, power, and authority to sell, manage, dispose of, sue for and recover or defend the same as the bankrupt might or could have had if no assignment had been made, shall, in virtue of the adjudication of bankruptcy and the appointment of his assignee, be at once vested in such assignee; and he may sue for and recover the said estate, debts and effects, and may prosecute and defend all suits at law or in equity, pending at the time of the adjudication of bankruptcy, in which such bankrupt is a party in his own name, in the same manner and with the like effect as they might have been <sup>13</sup> presented or defended by such bankrupt; and a copy, duly certified by the clerk of the court, under the seal thereof, of the assignment made by the judge or register, as the case may be, to him as assignee, shall be conclusive evidence of his title as such assignee to take, hold, sue for, and recover the property of the bankrupt, as herein-before mentioned; but no property held by the bankrupt in trust shall pass by such assignment. No person shall be entitled to maintain an action against an assignee in bankruptcy for anything done by him as such assignee, without previously giving him twenty days' notice of such action, specifying the cause thereof, to the end that such assignee may have an opportunity of tendering amend, should he see fit to do so. No person shall be entitled, as against the assignee, to withhold from him possession of any books of account of the bankrupt, or claim any lien thereon; and no suit in which the assignee is a party shall be abated by his death or removal from office; but the same may be prosecuted and defended by his successor, or by the surviving or remaining assignee, as the case may be. The assignee shall have authority, under the order and direction of the court, to redeem or discharge any mortgage or conditional contract, or pledge or deposit, or lien upon any property, real or personal, whenever payable, and to tender due performance of the condition thereof, or to sell the same subject to such mortgage, lien or other encumbrances. The debtor shall also, at the request of the assignee and at the expense of the estate, make and execute any instruments, deeds, and writings which may be proper to enable the assignee to possess himself fully of all the assets of the bankrupt. The assignee shall immediately give notice of his appointment, by publication at least once a week for three successive weeks in such newspapers as shall for that purpose be designated by the court, due regard being had to their general circulation in the district or in that portion of the district in which the bankrupt and his creditors shall reside, and shall, within six months, cause the assignment to him to be recorded in every registry of deeds or other office within the United States where a conveyance of any lands owned by the bankrupt ought by law to be recorded; and the record of such assignment, or a duly certified copy thereof, shall be evidence thereof in all courts.

SEC. 15.<sup>14</sup> And be it further enacted, That the assignee shall demand and receive, from any and all persons holding the same, all the estate assigned, or intended to be assigned, under the provisions of this act;

13—The act of July 27, 1868 (15 St. L. 228, § 2), changes the word "presented" to "prosecuted."

14—The act of June 22, 1874 (St. L. 178, § 1), provides: "That the court may, in its discretion, on sufficient cause shown, and upon notice and hearing, direct the receiver or assignee to take possession of the property, and carry on the business of the debtor, or any part thereof, under the direction of the court, when, in its judgment, the interest of the estate as well as of the creditors will be promoted thereby, but not for a period exceeding nine months from the time the debtor shall have been declared a bankrupt: Provided, that such order shall not be made until the court shall be satisfied that it is approved by a majority in value of the creditors."

Section 4 provides: That unless otherwise ordered by the court, the assignee shall sell the property of the bankrupt, whether real or personal, at public auction, in such parts or parcels and at such times and places as shall be best calculated to produce the greatest amount with the least expense. All notices of public sales under this act by any assignee or officer of the court shall be published once a week for three consecutive weeks in the newspaper or newspapers, to be designated by the judge, which, in his opinion, shall be best calculated to give and he shall sell all such unencumbered estate, real and personal, which comes to his hands, on such terms as he thinks most for the interest of the creditors; but upon petition of any person interested, and for cause shown, the court may make such order concerning the time, place, and manner of sale as will, in its opinion, prove to the interest of the creditors; and the assignee shall keep a regular account<sup>15</sup> of all money received by him as assignee, to which every creditor shall, at reasonable times, have free resort.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That the assignee shall have the like remedy to recover all said estate, debts and effects in his own name, as the creditor might have had if the decree in bankruptcy had not been rendered and no assignment had been made. If, at the time of the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, an action is pending in the name of the debtor for the recovery of a debt or other thing which might or ought to pass to the assignee by the assignment, the assignee shall, if he requires it, be admitted to prosecute the action in his own name, in like manner and with like effect as if it had been originally commenced by him. No suit pending in the name of the assignee shall be abated by his death or removal; but upon the motion of the surviving or remaining or new assignee, as the case may be, he shall be admitted to prosecute the suit in like manner and with like effect as if it had been originally commenced by him. In suits prosecuted by the assignee a certified copy of the assignment made to him by the judge or register shall be conclusive evidence of his authority to sue.

SEC. 17. And be it further enacted, That the assignee shall, as soon as may be after receiving any money belonging to the estate, deposit the same in some bank in his name as assignee, or otherwise keep it distinct and apart from all other money in his possession; and shall, as far as practicable, keep all goods and effects belonging to the estate general notice of the sale. And the court, on the application of any party in interest, shall have complete supervisory power over such sales, including the power to set aside the same and to order a resale, so that the property sold shall realize the largest sum. And the court may, in its discretion, order any real estate of the bankrupt, or any part thereof, to be sold for one-fourth cash at the time of sale, and the residue within eighteen months in such instalments as the court may direct, bearing interest at the rate of seven per centum per annum, and secured by proper mortgage or lien upon the property so sold. And it shall be the duty of every assignee to keep a regular account of all moneys received or expended by him as such assignee, to which account every creditor shall, at reasonable times, have free access. [Here follows the penalty for failure to properly discharge his duties, etc.] That the assignee shall report, under oath, to the court, at least as often as once in three months, the condition of the estate in his charge, and the state of his accounts in detail, and at all other times when the court, on motion or otherwise, shall so order. And on any settlement of the accounts of any assignee, he shall be required to account for all interest, benefit or advantage received, or in any manner agreed to be received, directly or indirectly, from the use, disposal or proceeds of the bankrupt's estate. And he shall be required, upon such settlement, to make and file in court an affidavit declaring, according to the truth, whether he has or has not, as the case may be, received, or is or is not, as the case may be, to receive, directly or indirectly, any interest, benefit or advantage from the use or deposit of such funds; and such assignee may be examined orally upon the same subject, and if he shall wilfully swear falsely, either in such affidavit or examination, or to his report provided for in this section, he shall be deemed to be guilty of perjury, and on conviction thereof, he punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than one and not more than five years.

15—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 185, § 19), requires the assignee to make a report of the business transacted by him, and of the fees received, etc.

separate and apart from all other goods in his possession, or designated by appropriate marks, so that they may be easily and clearly distinguished, and may not be exposed or liable to be taken as his property or for the payment of his debts. When it appears that the distribution of the estate may be delayed by litigation or other cause, the court may direct the temporary investment of the money belonging to such estate in securities to be approved by the judge or a register of said court, or may authorize the same to be deposited in any convenient bank upon such interest, not exceeding the legal rate, as the bank may contract with the assignee to pay thereon. He shall give written notice to all known creditors, by mail or otherwise, of all dividends, and such notice of meetings, after the first, as may be ordered by the court. He shall be allowed, and may retain out of the money in his hands, all the necessary disbursements made by him in the discharge of his duty, and a reasonable compensation for his services, in the discretion of the court. He may, under the direction of the court, submit any controversy arising in the settlement of demands against the estate, or of debts due to it, to the determination of arbitrators, to be chosen by him, and the other party to the controversy, and may, under such direction, compound and settle any such controversy, by agreement with the other party, as he thinks proper and most for the interest of the creditors.

SEC. 18. And be it further enacted, That the court, after due notice and hearing, may remove an assignee for any cause which, in the judgment of the court, renders such removal necessary or expedient. At a meeting called by order of the court in its discretion for the purpose, or which shall be called upon the application of a majority of the creditors in number and value, the creditors may, with consent of [the] court, remove any assignee by such a vote as is hereinbefore provided for the choice of assignee. An assignee may, with the consent of the judge, resign his trust and be discharged therefrom. Vacancies caused by death or otherwise in the office of assignee may be filled by appointment of the court, or at its discretion by an election by the creditors, in the manner hereinbefore provided, at a regular meeting, or at a meeting called for the purpose, with such notice thereof in writing to all known creditors, and by such person, as the court shall direct. The resignation or removal of an assignee shall in no way release him from performing all things requisite on his part for the proper closing up of his trust and the transmission thereof to his successors, nor shall it affect the liability of the principal or surety on the bond given by the assignee. When, by death or otherwise, the number of assignees is reduced, the estate of the debtor not lawfully disposed of shall vest in the remaining assignee or assignees, and the persons selected to fill vacancies, if any, with the same powers and duties relative thereto as if they were originally chosen. Any former assignee, his executors or administrators, upon request, and at the expense of the estate, shall make and execute to the new assignee all deeds, conveyances, and assurances, and do all other lawful acts requisite to enable him to recover and receive all the estate. And the court may make all orders which it may deem expedient to secure the proper fulfillment of the duties of any former assignee, and the rights and interests of all persons interested in the estate. No person who has received any preference contrary to the provisions of this act shall vote for or be eligible as assignee; but no title to property, real or personal, sold, transferred, or conveyed by an assignee, shall be affected or impaired by reason of his ineligibility. An assignee refusing or unreasonably neglecting to execute an instrument when lawfully required by the court, or disobeying a lawful order or decree of the court in the premises, may be punished as for a contempt of court.

OF DEBTS AND PROOF OF CLAIMS

SEC. 19. And be it further enacted, That all debts due and payable from the bankrupt at the time of the adjudication of bankruptcy, and all debts then existing but not payable until a future day, a rebate of interest being made when no interest is payable by the terms of the contract, may be proved against the estate of the bankrupt. All demands against the bankrupt for or on account of any goods or chattels wrongfully taken, converted, or withheld by him may be proved and allowed as debts to the amount of the value of the property so taken or withheld, with interest. If the bankrupt shall be bound as drawer, indorser, surety, bail, or guarantor upon any bill, bond, note, or any other specialty or contract, or for any debt of another person, and his liability shall not have become absolute until after the adjudication of bankruptcy, the creditor may prove the same after such liability shall have become fixed, and before the final dividend shall have been declared. In all cases of contingent debts and contingent liabilities contracted by the bankrupt, and not herein otherwise provided for, the creditor may make claim therefor, and have his claim allowed, with the right to share in the dividends, if the contingency shall happen before the order for the final dividend; or he may at any time apply to the court to have the present value of the debt or liability ascertained and liquidated, which shall then be done in such manner as the court shall order, and he shall be allowed to prove for the amount so ascertained. Any person liable as bail, surety, guarantor, or otherwise for the bankrupt, who shall have paid the debt, or any part thereof, in discharge of the whole, shall be entitled to prove such debt or to stand in the place of the creditor if he shall have proved the same, although such payment shall have been made after the proceedings in bankruptcy were commenced. And any person so liable for the bankrupt, and who has not paid the whole of said debt, but is still liable for the same or any part thereof, may, if the creditor shall fail or omit to prove such debt, prove the same either in the name of the creditor or otherwise, as may be provided by the rules, and subject to such regulations and limitations as may be established by such rules. Where the bankrupt is liable to pay rent or other debt falling due at fixed and stated periods, the creditor may prove for a proportionate part thereof up to the time of the bankruptcy, as if the same grew due from day to day, and not at such fixed and stated periods. If any bankrupt shall be liable for unliquidated damages arising out of any contract or promise, or on account of any goods or chattels wrongfully taken, converted, or withheld, the court may cause such damages to be assessed in such mode as it may deem best, and the sum so assessed may be proved against the estate. No debts other than those above specified shall be proved or allowed against the estate.

SEC. 20. And be it further enacted, That, in all cases of mutual debts or mutual credits between the parties, the account between them shall be stated, and one debt set off against the other, and the balance only shall be allowed or paid, but no set-off shall be allowed of a claim in its nature not provable against the estate:<sup>16</sup> Provided, That no set-off shall be allowed in favor of any debtor to the bankrupt of a claim purchased by or transferred to him after the filing of the petition. When a creditor has a mortgage or pledge of real or personal property of the bankrupt, or a lien thereon for securing the payment of a debt owing to him from the bankrupt, he shall be admitted as a creditor only for the balance of the debt after deducting the value of such property, to be ascertained by agreement between him and the assignee, or by a sale thereof, to be made in such manner as the court shall direct; or the creditor may release or convey his claim to the assignee upon such property, and be admitted to prove his whole debt. If the value of the property exceeds the sum for which it is so held as security, the assignee may release to the creditor the bankrupt's right of redemption therein on receiving such excess; or he may sell the property, subject to the claim of the creditor thereon; and in either case the assignee and creditor, respectively, shall execute all deeds and writings necessary or proper to consummate the transaction. If the property is not so sold or released and delivered up, the creditor shall not be allowed to prove any part of his debt.

SEC. 21. And be it further enacted, That no creditor proving his debt or claim shall be allowed to maintain any suit at law or in equity therefor against the bankrupt, but shall be deemed to have waived all right of action and suit against the bankrupt, and all proceedings already commenced or unsatisfied judgments already obtained thereon, shall be deemed to be discharged and surrendered thereby;<sup>17</sup> and no creditor whose debt is provable under this act shall be allowed to prosecute to final judgment any suit at law or in equity therefor against the bankrupt, until the question of the debtor's discharge shall have been determined; and any such suit or proceedings shall, upon the application of the bankrupt, be stayed to await the determination of the court in bankruptcy on the question of the discharge, provided there be no unreasonable delay on the part of the bankrupt in endeavoring to obtain his discharge, and provided, also, that if the amount due the creditor is in dispute, the suit, by leave of the court in bankruptcy, may proceed to judgment for the purpose of ascertaining the amount due, which amount may be proved in bankruptcy, but execution shall be stayed as aforesaid. If any bankrupt shall, at the time of adjudication, be liable upon any bill of exchange, promissory note, or other obligation in respect of distinct contracts as a member of two or more firms carrying on separate and distinct trades, and having distinct estates to be wound up in bankruptcy, or as a sole trader and also [as] a member of a firm, the circumstance that such firms are in whole or in part composed of the same individuals, or that the sole contractor is also one of the joint contractors, shall not prevent proof and receipt of dividend in respect of such distinct contracts against the estates respectively liable upon such contracts.

17—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St.

L. 179, § 7), amends this section by inserting, immediately after the word "thereby," "But a creditor proving his debt or claim shall not be held to have waived his right of action or suit against the bankrupt where a discharge has been refused or the proceedings have been determined without a discharge."

SEC. 22.<sup>18</sup> And be it further enacted, That all proofs of debts against the estate of the bankrupt, by or in behalf of creditors residing within the judicial district where the proceedings in bankruptcy are pending, shall be made before one of the registers of the court in said district, and by or in behalf of non-resident<sup>19</sup> debtors before any register in bankruptcy in the judicial district where such creditors or either of them reside, or before any commissioner of the circuit court authorized to administer oaths in any district. To entitle a claimant against the estate of a bankrupt to have his demand allowed, it must be verified by a deposition in writing on oath or solemn affirmation before the proper register or commissioner setting forth the demand, the consideration thereof, whether any and what securities are held therefor, and whether any and what payments have been made thereon; that the sum claimed is justly due from the bankrupt to the claimant; that the claimant has not, nor has any other person, for his use, received any security or satisfaction whatever other than that by him set forth, that the claim was not procured for the purpose of influencing the proceedings under this act, and that no bargain or agreement, express or implied, has been made or entered into, by or on behalf of such creditor, to sell, transfer, or dispose of the said claim or any part thereof, against such bankrupt, or take or receive, directly or indirectly, any money, property, or consideration whatever, whereby the vote of such creditor for assignee, or any action on the part of such creditor, or any other person in the proceedings under this act, is or shall be in any way affected, influenced, or controlled, and no claim shall be allowed unless all the statements set forth in such deposition shall appear to be true. Such oath or solemn affirmation shall be made by the claimant, testifying of his own knowledge, unless he is absent from the United States or prevented by some other good cause from testifying, in which cases the demand may be verified in like manner by the attorney or authorized agent of the claimant testifying to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief, and setting forth his means of knowledge; or if in a foreign country, the oath of the creditor may be taken before any minister, consul, or vice-consul of the United States; and the court may, if it shall see fit, require or receive further pertinent evidence either for or against the admission of the claim. Corporations may verify their claims by the oath or solemn affirmation of their president, cashier, or treasurer. If the proof is satisfactory to the register or commissioner, it shall be signed by the deponent, and delivered or sent by mail to the assignee, who shall examine the same and compare it with the books and accounts of the bankrupt, and shall register, in a book to be kept by him for that purpose, the names of creditors who have proved their claims, in the order in which such proof is received, stating the time of receipt of such proof, and the amount and nature of the debts, which books shall 18—Section 20 of the act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 186), provides "that in addition to the officers now authorized to take proof of debts against the estate of a bankrupt, notaries public are hereby authorized to take such proof in the manner and under the regulations provided by law; such proof to be certified by the notary and attested by his signature and official seal." By the act of July 27, 1868 (15 St. L. 228, § 3), this right to take proof was extended to United States commissioners.

19—The act of July 27, 1868 (15 St. L. 228, § 2), changes this word "debtors" to "creditors."

be opened to the inspection of all the creditors. The court may, on the application of the assignee, or of any creditor, or of the bankrupt, or without any application, examine upon oath the bankrupt, or any person tendering or who has made proof of claims, and may summon any person capable of giving evidence concerning such proof, or concerning the debt sought to be proved, and shall reject all claims not duly proved, or where the proof shows the claim to be founded in fraud, illegality, or mistake.

SEC. 23. And be it further enacted, That when a claim is presented for proof before the election of the assignee, and the judge entertains doubts of its validity or of the right of the creditor to prove it, and is of the opinion that such validity or right ought to be investigated by the assignee, he may postpone the proof of the claim until the assignee is chosen. Any person who, after the approval of this act shall have accepted any preference, having reasonable cause to believe that the same was made or given by the debtor, contrary to any provision of this act, shall not prove the debt or claim on account of which the preference was made or given, nor shall he receive any dividend therefrom until he shall first have surrendered to the assignee all property, money, benefit, or advantage received by him under such preference. The court shall allow all debts duly proved, and shall cause a list thereof to be made and certified by one of the registers; and any creditor may act at all meetings by his duly constituted attorney the same as though personally present.

SEC. 24. And be it further enacted, That a supposed creditor who takes an appeal to the circuit court from the decision of the district court, rejecting his claim in whole or in part, shall, upon entering his appeal in the circuit court, file in the clerk's office thereof a statement in writing of his claim, setting forth the same, substantially, as in a declaration for the same cause of action at law, and the assignee shall plead or answer thereto in like manner, and like proceedings shall thereupon be had in the pleadings, trial, and determination of the cause, as in action at law commenced and prosecuted, in the usual manner, in the courts of the United States, except that no execution shall be awarded against the assignee for the amount of a debt found due to the creditor. The final judgment of the court shall be conclusive, and the list of debts shall, if necessary, be altered to conform thereto. The party prevailing in the suit shall be entitled to costs against the adverse party, to be taxed and recovered as in suits at law; if recovered against the assignee, they shall be allowed out of the estate. A bill of exchange, promissory note, or other instrument, used in evidence upon the proof of a claim, and left in court or deposited in the clerk's office, may be delivered, by the register or clerk having the custody thereof, to the person who used it, upon his filing a copy thereof, attested by the clerk of the court, who shall indorse upon it the name of the party against whose estate it has been proved, and the date and amount of any dividend declared thereon.

OF PROPERTY PERISHABLE AND IN DISPUTE

SEC. 25. And be it further enacted, That when it appears to the satisfaction of the court that the estate of the debtor, or any part thereof, is of a perishable nature, or liable to deteriorate in value, the court may order the same to be sold, in such manner as may be deemed most expedient, under the direction of the messenger or assignee, as the case may be, who shall hold the funds received in place of the estate disposed of; and whenever it appears to the satisfaction of the court that the title of any portion of the estate, real or personal, which has come into possession of the assignee, or which is claimed by him, is in dispute, the court may, upon the petition of the assignee, and after such notice to the claimant, his agent or attorney, as the court shall deem reasonable, order it to be sold, under the direction of the assignee, who shall hold the funds received in place of the estate disposed of; and the proceeds of the sale shall be considered the measure of the value of the property in any suit or controversy between the parties in any courts. But this provision shall not prevent the recovery of the property from the possession of the assignee by any proper action commenced at any time before the court orders the sale.

EXAMINATION OF BANKRUPTS

SEC. 26. And be it further enacted, That the court may, on the application of the assignee in bankruptcy, or of any creditor, or without any application, at all times require the bankrupt, upon reasonable notice, to attend and submit to an examination, on oath, upon all matters relating to the disposal or condition of his property, to his trade and dealings with others, and his accounts concerning the same, to all debts due to or claimed from him, and to all other matters concerning his property and estate and the due settlement thereof according to law, which examination shall be in writing, and shall be signed by the bankrupt and filed with the other proceedings; and the court may, in like manner, require the attendance of any other person as a witness, and if such person shall fail to attend, on being summoned thereto, the court may compel his attendance by warrant directed to the marshal, commanding him to arrest such person and bring him forthwith before the court, or before a register in bankruptcy, for examination as such witness. If the bankrupt is imprisoned, absent, or disabled from attendance, the court may order him to be produced by the jailer, or any officer in whose custody he may be, or may direct the examination to be had, taken, and certified at such time and place and in such manner as the court may deem proper, and with like effect as if such examination had been had in court. The bankrupt shall at all times, until his discharge, be subject to the order of the court, and shall, at the expense of the estate, execute all proper writings and instruments, and do and perform all acts required by the court touching the assigned property or estate, and to enable the assignee to demand, recover, and receive all the property and estate assigned, wherever situated; and for neglect or refusal to obey any order of the court, such bankrupt may be committed and punished as for a contempt of court. If the bankrupt is without the district, and unable to return and personally attend at any of the times or do any of the acts which may be specified or required pursuant to this section, and if it appears that such absence was not caused by wilful default, and if, as soon as may be after the removal of such impediment, he offers to attend and submit to the order of the court in all respects, he shall be permitted so to do, with like effect as if he had not been in default. He shall also be at liberty, from time to time, upon oath to attend and correct his schedule of creditors and property, so that the same shall conform to the facts. For good cause shown, the wife of any bankrupt may be required to attend before the court, to the end that she may be examined as a witness; and if such wife do not attend at the time and place specified in the order, the bankrupt shall not be entitled to a discharge unless he shall prove to the satisfaction of the court that he was unable to procure the attendance of his wife. No bankrupt shall be liable to arrest during the pendency of the proceedings in bankruptcy in any civil action, unless the same is founded on some debt or claim from which his discharge in bankruptcy would not release him.<sup>20</sup>

OF THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE BANKRUPT'S ESTATE

SEC. 27. And be it further enacted, That all creditors whose debts are duly proved and allowed shall be entitled to share in the bankrupt's property and estate pro rata, without any priority or preference whatever, except that wages due from him to any operative, or clerk, or house servant, to an amount not exceeding fifty dollars, for labor performed within six months next preceeding the adjudication of bankruptcy, shall be entitled to priority, and shall be first paid in full: Provided, That any debt proved by any person liable, as bail, surety, guarantor, or otherwise, for the bankrupt, shall not be paid to the person so proving the same until satisfactory evidence shall be produced of the payment of such debt by such person so liable, and the share to which such debt would be entitled may be paid into court, or otherwise held for the benefit of the party entitled thereto, as the court may direct. At the expiration of three months from the date of the adjudication of bankruptcy in any case, or as much earlier as the court may direct, the court, upon request of the assignee, shall call a general meeting of the creditors, of which due notice shall be given, and the assignee shall then report, and exhibit to the court and to the creditors just and true accounts of all his receipts and payments, verified by his oath, and he shall also produce and file vouchers for all payments for which vouchers shall be required by any rule of the court; he shall also submit the schedule of the bankrupt's creditors and property as amended, duly verified by the bankrupt, and a statement of the whole estate of the bankrupt as then ascertained, of the property recovered and of the property outstanding, specifying the cause of its being outstanding, also what debts or claims are yet undetermined, and stating what sum remains in his hands. At such meeting the majority in value of the creditors present shall determine whether any and what part of the net proceeds of the estate, after deducting and retaining a sum sufficient to provide for all undetermined claims which, by reason of the distant residence of the creditor, or for other sufficient reason, have not been proved, and for other expenses and contingencies, shall be divided among the creditors; but unless at least one half in value of the creditors shall attend such meeting, either in person or by attorney, it shall be the duty of the assignee so to determine. In case a dividend is ordered, the register shall, within ten days after such meeting, prepare a list of creditors entitled to dividend, and shall calculate and set opposite to the name of each creditor who has proved his claim the dividend to which he is entitled out of the net proceeds of the estate set apart for dividend, and shall forward by mail to every creditor a statement of the dividend to which he is entitled, and such creditor shall be paid by the assignee in such manner as the court may direct.

SEC. 28. And be it further enacted, That the like proceedings shall be had at the expiration of the next three months, or earlier, if practicable, and a third meeting of the creditors shall then be called by the court, and a final dividend then declared, unless any action at law or suit in equity be pending, or unless some other estate or effects of the debtor afterwards come to the hands of the assignee, in which case the assignee shall, as soon as may be, convert such estate or effects into money, and within two months after the same shall be so converted, the same shall be divided in manner aforesaid. Further dividends shall be made in like manner as often as occasion requires; and after the third meeting of creditors no further meeting shall be called, unless ordered by the court. If at any time there shall be in the hands of the assignee any outstanding debts or other property, due or belonging to the estate, which cannot be collected and received by the assignee without unreasonable or inconvenient delay or expense, the assignee may, under direction of the court, sell and assign such debts or other property in such manner as the court shall order. No dividend already declared shall be disturbed by reason of debts being subsequently proved, but the creditors proving such debts shall be entitled to a dividend equal to those already received by the other creditors before any further payment is made to the latter. Preparatory to the final dividend, the assignee shall submit his account to the court and file the same, and give notice to the creditors of such filing, and shall also give notice that he will apply for a settlement of his account, and for a discharge from all liability as assignee, at a time to be specified in such notice, and at such time the court shall audit and pass the accounts of the assignee, and such assignee shall, if required by the court, be examined as to the truth of such account, and if found correct he shall thereby be discharged from all liability as assignee to any creditor of the bankrupt. The court shall thereupon order a dividend of the estate and effects, or of such part thereof as it sees fit, among such of the creditors as have proved their claims, in proportion to the respective amount of their said debts. In addition to all expenses necessarily incurred by him in the execution of his trust, in any case, the assignee shall be entitled to an allowance for his services in such case on all moneys received and paid out by him therein, for any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, five per centum thereof; for any larger sum, not exceeding five thousand dollars, two and a half per centum on the excess over one thousand dollars; and for any larger sum, one per centum on the excess over five thousand dollars, and if, at any time, there shall not be in his hands a sufficient amount of money to defray the necessary expenses required for the further execution of his trust, he shall not be obliged to proceed therein until the necessary funds are advanced or satisfactorily secured to him. If by accident, mistake, or other cause, without fault of the assignee, either or both of the said second and third meetings should not be held within the times limited, the court may, upon motion of an interested party, order such meetings, with like effect as to the validity of the proceedings as if the meeting had been duly held. In the order for a dividend, under this section, the following claims shall be entitled to priority or preference, and to be first paid in full in the following order:—

First. The fees, costs and expenses of suits, and the several proceedings in bankruptcy under this act, and for the custody of property, as herein provided.

Second. All debts due to the United States, and all taxes and assessments under the laws thereof.

Third. All debts due to the state in which the proceedings in bankruptcy are pending, and all taxes and assessments made under the laws of such state.

Fourth. Wages due to any operative, clerk, or house servant, to an amount not exceeding fifty dollars, for labor performed within six months next preceding the first publication of the notice of proceedings in bankruptcy.

Fifth. All debts due to any persons who, by the laws of the United States, are or may be entitled to a priority or preference, in like manner as if this act had not been passed: Always provided, That nothing contained in this act shall interfere with the assessment and collection of taxes by the authority of the United States or any State.

OF THE BANKRUPT'S DISCHARGE AND ITS EFFECT

SEC. 29. And be it further enacted, That at any time after the expiration of six months from the adjudication of bankruptcy, or if no debts have been proved against the bankrupt, or if no assets have come to the hands of the assignee, at any time after the expiration of sixty days,<sup>21</sup> and within one year from the adjudication of bankruptcy, the bankrupt may apply to the court for a discharge from his debts, and the court shall thereupon order notice to be given by mail to all creditors who have proved their debts, and by publication at least once a week in such newspapers as the court shall designate, due regard being had to the general circulation of the same in the district, or in that portion of the district in which the bankrupt and his creditors shall reside, to appear on a day appointed for that purpose, and show cause why a discharge should not be granted to the bankrupt. No discharge shall be granted, or, if granted, be valid, if the bankrupt has wilfully sworn falsely in his affidavit annexed to his petition, schedule, or inventory, or upon any examination in the course of the proceedings in bankruptcy, in relation to any material fact concerning his estate or his debts, or to any other material fact; or if he has concealed any part of his estate or effects, or any books or writings relating thereto, or if he has been guilty of any fraud or negligence in the care, custody, or delivery to the assignee of the property belonging to him at the time of the presentation of his petition and inventory, excepting such property as he is permitted to retain under the provisions of this act, or if he has caused, permitted, or suffered any loss, waste, or destruction thereof; or if, within four months before the commencement of such proceedings, he has procured his lands, goods, money or chattels to be attached, sequestered, or seized on execution; or if, since the passage of this act, he has destroyed, mutilated, altered, or falsified any of his books, documents, papers, writings, or securities, or has made or been privy to the making of any false or fraudulent entry in any book of account or other document, with intent to defraud his creditors; or has removed or caused to be removed any part of his property from the district, with intent to defraud his creditors; or if he has given any fraudulent preference contrary to the provisions of this act, or made any fraudulent payment, gift, transfer, conveyance, or assignment of any part of his property, or has lost any part thereof in gaming, or has admitted a false or fictitious debt against his estate; or if, having acknowledged that any person has proved such false or fictitious debt, he has not disclosed the same to his assignee within one month after such knowledge; or if, being a merchant or tradesman, he has not, subsequently to the passage of this act, kept proper books of account; or if he, or any person in his behalf, has procured the assent of any creditor to the discharge, or influenced the action of any creditor at any stage of the proceedings, by any pecuniary consideration or obligation; or if he has, in contemplation of becoming bankrupt, made any pledge, payment, transfer, assignment or conveyance of any part of his property, directly or indirectly, absolutely or conditionally, for the purpose of preferring any creditor or person having a claim against him, or who is or may be under liability for him, or for the purpose of preventing the property from coming into the hands of the assignee, or of being distributed under this act in satisfaction of his debts; or if he has been convicted of any misdemeanor under this act, or has been guilty of any fraud whatever contrary to the true intent of this act; and before any discharge is granted, the bankrupt shall take and subscribe an oath to the effect that he has not done, suffered, or been privy to any act, matter, or thing specified in this act as a ground for withholding such discharge, or as invalidating such discharge if granted.

SEC. 30. And be it further enacted, That no person who shall have been discharged under this act, and shall afterwards become bankrupt, on his own application shall be again entitled to a discharge whose estate is insufficient to pay seventy per centum of the debts proved against it, unless the assent in writing of three fourths in value of his creditors who have proved their claims is filed at or before the time of application for discharge; but a bankrupt who shall prove to the satisfaction of the court that he has paid all the debts owing by him at the time of any previous bankruptcy, or who has been voluntarily released therefrom by his creditors, shall be entitled to a discharge in the same manner and with the same effect as if he had not previously been bankrupt.

SEC. 31. And be it further enacted, That any creditor opposing the discharge of any bankrupt may file a specification in writing of the grounds of his opposition, and the court may in its discretion order any question of fact so presented to be tried at a stated session of the district court.

SEC. 32. And be it further enacted, That if it shall appear to the court that the bankrupt has in all things conformed to his duty under this act, and that he is entitled, under the provisions thereof, to receive a discharge, the court shall grant him a discharge from all his debts except as hereinafter provided, and shall give him a certificate thereof under the seal of the court, in substance as follows:

District Court of the United States, District of ———.

Whereas, ——— has been duly adjudged a bankrupt under the act of Congress establishing a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States, and appears to have conformed to all the requirements of law in that behalf, it is therefore ordered by the court that said ——— be forever discharged from all debts and claims which by said act are made provable against his estate, and which existed on the ——— day of ———, on which day the petition for adjudication was filed by (or against) him; excepting such debts, if any, as are by said act excepted from the operation of a discharge in bankruptcy. Given under my hand and the seal of the court at ———, in the said district, this ——— day of ———, A. D. ———. ———, Judge.

[Seal.]

SEC. 33. And be it further enacted, That no debt created by the fraud or embezzlement of the bankrupt, or by his defalcation as a public officer, or while acting in any fiduciary character, shall be discharged under this act; but the debt may be proved, and the dividend thereon shall be a payment on account of said debt; and no discharge granted under this act shall release, discharge, or affect any person liable for the same debt for or with the bankrupt, either as partner, joint contractor, indorser, surety, or otherwise. And in all proceedings in bankruptcy commenced after one year from the time this act shall go into operation, no discharge shall be granted to a debtor whose assets do not pay fifty<sup>22</sup> per centum of the claims against his estate, unless the assent in writing of a majority in number and value of his creditors who have proved their claims is filed in the case at or before the time of application for discharge.

SEC. 34. And be it further enacted, That a discharge duly granted under this act shall, with the exceptions aforesaid, release the bankrupt from all debts, claims, liabilities, and demands which were or might have been proved against his estate in bankruptcy, and may be pleaded, by a simple averment that on the day of its date such discharge was granted to him, setting the same forth in hæc verba, as a full and complete bar to all suits brought on any such debts, claims, liabilities, or demands, and the certificate shall be conclusive evidence in favor of such bankrupt of the fact and [the] regularity of such discharge: Always provided, That any creditor or creditors of said bankrupt, whose debt was proved or provable against the estate in bankruptcy, who shall see fit to contest the validity of said discharge on the ground that it was fraudulently ob-

22—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 180, § 9), amends this section as amended by the act of July 27, 1863 (15 St. L. 228, § 1), as follows: That in cases of compulsory or involuntary bankruptcy, the provisions of said act, and any amendment thereof, or of any supplement thereto, requiring the payment of any proportion of the debts of the bankrupt, or the assent of any portion of his creditors, as a condition of his discharge from his debts, shall not apply; but he may, if otherwise entitled thereto, be discharged by the court in the same manner and with the same effect as if he had paid such per centum of his debts, or as if the required proportion of his creditors had assented thereto. And in cases of voluntary bankruptcy, no discharge shall be granted to a debtor whose assets shall not be equal to thirty per centum of the claims proved against his estate, upon which he shall be liable as principal debtor, without the assent of at least one-fourth of his creditors in number, and one-third in value; and the provision in section thirty-three of said act of March second, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, requiring fifty per centum of such assets, is hereby repealed.

tained, may, at any time within two years after the date thereof, apply to the court which granted it to set aside and annul the same. Said application shall be in writing, shall specify which, in particular, of the several acts mentioned in section twenty-nine it is intended to give evidence of against the bankrupt, setting forth the grounds of avoidance, and no evidence shall be admitted as to any other of the said acts; but said application shall be subject to amendment at the discretion of the court. The court shall cause reasonable notice of said application to be given to said bankrupt, and order him to appear and answer the same, within such time as to the court shall seem fit and proper. If, upon the hearing of said parties, the court shall find that the fraudulent acts, or any of them, set forth as aforesaid by said creditor or creditors against the bankrupt, are proved, and that said creditor or creditors had no knowledge of the same until after the granting of said discharge, judgment shall be given in favor of said creditor or creditors, and the discharge of said bankrupt shall be set aside and annulled. But if said court shall find that said fraudulent acts and all of them, set forth as aforesaid, are not proved, or that they were known to said creditor or creditors before the granting of said discharge, then judgment shall be rendered in favor of the bankrupt, and the validity of his discharge shall not be affected by said proceedings.

PREFERENCES AND FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES DECLARED VOID

SEC. 35.<sup>23</sup> And be it further enacted, That if any person, being insolvent, or in contemplation of insolvency, within four months before the filing of the petition by or against him, with a view to give a preference to any creditor or person having a claim against him, or who is under any liability for him, procures any part of his property to be attached, sequestered, or seized on execution, or makes any payment, pledge, assignment, transfer, or conveyance of any part of his property, either directly or indirectly, absolutely or conditionally, the person receiving such payment, pledge, assignment, transfer, or conveyance, or to be benefited thereby, or by such attachment, having reasonable cause to believe such person is insolvent, and that such attachment, payment, pledge, assignment, or conveyance is made in fraud of the provisions of this act, the same shall be void, and the assignee may recover the property, or the value of it, from the person so receiving it, or so to be benefited; and if any

23—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 180, §§ 10, 11), makes the following change with reference to this section: "That in cases of involuntary or compulsory bankruptcy, the period of four months mentioned in section thirty-five of the act to which this is an amendment, is hereby changed to two months; but this provision shall not take effect until two months after the passage of this act. And in the cases aforesaid, the period of six months mentioned in said section thirty-five is hereby changed to three months; but this provision shall not take effect until three months after the passage of this act."

It is further amended as follows:

"First. After the word 'and,' in line eleven, insert the word 'knowing.'

"Secondly. After the word 'attachment,' in the same line, insert the words 'sequestration, seizure.'

"Thirdly. After the word 'and,' in line twenty, insert the word 'knowing.' And nothing in said section thirty-five shall be construed to invalidate any loan of actual value, or the security therefor, made in good faith, upon a security taken in good faith on the occasion of the making of such loan."

person being insolvent, or in contemplation of insolvency or bankruptcy, within six months before the filing of the petition by or against him, makes any payment, sale, assignment, transfer, conveyance, or other disposition of any part of his property to any person who then has reasonable cause to believe him to be insolvent, or to be acting in contemplation of insolvency, and that such payment, sale, assignment, transfer, or other conveyance is made with a view to prevent his property from coming to his assignee in bankruptcy, or to prevent the same from being distributed under this act, or to defeat the object of, or in any way impair, hinder, impede, or delay the operation and effect of, or to evade any of the provisions of this act, the sale, assignment, transfer, or conveyance shall be void, and the assignee may recover the property, or the value thereof, as assets of the bankrupt. And if such sale, assignment, transfer, or conveyance is not made in the usual and ordinary course of business of the debtor, the fact shall be prima facie evidence of fraud. Any contract, covenant, or security made or given by a bankrupt or other person with, or in trust for, any creditor, for securing the payment of any money as a consideration for or with intent to induce the creditor to forbear opposing the application for discharge of the bankrupt, shall be void; and if any creditor shall obtain any sum of money or other goods, chattels, or security from any person as an inducement for forbearing to oppose, or consenting to such application for discharge, every creditor so offending shall forfeit all right to any share or dividend in the estate of the bankrupt, and shall also forfeit double the value or amount of such money, goods, chattels, or security so obtained to be recovered by the assignee for the benefit of the estate.

BANKRUPTCY OF PARTNERSHIPS AND OF CORPORATIONS

SEC. 36. And be it further enacted, That where two or more persons who are partners in trade shall be adjudged bankrupt, either on the petition of such partners, or any one of them, or on the petition of any creditor of the partners, a warrant shall issue in the manner provided by this act, upon which all the joint stock and property of the copartnership, and also all the separate estate of each of the partners, shall be taken, excepting such parts thereof as are hereinbefore excepted; and all the creditors of the company, and the separate creditors of each partner, shall be allowed to prove their respective debts; and the assignee shall be chosen by the creditors of the company, and shall also keep separate accounts of the joint stock or property of the copartnership and of the separate estate of each member thereof; and after deducting out of the whole amount received by such assignee the whole of the expenses and disbursements, the net proceeds of the joint stock shall be appropriated to pay the creditors of the copartnership, and the net proceeds of the separate estate of each partner shall be appropriated to pay his separate creditors; and if there shall be any balance of the separate estate of any partner, after the payment of his separate debts, such balance shall be added to the joint stock for the payment of the joint creditors; and if there shall be any balance of the joint stock after payment of the joint debts, such balance shall be divided and appropriated to and among the separate estates of the several partners according to their respective right and interest therein, and as it would have been if the partnership had been dissolved without any bankruptcy; and the sum so appropriated to the separate estate of each partner shall be applied to the payment of his separate debts; and the certificate of discharge shall be granted or refused to each partner as the same would or ought to be if the proceedings had been against him alone under this act; and in all other respects the proceedings against partners shall be conducted in the like manner as if they had been commenced and prosecuted against one person alone. If such copartners reside in different districts, that court in which the petition is first filed shall retain exclusive jurisdiction over the case.

SEC. 37. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of this act shall apply to all moneyed business or commercial corporations and joint stock companies, and that upon the petition of any officer of any such corporation or company, duly authorized by a vote of a majority of the corporators of any legal meeting called for the purpose, or upon the petition of any creditor or creditors of such corporation or company, made and presented in the manner hereinafter provided in respect to debtors, the like proceedings shall be had and taken as are hereinafter provided in the case of debtors; and all the provisions of this act which apply to the debtor, or set forth his duties in regard to furnishing schedules and inventories, executing papers, submitting to examinations, disclosing, making over, secreting, concealing, conveying, assigning, or paying away his money or property, shall in like manner, and with like force, effect, and penalties, apply to each and every officer of such corporation or company in relation to the same matters concerning the corporation or company, and the money and property thereof. All payments, conveyances, and assignments declared fraudulent and void by this act when made by a debtor, shall in like manner, and to the like extent, and with like remedies, be fraudulent and void when made by a corporation or company. No allowance or discharge shall be granted to any corporation or joint stock company, or to any person or officer or member thereof: Provided, That whenever any corporation by proceedings under this act shall be declared bankrupt, all its property and assets shall be distributed to the creditors of such corporations in the manner provided in this act in respect to natural persons.

OF DATES AND DEPOSITIONS

SEC. 38. And be it further enacted, That the filing of a petition for adjudication in bankruptcy, either by a debtor in his own behalf, or by any creditor against a debtor; upon which an order may be issued by the court, or by a register in the manner provided in section four, shall be deemed and taken to be the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy under this act; the proceedings in all cases of bankruptcy shall be deemed matters of record, but the same shall not be required to be recorded at large, but shall be carefully filed, kept, and numbered in the office of the clerk of the court, and a docket only, or short memorandum thereof, kept in books to be provided for that purpose, which shall be open to public inspection. Copies of such records, duly certified under the seal of the court, shall in all cases be prima facie evidence of the facts therein stated. Evidence or examination in any of the proceedings under this act may be taken before the court, or a register in bankruptcy, viva voce or in writing, before a commissioner of the circuit court, or by affidavit, or on commission, and the court may direct a reference to a register in bankruptcy, or other suitable person, to take and certify such examination, and may compel the attendance of witnesses, the production of books and papers, and the giving of testimony in the same manner as in suits in equity in the circuit court.

INVOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY

SEC. 39. And be it further enacted, That any person residing and owing debts as aforesaid, who, after the passage of this act, shall depart from the State, district, or Territory of which he is an inhabitant, with intent to defraud his creditors, or, being absent, shall, with such intent, remain absent; or shall conceal himself to avoid the service of legal process in any action for the recovery of a debt or demand provable under this act; or shall conceal or remove any of his property to avoid its being attached, taken, or sequestered on legal process; or shall make any assignment, gift, sale, conveyance, or transfer of his estate, property, rights, or credits, either within the United States or elsewhere, with intent to delay, defraud, or hinder his creditors; or who has been arrested and held in custody under or by virtue of mesne process or execution, issued out of any court <sup>24</sup> of any State, district, or Territory, within which such debtor resides or has property founded upon a demand in its nature provable against a bankrupt's estate under this act, and for a sum exceeding one hundred dollars, and such process is remaining in force and not discharged by payment, or in any other manner provided by the law <sup>24</sup> of such State, district, or Territory applicable thereto, for a period of <sup>25</sup> seven days; or has been actually imprisoned for more than <sup>25</sup> seven days in a civil action, founded on contract, for the sum of one hundred dollars or upwards; or who, being bankrupt or insolvent, or in contemplation of bankruptcy or insolvency, shall make any payment, gift, grant, sale, conveyance, or transfer of money or other property, estate, rights, or credits, <sup>26</sup> or give any warrant to confess judgment; or procure or suffer his property to be taken on legal process, with intent to give a preference to one or more of his creditors, or to any person or persons who are or may be liable for him as indorsers, bail, sureties, or otherwise, or with the intent, by such disposition of his property, to defeat or delay the operation of this act; <sup>27</sup> or who, being a banker, <sup>28</sup> merchant, or trader, has

26—Section 12 of the act of 1874 here adds the words "or confess judgment."

27—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 180, § 12), amends this section by inserting the following in lieu of the balance of this paragraph: "Or who being a bank, banker, broker, merchant, trader, manufacturer, or miner, has fraudulently stopped payment, or who, being a bank, banker, broker, merchant, trader, manufacturer, or miner, has stopped or suspended and not resumed payment, within a period of forty days, of his commercial paper (made or passed in the course of his business as such), or who, being a bank or banker, shall fail for forty days to pay any depositor upon demand of payment lawfully made, shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy, and, subject to the conditions herein-after prescribed, shall be adjudged a bankrupt on the petition of one or more of his creditors, who shall constitute one-fourth thereof, at least, in number, and the aggregate of whose debts provable under this act amounts to at least one-third of the debts so provable: Provided, That such petition is brought within six months after such act of bankruptcy shall have been committed." [The act of July fraudulently stopped or suspended and not resumed payment of his commercial paper, within a period of fourteen days, shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy, and, subject to the conditions herein-after prescribed, shall be adjudged a bankrupt, on the petition of one or more of his creditors, the aggregate of whose debts provable under this act amount to at least two hundred and fifty dollars, provided such petition is brought within six months after the act of bankruptcy shall have been committed. And if such person shall be adjudged a bankrupt, the assignee may recover back the money or other property so paid, conveyed, sold, assigned, or transferred contrary to this act, provided the person receiving such payment or conveyance had reasonable cause to believe that a fraud on this act was intended, or <sup>29</sup> that the debtor was insolvent, and such creditor shall not be allowed to prove his debt in bankruptcy.

26, 1876 (19 St. L. 102), here inserts a provision to the effect that an assignment made by a debtor of all his property, in good faith, for the benefit of his creditors, without creating a preference and valid under the state laws, shall not be a bar to the discharge of such debtor.] "And the provisions of this section shall apply to all cases of compulsory or involuntary bankruptcy commenced since the first day of December, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, as well as to those commenced hereafter. And in all cases commenced since the first day of December, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, and prior to the passage of this act, as well as those commenced hereafter, the court shall, if such allegation as to the number or amount of petitioning creditors be denied by the debtor, by a statement in writing to that effect, require him to file in court forthwith a full list of his creditors, with their places of residence and the sums due them respectively, and shall ascertain, upon reasonable notice to the creditors, whether one-fourth in number and one-third in amount thereof, as aforesaid, have petitioned that the debtor be adjudged a bankrupt. But if such debtor shall, on the filing of the petition, admit in writing that the requisite number and amount of creditors have petitioned, the court (if satisfied that the admission was made in good faith) shall so adjudge, which judgment shall be final, and the matter proceed without further steps on that subject. And if it shall appear that such number and amount have not so petitioned, the court shall grant reasonable time, not exceeding, in cases heretofore commenced, twenty days, and, in cases hereafter commenced, ten days, within which other creditors may join in such petition. And if, at the expiration of such time so limited, the number and amount shall comply with the requirements of this section, the matter of bankruptcy may proceed; but if, at the expiration of such limited time, such number and amount shall not answer the requirements of this section, the proceedings shall be dismissed, and, in cases hereafter commenced, with costs. And if such person shall be adjudged a bankrupt, the assignee may recover back the money or property so paid, conveyed, sold, assigned, or transferred contrary to this act: Provided, That the person receiving such payment or conveyance had reasonable cause to believe that the debtor was insolvent, and knew that a fraud on this act was intended; and such person, if a creditor, shall not, in cases of actual fraud on his part, be allowed to prove for more than a moiety of his debt; and this limitation on the proof of debts shall apply to cases of voluntary as well as involuntary bankruptcy. And the petition of creditors under this section may be sufficiently verified by the oaths of the first five signers thereof, if so many there be. And if any of said first five signers shall not reside in the district in which such petition is to be filed, the same may be signed and verified by the oath or oaths of the attorney or attorneys, agent or agents, of such signers. And in computing the number of creditors, as aforesaid, who shall join in such petition, creditors whose respective debts do not exceed two hundred and fifty dollars shall not be reckoned. But if there be no creditors whose debts exceed said sum of two hundred and fifty dollars, or if the requisite number of creditors holding debts exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars fail to sign the petition, the creditors having debts of a less amount shall be reckoned for the purposes aforesaid."

28—The act of July 14, 1870 (16 St. L. 276, § 2), amends this clause by adding the words "broker, manufacturer or miner."

29—By the act of July 27, 1868 (15 St. L. 228, § 2), this word "or" is changed to "and."

SEC. 40.<sup>1</sup> And be it further enacted, That upon the filing of the petition authorized by the next preceding section, if it shall appear that sufficient grounds exist therefor, the court shall direct the entry of an order requiring the debtor to appear and show cause, at a court of bankruptcy to be holden at a time to be specified in the order, not less than five days from the service thereof, why the prayer of the petition should not be granted; and may also, by its injunctions, restrain the debtor, and any other person, in the meantime, from making any transfer or disposition of any part of the debtor's property not excepted by this act from the operation thereof and from any interference therewith; and if it shall appear that there is probable cause for believing that the debtor is about to leave the district, or to remove or conceal his goods and chattels or his evidence of property, or make any fraudulent conveyance or disposition thereof, the court may issue a warrant to the marshal of the district, commanding him to arrest the alleged [bankrupt] and him safely keep, unless he shall give bail to the satisfaction of the court for his appearance from time to time, as required by the court, until the decision of the court upon the petition or the further order of the court, and forthwith to take possession provisionally of all the property and effects of the debtor, and safely keep the same until the further order of the court. A copy of the petition and of such order to show cause shall be served on such debtor by delivering the same to him personally, or leaving the same at his last or usual place of abode; or, if such debtor cannot be found, or his place of residence ascertained, service shall be made by publication in such manner as the judge may direct. No further proceedings, unless the debtor appear and consent thereto, shall be had until proof shall have been given, to the satisfaction of the court, of such service or publication; and if such proof be not given on the return day of such order, the proceedings shall be adjourned and an order made that the notice be forthwith so served or published.<sup>2</sup>

SEC. 41. And be it further enacted, That on such return day or adjourned day, if the notice has been fully served or published, or shall be waived by the appearance and consent of the debtor, the court shall proceed summarily to hear the allegations of the petitioner and debtor, and may adjourn the proceedings from time to time, on good cause shown, and shall, if the debtor on the same day so demand in writing, order a trial by jury at the first term of the court at which a jury shall be in attendance, to ascertain the fact of such alleged bankruptcy;<sup>31</sup> and if upon

30—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 182, § 13), amends this section by adding at the end thereof the following words: "And if, on the return-day of the order to show cause as aforesaid, the court shall be satisfied that the requirement of section thirty-nine of said act as to the number and amount of petitioning creditors has been complied with, or if, within the time provided for in section thirty-nine of this act, creditors sufficient in number and amount shall sign such petition so as to make a total of one-fourth in number of the creditors and one-third in the amount of the provable debts against the bankrupt, as provided in said section, the court shall so adjudge, which judgment shall be final; otherwise it shall dismiss the proceedings, and, in cases hereafter commenced, with costs."

31—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 182, § 14), amends this section by striking out all of said section after the word "bankruptcy" and inserting the words, "Or, at the election of the debtor, the court may, in its discretion, award a venire facias to the marshal of the district, returnable within ten days before him for the trial of the facts set forth in his petition, at which time the trial shall be had, unless adjourned for cause. And unless, upon such hearing or trial, it shall appear to the satisfaction of said court, such hearing or trial, the debtor proves to the satisfaction of the court or of the jury, as the case may be, that the facts set forth in the petition are not true, or that the debtor has paid and satisfied all liens upon his property, in case the existence of such liens were the sole ground of the proceeding, the proceedings shall be dismissed and the respondent shall recover costs.

SEC. 42. And be it further enacted, That if the facts set forth in the petition are found to be true, or if default be made by the debtor to appear pursuant to the order, upon due proof of service thereof being made, the court shall adjudge the debtor to be a bankrupt, and, as such, subject to the provisions of this act, and shall forthwith issue a warrant to take possession of the estate of the debtor. The warrant shall be directed, and the property of the debtor shall be taken thereon, and shall be assigned and distributed in the same manner and with similar proceedings to those hereinbefore provided for the taking possession, assignment, and distribution of the property of the debtor upon his own petition. The order of adjudication of bankruptcy shall require the bankrupt forthwith, or within such number of days, not exceeding five after the date of the order or notice thereof, as shall by the order be prescribed, to make and deliver, or transmit by mail, post-paid, to the messenger, a schedule of the creditors and an inventory<sup>32</sup> of his estate in the form and verified in the manner required of a petitioning debtor by section<sup>33</sup> thirteen. If the debtor has failed to appear in person, or by attorney, a certified copy of the adjudication shall be forthwith served on him by delivery or publication in the manner hereinbefore provided for the service of the order to show cause; and if the bankrupt is absent or cannot be found, such schedule and inventory shall be prepared by the messenger and the assignee from the best information they can obtain. If the petitioning creditor shall not appear and proceed on the return day, or adjourned day, the court may, upon the petition of any other creditor, to the required amount, proceed to adjudicate on such petition, without requiring a new service or publication of notice to the debtor.

OF SUPERSEDING THE BANKRUPT PROCEEDINGS BY ARRANGEMENT

SEC. 43. And be it further enacted, That if at the first meeting of creditors, or at any meeting of creditors to be specially called for that purpose, and of which previous notice shall have been given for such length of time and in such manner as the court may direct, three fourths in value or of the jury, as the case may be, that the facts set forth in said petition are true, or if it shall appear that the debtor has paid and satisfied all liens upon his property, in case the existence of such liens was the sole ground of the proceeding, the proceeding shall be dismissed, and the respondent shall recover costs; and all proceedings in bankruptcy may be discontinued on reasonable notice and hearing, with the approval of the court, and upon the assent, in writing, of such debtor, and not less than one-half of his creditors in number and amount; or, in case all the creditors and such debtor assent thereto, such discontinuance shall be ordered and entered; and all parties shall be remitted, in either case, to the same rights and duties existing at the date of the filing of the petition for bankruptcy, except so far as such estate shall have been already administered and disposed of. And the court shall have power to make all needful orders and decrees to carry the foregoing provision into effect."

32—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 182, § 15), adds the words "and valuation," after the word "inventory."

of the creditors whose claims have been proved shall determine and resolve that it is for the interest of the general body of the creditors that the estate of the bankrupt should be wound up and settled, and distribution made among the creditors by trustees, under the inspection and direction of a committee of the creditors, it shall be lawful for the creditors to certify and report such resolution to the court, and to nominate one or more trustees to take and hold and distribute the estate, under the direction of such committee. If it shall appear to the court, after hearing the bankrupt and such creditors as may desire to be heard, that the resolution was duly passed, and that the interests of the creditors will be promoted thereby, it shall confirm the same; and upon the execution and filing, by or on behalf of three fourths in value of all the creditors whose claims have been proved, of a consent that the estate of the bankrupt be wound up and settled by said trustees according to the terms of such resolution, the bankrupt, or his assignee in bankruptcy, if appointed, as the case may be, shall, under the direction of the court, and under oath, convey, transfer, and deliver all the property and estate of the bankrupt to the said trustee or trustees, who shall, upon such conveyance and transfer, have and hold the same in the same manner, and with the same powers and rights, in all respects, as the bankrupt would have had or held the same if no proceedings in bankruptcy had been taken, or as the assignee in bankruptcy would have done had such resolution not been passed; and such consent and the proceedings thereunder shall be as binding in all respects on any creditor whose debt is provable, who has not signed the same, as if he had signed it, and on any creditor whose debt, if provable, is not proved, as if he had proved it; and the court, by order, shall direct all acts and things needful to be done to carry into effect such resolution of the creditors, and the said trustees shall proceed to wind up and settle the estate under the direction and inspection of such committee of the creditors, for the equal benefit of all such creditors, and the winding up and settlement of any estate under the provisions of this section shall be deemed to be proceedings in bankruptcy under this act; and the said trustees shall have all the rights and powers of assignees in bankruptcy. The court, on the application of such trustees, shall have power to summon and examine, or [on] oath or otherwise, the bankrupt and any creditor, and any person indebted to the estate, or known or suspected of having any of the estate in his possession, or any other person whose examination may be material or necessary to aid the trustees in the execution of their trust, and to compel the attendance of such persons and the production of books and papers in the same manner as in other proceedings in bankruptcy under this act; and the bankrupt shall have the like right to apply for and obtain a discharge after the passage of such resolution and the appointment of such trustees as if such resolution had not been passed, and as if all the proceedings had continued in the manner provided in the preceding sections of this act. If the resolution shall not be duly reported, or the consent of the creditors shall not be duly filed, or if, upon its filing, the court shall not think fit to approve thereof, the bankruptcy shall proceed as though no resolution had been passed, and the court may make all necessary orders for resuming the proceedings. And the period of time which shall have elapsed between the date of the resolution and the date of the order for assuming proceedings shall not be reckoned in calculating periods of time prescribed by this act.<sup>34</sup>

34—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 182, § 17), here adds the following provisions: That in all cases of bankruptcy now pending, or to be hereafter pending, by or against any person, whether an adjudication in bankruptcy shall have been had or not, the creditors of such alleged bankrupt may, at a meeting called under the direction of the court, and upon not less than ten days' notice to each known creditor of the time, place and purpose of such meeting, such notice to be personal or otherwise, as the court may direct, resolve that a composition proposed by the debtor shall be accepted in satisfaction of the debts due to them from the debtor. And such resolution shall, to be operative, have been passed by a majority in number and three-fourths in value of the creditors of the debtor assembled at such meeting either in person or by proxy, and shall be confirmed by the signatures thereto of the debtor and two-thirds in number and one-half in value of all the creditors of the debtor. And in calculating a majority for the purposes of a composition under this section, creditors whose debts amount to sums not exceeding $50 shall be reckoned in the majority in value, but not in the majority in number; and the value of the debts of secured creditors above the amount of such security, to be determined by the court, shall, as nearly as circumstances admit, be estimated in the same way. And creditors whose debts are fully secured shall not be entitled to vote upon or sign such resolution without first relinquishing such security for the benefit of the estate.

The debtor, unless prevented by sickness or other cause satisfactory to such meeting, shall be present at the same, and shall answer any inquiries made of him; and he, or, if he is so prevented from being at such meeting, some one in his behalf, shall produce to the meeting a statement showing the whole of his assets and debts, and the names and addresses of the creditors to whom such debts respectively are due.

Such resolution, together with the statement of the debtor as to his assets and debts, shall be presented to the court; and the court shall, upon notice to all the creditors of the debtor of not less than five days, and upon hearing, inquire whether such resolution has been passed in the manner directed by this section; and if satisfied that it has been so passed, it shall, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, and upon being satisfied that the same is for the best interest of all concerned, cause such resolution to be recorded and statement of assets and debts to be filed; and until such record and filing shall have taken place, such resolution shall be of no validity. And any creditor of the debtor may inspect such record and statement at all reasonable times.

The creditors may, by resolution passed in the manner and under the circumstances aforesaid, add to, or vary the provisions of, any composition previously accepted by them, without prejudice to any persons taking interests under such provisions who do not assent to such addition or variation. And any such additional resolution shall be presented to the court in the same manner, and proceeded with in the same way, and with the same consequences, as the resolution by which the composition was accepted in the first instance. The provisions of a composition accepted by such resolution in pursuance of this section shall be binding on all the creditors whose names and addresses and the amounts of the debts due to whom are shown in the statement of the debtor produced at the meeting at which the resolution shall have been passed, but shall not affect or prejudice the rights of any other creditors.

Where a debt arises on a bill of exchange or promissory note, if the debtor shall be ignorant of the holder of any such bill of exchange or promissory note, he shall be required to state the amount of such bill or note, the date on which it falls due, the names of the acceptor and of the person to whom it is payable, and any other particulars within his knowledge respecting the same; and the insertion of such particulars shall be deemed a sufficient description by the debtor in respect to such debt.

Any mistake made inadvertently by a debtor in the statement of his debts may be corrected upon reasonable notice, and with the consent of a general meeting of his creditors.

Every such composition shall, subject to priorities declared in said act, provide for a pro rata payment or satisfaction, in money, to the creditors of such debtor in proportion to the amount of their unsecured debts, or their debts in respect to which any such security shall have been duly surrendered and given up.

The provisions of any composition made in pursuance of this section may be enforced by the court, on motion made in a summary manner by any person inter-

PENALTIES AGAINST BANKRUPTS

SEC. 44. And be it further enacted, That from and after the passage of this act if any debtor or bankrupt shall, after the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, secrete or conceal any property belonging to his estate, or part with, conceal, or destroy, alter, mutilate, or falsify, or cause to be concealed, destroyed, altered, mutilated, or falsified, any book, deed, document, or writing relating thereto, or remove, or cause to be removed, the same or any part thereof out of the district, or otherwise dispose of any part thereof, with intent to prevent it from coming into the possession of the assignee in bankruptcy, or to hinder, impede, or delay either or them in recovering or receiving the same, or make any payment, gift, sale, assignment, transfer, or conveyance of any property belonging to his estate with the like intent, or spends any part thereof in gaming; or shall, with intent to defraud, wilfully and fraudulently conceal from his assignee or omit from his schedule any property or effects whatsoever; or if, in case of any person having, to his knowledge or belief, proved a false or fictitious debt against his estate, he shall fail to disclose the same to his assignee within one month after coming to the knowledge or belief thereof; or shall attempt to account for any of his property by fictitious losses or expenses; or shall, within three months before the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, under the false color and pretense of carrying on business and dealing in the ordinary course of trade, obtain on credit from any person any goods or chattels with intent to defraud; or shall, with intent to defraud his creditors, within three months next before the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, pawn, pledge, or dispose of, otherwise than by bona fide transactions in the ordinary way of his trade, any of his goods or chattels which have been obtained on credit and remain unpaid for, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof in any court of the United States, shall be punished by imprisonment, with or without hard labor, for a term not exceeding three years.

PENALTIES AGAINST OFFICERS

SEC. 45. And be it further enacted, That if any judge, register, clerk, marshal, messenger, assignee, or any other officer of the several courts of bankruptcy shall, for anything done or pretended to be done under this act, or under color of doing anything thereunder, wilfully demand or take, or appoint or allow any person whatever to take for him or on his account, or for or on account of any other person, or in trust for him or ested, and on reasonable notice; and any disobedience of the order of the court made on such motion shall be deemed to be a contempt of court. Rules and regulations of court may be made in relation to proceedings of composition herein provided for in the same manner and to the same extent as now provided by law in relation to proceedings in bankruptcy.

If it shall at any time appear to the court, on notice, satisfactory evidence and hearing, that a composition under this section cannot, in consequence of legal difficulties, or for any sufficient cause, proceed without injustice or undue delay to the creditors or to the debtor, the court may refuse to accept and confirm such composition, or may set the same aside; and, in either case, the debtor shall be proceeded with as a bankrupt in conformity with the provisions of law, and proceedings may be had accordingly; and the time during which such composition shall have been in force shall not, in such case, be computed in calculating periods of time prescribed by said act.

for any other person, any fee, emolument, gratuity, sum of money, or anything of value whatever, other than is allowed by this act, or which shall be allowed under the authority thereof, such person, when convicted thereof, shall forfeit and pay the sum of not less than three hundred dollars and not exceeding five hundred dollars, and be imprisoned not exceeding three years.

SEC. 46. And be it further enacted, That if any person shall forge the signature of a judge, register, or other officer of the court, or shall forge or counterfeit the seal of the courts, or knowingly concur in using any such forged or counterfeit signature or seal for the purpose of authenticating any proceeding or document, or shall tender in evidence any such proceeding or document with a false or counterfeit signature of any such judge, register, or other officer, or a false or counterfeit seal of the court, subscribed or attached thereto, knowing such signature or seal to be false or counterfeit, any such person shall be guilty of felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be liable to a fine of not less than five hundred dollars, and not more than five thousand dollars, and to be imprisoned not exceeding five years, at the discretion of the court.

FEES AND COSTS

SEC. 47.<sup>35</sup> And be it further enacted, That in each case there shall be allowed and paid, in addition to the fees of the clerk of the court as now established by law, or as may be established by general order, under the provisions of this act, for fees in bankruptcy, the following fees, which shall be applied to the payment for the services of the registers:—

For issuing every warrant, two dollars.

For each day in which a meeting is held, three dollars.

For each order for a dividend, three dollars.

For every order substituting an arrangement by trust deed for bankruptcy, two dollars.

For every bond with sureties, two dollars.

For every application for any meeting in any matter under this act, one dollar.

For every day's service while actually employed under a special order of the court, a sum not exceeding five dollars, to be allowed by the court.

For taking depositions the fees now allowed by law.

For every discharge when there is no opposition, two dollars.

Such fees shall have priority of payment over all other claims out of 35—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 184, § 18), makes the following amendment of this section: "That from and after the passage of this act the fees, commissions, charges, and allowances, excepting actual and necessary disbursements, of, and to be made by the officers, agents, marshals, messengers, assignees, and registers in cases of bankruptcy, shall be reduced to one-half of the fees, commissions, charges, and allowances heretofore provided for or made in like cases: Provided, That the preceding provision shall be and remain in force until the justices of the Supreme Court of the United States shall make and promulgate new rules and regulations in respect to the matters aforesaid, under the powers conferred upon them by sections ten and forty-seven of said act, and no longer, which duties they shall perform, as soon as may be. And said justices shall have power under said sections, by general regulations, to simplify and, so far as in their judgment will conduce to the benefit of creditors, to consolidate the duties of the register, assignee, marshal, and clerk, and to reduce fees, costs, and charges, to the end that prolixity, delay, and unnecessary expense may be avoided."

the estate, and, before a warrant issues, the petitioner shall deposit<sup>36</sup> with the senior register of the court, or with the clerk, to be delivered to the register, fifty dollars as security for the payment thereof; and if there are not sufficient assets for the payment of the fees, the person upon whose petition the warrant is issued, shall pay the same, and the court may issue an execution against him to compel payment to the register.

Before any dividend is ordered, the assignee shall pay out of the estate to the messenger the following fees, and no more:—

First. For service of warrant, two dollars.

Second. For all necessary travel, at the rate of five cents a mile each way.

Third. For each written note to creditor named in the schedule, ten cents.

Fourth. For custody of property, publication of notices, and other services, his actual and necessary expenses upon returning the same in specific items, and making oath that they have been actually incurred and paid by him, and are just and reasonable, the same to be taxed or adjusted by the court, and the oath of the messenger shall not be conclusive as to the necessity of said expenses.

For cause shown, and upon hearing thereon, such further allowance may be made as the court, in its discretion, may determine.

The enumeration of the foregoing fees shall not prevent the judges, who shall frame general rules and orders in accordance with the provisions of section ten, from prescribing a tariff of fees for all other services of the officers of courts of bankruptcy, or from reducing the fees prescribed in this section in classes of cases to be named in their rules and orders.

OF MEANING OF TERMS AND COMPUTATION OF TIME

SEC. 48. And be it further enacted, That the word “assignee” and the word “creditor” shall include the plural also; and the word “messenger” shall include his assistant or assistants, except in the provision for the fees of that officer. The word “marshal” shall include the marshal’s deputies; the word “person” shall also include “corporation”; and the word “oath” shall include “affirmation.” And in all cases in which any particular number of days is prescribed by this act, or shall be mentioned in any rule or order of court or general order which shall at any time be made under this act, for the doing of any act, or for any other purpose, the same shall be reckoned, in the absence of any expression to the contrary, exclusive of the first, and inclusive of the last day, unless the last day shall fall on a Sunday, Christmas day, or on any day appointed by the President of the United States as a day of public fast or thanksgiving, or on the fourth of July, in which case the time shall be reckoned exclusive of that day also.

SEC. 49. And be it further enacted, That all the jurisdiction, power, and authority conferred upon and vested in the District Court of the United States by this act in cases in bankruptcy are hereby conferred upon and vested in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and in and upon the <sup>37</sup> supreme courts of the several Territories of the United States,<sup>38</sup> when the bankrupt resides in the said District of Columbia or in either of the said Territories. And in those judicial districts which are not within any organized circuit of the United States, the power and jurisdiction of a circuit court in bankruptcy may be exercised by the district judge.

SEC. 50. And be it further enacted, That this act shall commence and take effect as to the appointment of the officers created hereby, and the promulgation of rules and general orders, from and after the date of its approval: Provided, That no petition or other proceeding under this act shall be filed, received, or commenced before the first day of June, Anno Domini, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

Approved, March 2, 1867.

37—The act of June 22, 1874 (18 St. L. 182, § 16), amends this section by substituting the words "District Court" in lieu of "Supreme Courts."

38—Section 16 of the above act of 1874 inserts here the words "subject to the general superintendence and jurisdiction conferred upon circuit courts by section two of said act."
